After a two-day battle with gun harpoons and lances, fishermen brought the monster ashore today. It was thirty-five feet long and had a girth of twenty-five feet, and with a tail ning feet across, it had flippers but no fins. Nobody there has been able to identify it yet.

Wrong Name Used In Lines Under Cut

In the cutlines underneath two pictures of rink scenes in yesterday appearing in yesterday's issue the name of Dominion Textiles Limited was used in error by Central Press Canadian which supplied the picture service used. The Dominion Textiles Limited has no plants in operation in the town. The name of the plant near which the scene took place should have been given as Dominion Woollens Limited.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A High School Triangle

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm very much in love with a boy who likes a girl friend of mine. She doesn't care for him in the least, but goes with him for something to do. I've been told you disapprove of "running after others." This boy is very friendly to me, but that is all.

Other girls go places and have good times, while I stay home, to my girl friend takes the only boy I care for.

Unhappy.

If you can't go places with the boy you want, because he is monopolized by a girl who takes him as a convenient escort, please stop allowing at home mentioned and go out with some other boy. It's highly probable that, as you youngsters all belong to the same crowd, you will meet the boy you like, and he may switch partners.

I've just had a letter from a high school girl who is in the same boat in which you find yourself. Her best friend has practically kidnapped the boy she likes, and she thinks it would not be honorable to try to get him back.

Time marches on, and you high school youngsters had better take advantage of your youth and go in for "good clean fun", instead of whining 'round on skits in this fashion. None of you is engaged; you are free to go where you please.

The Farmer Man Sees a Lot of Life

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I manage a garage and naturally see a lot of life. Late parties, drinking ladies and gentlemen here carrying thermos bottles full of cocktails, and taking swigs while they're waiting for oil and gas.

My wife's a good woman, but it got me to thinking maybe some-thing like that was going on at home. So I shut up the garage a half hour earlier than closing time one night and came in unexpectedly. She had put the children to sleep and was reading a book. I felt good and ashamed of myself, but the trouble is the hose, is thinking of firing me for 'quitting a half hour too soon. Had I better tell him why I was off duty?

Garage Man

If the boss has a sense of humor, better tell him that a sudden pang of jealousy started you locking up a half hour early in the evening, with the idea of surprising your wife. If he has a sense of justice, he'll realize you became a victim of these dismal suspicions in working hours, and let you off.

If you're not fired, I think it's up to you to do something decent for your wife.

The Man Walks on the Outside When With Two Girls

Dear Miss Fairfax:

To settle an argument between my boy friend, my girl friends and myself, will you be good enough to answer this question: When two girls and a boy are out walking, does the boy walk in the middle or outside? I say he walks on the outside. Someone told me that the favorite girls walks next to him; is that so?

S.M.

You're right about the boy walking on the outside when he's with two girls. But it would be a little difficult for him to be favorite girl, for that matter, to walk next to each other. It would depend on how they came out of the house, whether he had to step aside for someone else, and that sculling is managed unless he chatted the roll which, as you see, would be out of the question.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Widow's Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have to write a number of business letters, and I have always signed my name as follows:

(Mrs. Henry A. Sommers)

Mrs. Henry A. Sommers

He says he will abide by your decision, as we both feel we are correct. It is all on a friendly basis—you know how it is when one's son goes to college.

S.

Yes, I know how it is when those family discussions crop up in the midst of social details. And all social matters are so significant that it is important for us to think about them. None of us wants to make a social error . . . it's bad for our morale, whether or not we are self-confident enough to admit it. Don't you agree?

But how about your signature to business letters? Do you mind if I tell you, as gently as possible, that the form of signature Mrs. Lillian W. Sommers is never correct. Even if your husband went for it big, this form would be incorrect, for a widow signs her name in exactly the same way she did when her husband was living.

A letter, any letter, is written in the first person; therefore a signature, a direct signature, should be in the informal form. But a business letter also needs a formal address attached to the direct signature, for identification and for use on the envelope of the answer to the letter. Therefore, the correct signature of your business letters is:

Very truly yours,

(Mrs.) Lillian Wells Sommers

(Mrs. Henry Sommers)

You may, if you wish, omit the surname of your maiden name (I've used Wells here), or you may use the initial W., but it is far better form to write the maiden-surname in full.

Toasts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When a toast is given in your honor, what do you say?

2—At a birthday party and the guests sing "Happy Birthday" to you, what should the person who's birthday it is say?

3—If you were to visit a friend, who would not be staying, graduating from a profession, for instance, a month, would you congratulate him if you knew him very, very slightly? What should you say?

1—To acknowledge a toast, all you have to do is to smile at the toast proposer, look pleasantest smile and say your most gracious "Thank you". You may, if you wish, add something like this, "How very kind that was of you . . . I thank you, with all my heart for those beautiful words. I don't deserve to have you say such grand things . . . but I love having you say them, nevertheless."

2—The acknowledge this always-so-gala song, you also smile your most gracious "Thank you". But then the birthday-er usually adds some charming words of appreciation to the guests for "having made me so happy by coming to my birthday party, and therefore making it such a memory-making birthday."

3—Yes, it would be polite and natural for you to say something of congratulation to this professional man. For instance, "Even of it's a bit late, may I say my hearty sincere congratulations to you about your graduation . . . and may I say also my most friendly and sincere good wishes for your happiness and success in your fine profession?"

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Diet, Care Helps Keep Face Clear

Veda Ann Berg

Diet and care keep her complexion beautiful

(BY HELEN FOLLETT)

To correct enlarged pores, use cold water freely. It causes a contraction of the tiny fibres under the skin. It starts blood streaming on a gallop and has beneficial effects in other ways.

Don't forget that diet plays a large part in the treatment of the skin. Beautifying foods are vegetables, fruits and green salads; however, one must include meat, fish and cereals to have a balanced diet.

Heavy, oily powders must be avoided if the skin is of coarse texture; rouge should be used sparingly. Not that rouge has a bad effect upon the texture of the skin dermally coal, but it shows up unplain when pores are large.

The white of an egg has astringent virtues. Beat slightly, spread it on a clean skin surface and let it remain until the face feels starched and drawn. Remove with tepid water and tap on a light cream.

All eye shadows should be put on lightly to be attractive. A keen eye and a deft hand are necessary for a glamorous effect.

Blend in the shadow with the finger tips. Avoid a distinct border line. Keep a small powder puff for the purpose of dimming shadows. And always remove the coloring for evening. Daylight plays havoc with a woman's face when lids are smeared with blue or brown pigment.

Have you ever heard of an eyelash curler? It's a cute little thing; it can be bought in almost any beauty shop.

It doesn't have to be heated. It is a tabloid curling iron. It stretches the silky threads and gives them a tilt that remains for several hours.

Wall Flower Woes Can Be Cured

Here's How One Girl Rescued Her Sister From Lonesome Life

By Lisa Grenelle

Daphne wrote her older sister at Oxford: "I hope there is a heaven for 'pills', because I'm unhappy enough on earth."

And older sister, Louise, being a creature of both heart and understanding, did not forget, bolitle or "harp" upon the pathetic message. Instead, she contacted with an understanding Oxford lad, explained the situation to him and showed him Daphne's letter and her picture. The picture being pretty, the letter touched the boy, who was just enough older and, having passed through the "hard-boiled" age, was sentimental and chivalrous. He blushed and agreed to write Daphne once a week for a while.

Louise wrote Daphne, mentioning the boy casually. "He liked your picture," she wrote. "Seemed really impressed—waited to know where you got it."

A week later Daphne received her first letter from the Oxford lad. It was nice, long, not "mushy"; but it was romantic. She couldn't be so unattractive after all, she reflected.

She answered the beau's letter in a careful hand, and she no longer felt inferior to the other girls, who had only the boys they lagged round after them.

Manner Changed

After the second letter, Daphne's whole manner changed. She adopted the world with a new, confident step. Indifferent and just a little scornful of the long epistles supported as she was by the knowledge of her admirer over by the sea, she began receiving attentions which she now accepted as her right.

There is nothing that so impresses the opposite sex as an air of cheerful indifference, a certain independence, a leaving-it-up-to-you-to-be-entertaining attitude.

But it all would never have happened except for Sister Louise and the Oxford lad.

By the time the Oxford beau's letters began to drop off, Daphne had so much fortunately, going on beau that she would hardly have had the time to read his letters anyhow. "This is a true story," I have changed nothing but the names.

The old-fashioned idea that a girl should be allowed to go through "pildom" and find her way out of her agony, just as she goes through measles, is fortunately going out of style. We know it isn't safe for any child to acquire such a sense of inferiority as Daphne had.

There are various ways to end "pildom". The above method is only one. Three boys (bribe them if you must, but bribe only those who can be trusted not to tell) can make a girl popular at a dance. Among them, by continuous coaching in, they can give the impression that the girl is a belle. Others will then dance with her, her confidence will grow, and at the next dance her good time will be guaranteed.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

ONCE IN A WHILE it is nice to slay "dressy" in the most charming negligee. A nice choice would be a model made of the smartest kinds of georgette alternated with bands of chiffon, both in smoky pink. Sash and cornucopia collar are of pink satin.

FLOWERS BLOOM on the nicest evening frocks. A beauty is in single-petalled chiffon with dainties trim of sinnias in velvet. Zinnias also border the hemline and edge the matching bolero.

GLITTER AGAIN marks some of the smartest evening frocks. A model in white moire has the decollelage bordered with bands of silver paillettes. Silver paillette bands are used for the inset bell, which fastens with a bowknot, and for the hemline.

MATRE it is early to be talking of furs, but the smart imports are already showing them. Vienna comes a lovely cape of fine Russian Sealskin with back of silver fox at either side to simulate broad sleeves. The cape closes with two fox heads.

COUNTRY CLUB dances are just the place for simple but smart bad so many of them are. A good number is a dress of black silk muslin with a broad hem of black eyelet embroidery. The brief bolero with perky sleeves is also of the eyelet embroidery.

SEND ORGANIZER TO CONFERENCE

Strikers Pin Hopes, Settlement Will be Affected at Parley

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 13. — (CP)—The 500 textile workers remaining on strike here today pinned their hopes of settlement on a conference called by Premier Hepburn for Monday in Toronto. They decided to send their chairman, Michael English, who was one of the 13 arrested in Tuesday's rioting, to the meeting. English subsequently was released on bail.

The conference will seek some basis of settlement of both the Peterborough walkout and that in Cornwall. It will, according to an announcement made in Toronto yesterday by Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, be apart from the Ontario Industrial Labor Board's inquiry to determine a fair minimum wage for men in the textile industry.

Mayor George A. MacDonald, who has been active in trying to arbitrate the local dispute, said last night he also expects to attend the Premier's conference. Strike leaders will sit down with company executives under Premier Hepburn to attempt a settlement.

Organizer Freed

Meanwhile, Organizer Alex Welch was free on $5,000 bail put up by Thomas T. J. Murray, president of the Local Trades and Labor Council. He and the others accused of assault or obstruction charges are to appear in court again next week.

The strikers decided to press for Union recognition at the Toronto conference. Workers in both the Auburn and Rosner-Worth plants are signed up with the United Textile Workers of America. It was this organization which called the strike for higher wages seven weeks ago.

One-third of the workers— about 250—returned to work when the plants were re-opened Tuesday and partial operation has been restored. Outside of jeering and catcalls, strikers and sympathizers have offered no resistance to the returning workers since the Tuesday morning disturbances.

FRACTURES ANKLE

Chicago Cubs, leaders of the National league, were dealt a severe blow when they lost the services of their star first baseman, "Rip" Collins. He will be out of the game for at least a month due to a fractured left ankle which he sustained in the first inning of a game with Pittsburg Pirates. Loss of Collins, a powerful hitter and clever fielder, will take a lot of punch out of the Cubs attack as they head into the home stretch.

THE FALL CAN'T BE FAR AWAY

Within the next few weeks, scenes such as this will be a frequent sight on the gridiron as the teams commence training for the 1937 season. Rugby brings the thought of fall and chilly days, when you sit in the stands watching a game with a robe wrapped around you. Both in eastern and western Canada the gridiron squads will soon begin to round into shape and line plays such as this one are typical of training practice on any rugby field. Incidentally, this picture was taken recently in Los Angeles, Calif., as one of the professional teams on the Pacific coast prepared for the forthcoming season.

Pirates and the Boston Bees Have Indian Sign on Cubs And Giants in National Race

Pittsburg Defeats Cubs And Giants Loop to Boston

YANKEES SPLIT

Cardinals Climbing and Now Only 2 1-2 Games Behind Giants

By SID FEDER

It's lucky for the National League that Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Bees know something about vaudeville.

From that extinct brand of entertainment, the Bees and Pirates have borrowed the "stooge" idea, and, giving it a little different twist, have put the Indian sign on Chicago's National League leading Cubs and the second place New York Giants, respectively.

For picking on these two outfits as their favorite stooges, the Bees and Bees ought to be voted a world series exit by whatever team wins the pennant—provided, of course, it's neither the Cubs nor Giants.

A slogan, for the benefit of those who can't remember as far back as vaudeville, was the foil or butt for a comedian's jokes. Neither the Pirates nor Bees have any great reputations as comedians. But they're certainly having a great joke at the expense of the Cubs and Giants so far this year.

Always Up On Cubs.

The Pirates fell apart at the moment mention of the Giants, and barely managed to hold their end up against such rank outsiders as the Bees. Dodgers and Yanks. But whenever they tangle with the Cubs, they usually wind up in the driver's seat. Yesterday they came through with their eighth decision in fourteen starts against the Cubs this year by knocking the Cubs off four flingers for a 16-6 victory.

The Bees, on the other hand, collapses at the sight of almost every outfit in the league, until they meet the Giants. Then they're the bunk. They followed this Gromek pitching day with a 6-4 victory by virtue of Tony Cuccinello's big bat, and stretched their season margin over the Giants to seven wins in twelve starts.

At a result, while the Yankees are increasing along on a 11½-game lead in the American League, the Cubs' edge isn't nearly so secure at 6½ games in the rival circuit, and the Giants are limping in second place by only 2½ games as they come home backing Cardinals.

No Jinx For Yanks.

There's no such one-club jinx where the Yanks are concerned in their American League runaway. They made it three out of four in their current series of the Red Sox yesterday by splitting a twin bill, winning the nightcap 5-3 as Joe DiMaggio walloped his 31st homer, after dropping the opener 16-10 as seven pitchers took a turn at beating. The series victory upheld the Yanks reputation of having lost only one series against a second-place club in the last two seasons.

The Phillies came within half a game of climbing out of the National League cellar with a twin win over the Dodgers, 7-2 and 8-3, behind some effective pitching by Hugh Mulcahy and Claude Passeau. The Cardinals and Reds were idle.

Detroit's Tigers managed only a split with the White Sox, winning the opener 11-8 on Charley Gehringer's big bat, and dropping the nightcap 6-4 in ten innings as Jimmy Dykes' pinch-hit three-run homer came across. The Senators squeezed out a 5-4 decision over the Athletics, while Hudlin blanked the Browns 7-0 for a Cleveland victory.

SHIRLEY HANOVER SURPRISE WINNER OF HAMBLETONIAN

Turned in Two Fastest Miles Ever Recorded in Stake

By ORLO ROBERTSON

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP).—Records show that Henry Thomas won the Hambletonian with Shirley Hanover, but the popular 47-year-old trainer of the Hanover, Pa., shoe farmer says it was five-year-old Patricia Sheppard who was largely responsible for the record-smashing triumph.

While Thomas was driving Shirley to a straight-heat victory in the fastest time ever registered by a winner in trotting's most ribbon event, he carried in his hip pocket a four-leaf clover and letter sent him by the 15-year-daughter of Lawrence B. Sheppard, part owner of the Pennsylvania Breeding Farms.

"Don't let anybody tell you it was I who won," declared Thomas. "Just look at that good luck charm I carried. I couldn't miss with that in my pocket."

Lawrence Sheppard, manager of the farm in which, his father, H. B. Sheppard, and A. B. Hayes also hold an interest, gave much of the credit to Thomas, however.

"He handled Shirley just right to the race in the best of condition and then did a fine job of driving her," said Sheppard.

Two Fast Heats

In trotting the first mile in 2:01¼ and the second in 2:01¾, Shirley set only three seconds slower than ever registered by a winner in 12-heat history and 1½ seconds faster than carried on in the way of her famous mother, Peter Manning, in the latter won the 1930 Hambletonian and later in the same year set her mark of 1:59¼.

The victory, achieved before a crowd of 25,000 after the race had been postponed from Wednesday, was worth $19,912.50 with an additional $500 going to the three persons an nomination of the winner.

Rank Outsider

Shirley Hanover was given little chance in the auction pools where Paul Bowser's Desota of Boston was favored. She commanded no better than 3 to 1 in the betting on the first heat.

Once past the turn in each heat, Thomas said he was confident of victory. He trailed E. Roland Harriman's Farr of Goshen to the three-quarter pole in the first mile and then went on to win by a half length from the Harriman filly. Shirley Hanover and W. W. Reynolds's Schnapps of Winston-Salem N.C.

Farr's Spencerian, owned by Earl F. Shropshire of St. Petersburg, Fla., came home the loser in the three-quarter mark in the final mile but faded before Shirley Hanover to win by four lengths. Desota came up to finish second and place second and third money with Farr, which was fourth in the last dash.

GEO. EARNSHAW WELL SITUATED

Playing Sand Lot Ball in His Own Home Town

Philadelphia, Aug. 13.—(AP)—Big George Earnshaw, who used to breeze them past the batters without much trouble, pitching for Connie Mack's American League pennant-winning Athletics seven years ago, is pitching for a Philadelphia sandlot team this year, but just the same he's pitching.

"I'm perfectly satisfied," the "Big Moose" said. "When I quit the Cardinals at the end of last season there were two things in the back of my mind. First, I wanted to be home with my family. Second, I wanted to be my own boss. Pitching here in Philadelphia satisfies both ambitions."

Earnshaw, a former Washington College Star before he gained prominence with the A's, has won 12 games and lost two on the sandlots to date.

"They used to think I was a strikeout artist," he went on. "Well I guess I still am, fanning an average of 10 to 12 batters a game. That should prove I'm in shape, if my record in the majors didn't."

As for the money angle, Earnshaw said, "I make out better this way, counting my insurance earnings."

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken I. Colling

Today's column is contributed by Gordon Delaney, Freshman of the Belleville Lacrosse Club.—

'Wake Up Belleville' a heading that appeared in a local newspaper recently is very appropriate for 'Belleville the Beautiful' so should we say 'the slumbering city'.

There are many citizens who will resent the above anagrah but who is it that doesn't when it hits home? For the conscientious people please accept our sincere apology but needless to say they will agree with our epitaph.

For years Belleville has been the hot bed of sport whether it be hockey or baseball, but we have rolled along other competitive sports entered the realm of action for the city, and now—we have none.

What is the reason for the lack of interest? A city of this size ought to be able to sponsor a major sport on its own summer, one in the fall, hockey in the winter and basketball during the latter part of the winter, but do the fans send do this—NO, not unless the team is a winner—NO then and until they are in the playdowns. Then and then proven very effectively last winter.

There are many reasons for this first and foremost, we have home-brew players who make themselves heard and are worshipped as heroes on every corner of the city by the school children; secondly, the lack of proper coaching in order to compete against competitive teams; thirdly, the lack of machinery; thirdly, the lack of local employment necessitating daily trains to seek greener fields; and fourthly, the lack of sponsoring bantam and midget groups in the schools during their curriculum so as to enable the children to imitate the heroes they look up to for this reason, and that is players liked to be followed when they leave the city afar in the playdowns. No matter how much a player loves to play there are times when it isn't convenient for them to do so, yet, for they have contracted to play and have annexed a provincial title.

The Percival softball team won the Intermediate O.S.A. championship, and outside of the banquet the Masonic leaders gave them they were not feted by the City of Belleville in its citizens, but, also, instead they slumbered on, not realizing they had new crowned champs in their midst.

In hockey, the the R.C.A.F. and the Belleville Bedmen are the provincial hockey titles and the reception both teams received was similar to the softball situation, the service clubs tendering a banquet but the citizens as a whole neglected to take everything for granted by continuing to slumber on, a far different atmosphere than when the Nationals won the O.S.A.A. title by defeating the Walkerville Chicks in 1928.

Baseball was attempted next but failed miserably to raise interest in Belleville and 'Casey' took the count while the city still slumbered on.

Lacrosse was attempted in this fair city by the bay, and is being buffed from one corner to another, the management took the Air Force players under their wing and decided to play in Trenton, giving Belleville snooze to eternity.

What will become of Belleville in another couple of years—at the rate they are going, sponsoring sports, securing factories, etc.—they will be pushing Bancroft into the next door neighbor, Trenton, will be the drawing centre!

It is now time to have a civic banquet or picnic, honoring those who brought provincial titles, by tendering a testimonial recognition for their ability in softball and hockey. Let us have a drastic—a new deal for more competitive sports—for more advertising, and, last but not least, more factories to enable our sons to become employed at home. Sooner or later, sooner or later, the coach and sponsorship minor sports will naturally follow.

The Belleville Flying Rovers, our local lacrosse team in the Central Ontario Intermediate Lacrosse team in the Central Ontario Intermediate Lacrosse League and who are playing their home games in Trenton, have, after ironing out a few difficulties, been elevated to winning ways. We do not necessarily mean that the Rovers can not be defeated, but today they are so enthused about the game that they can take a loss knowing that they will win the next game handily. Although in third place, a game behind Oshawa, the Rovers are confident of defeating Oshawa in their next meet this Saturday in a straight hold on second place. There are four teams in the playoffs, but like all teams it is only natural that a team likes to choose its opponents and second place retains this coveted position. Unlike most teams the Rovers have got what few teams have and that is to be able to take a beating as well as a win, and although they would sooner meet a weak team first it isn't because Peterboro Auburns cannot be beaten by either the Rovers or Oshawa, but the Rovers would much rather have Oshawa try it first.

The Kiwanis Juniors received their baseball opportunity when they were accepted in the South Hastings Baseball League. True, "Twig" you have several pitchers, but the moral of a winning team, as a rule, depends upon the ability of the starting pitcher. It is doubtful if the Kiwanis will meet any tougher opposition in the league playdowns than the same South Hastings' League teams, however.

There will be plenty of O.A.S.A. play-offs in Belleville for the next few weeks, what with Corbins, Saint Anne, Saint Philips Juniors, Intermediate A, B, and Junior softball competitions. These should ought to go a long ways this year, perhaps win a few provincial titles for Belleville all last year the City Softball League this year has provided keen, and startling opponents and upsets in every game played. That kind of opposition should team the ability to fight until the last man is out, standing hand to hand, man behind and win, a very necessary factor in any kind of competitive sport.

The Flying Rovers, after playing Oshawa last week, on Wednesday, will meet the Peterboro Auburns this week, Friday at Peterboro, Saturday at Trenton, and one of these games and Norwood Flyers Cobras at Belleville will have that coveted position (second place) and the right to meet Norwood Flyers Cobras at Belleville to meet Peterboro (most likely).

If the Rovers are left in third place, the management have decided to play both games with Peterboro in Belleville at the Belleville lacrosse stadium is drawing big crowds despite the calcimine they have applied to all visitors except the Orillia Terriers and a share of Peterboro's receipts will go a long ways to help the locals' deficit which is mounting nearer to the Four Hundred mark.

SIX WRESTLERS TO OFFER WARES

Red Garnor's Title at Stake in Semi-Final Bout

Six wrestlers will enter the ring at the Arena tonight in one of the merriest maddest melanges of pick 'em up and lay 'em down scrap ever seen in a local ring. The boys will cut loose with everything they have except the posts of the ring and the rafters, and engage in what will probably be a cross between the retreat from Moscow, a fishermen's convention and a sit-down strike. It should prove thrilling, exciting and quite careful for local fans.

As a wrestling descant, Ted Fielding, the Lion of the North, will tangle scowls with Billy the Kid (not the bandit) called the Gentleman wrestler. That should be an attraction in itself.

Then Red Garner, popular lightweight champion will try conclusions with Phil Playfair, Port Perry Flash, who comes with a fine reputation. Red's title will be at stake and if he doesn't get a Payne in the neck before the bout is over it will be a record for the visiting mattman.

The appetizer will see that popular local mat artist, Ed Cazely, square off with Jim Timoski, the Ukrainian Flash.

And here is a lu. The gals are admitted free, the prices have been lowered and it looks like gala evening for the wrestling fandom of the city and district.

Leafs Limited to Four Hits in Opening Contest

(By The Associated Press)

The British Bulldog could take lessons in tenacity from Montreal Royals. They've been second to Newark Bears in the International Baseball League most of the season and they're still hanging on.

Undismayed by the Bears' imposing 22-game lead they blew down the league leaders in both games of a double-header yesterday, "cut" the lead by two points. The scores were 8-2 and 2-1.

Harry Smythe, limited the Bruins to five hits in the opener for his 12th victory of the season while his mates pounded young Atley Donald for 15 safeties. The Royals scored five lines in the sixth inning to clinch the game.

Marvin Duke followed Smythe's pace in the nightcap, yielding only three hits, one of which was Bob Seeds' 16th home run of the season. Jack Fallon, Royals' opponent on the hill, was hit seven times including a homer by Sammy Bell, the Royals' second sacker.

Leafs Divide

More good pitching bobbed up at Jersey City where the Giants closed their home stand by dividing a double bill with Toronto Maple Leafs winning the opener 1-0 behind Rollie Sillis, and dropping the second 4-2.

Sillis limited the Leafs to four hits and batted in the winning run with a single in the third inning. Woody Davis and Johnny Wilson checked the Giants in the nightcap while the Leafs ganged Johnny Mizell for eight safeties.

Buffalo Bisons benefited by Truett Sewell's seven-hit pitching and batted Baltimore Orioles 9-2. The Birds scored both their runs on Woody Abernathy's ten-run homer in the seventh which snapped Sewell's record of 34 scoreless innings.

Smiling, Jarvis wrote it down on a desk pad. Then he tossed down the pencil and grew serious. "Really, Miss Howard, I think this is splendid of you. But I assure you that the matter isn't serious, and I'm more than willing to take care of the damage." He smiled again. "The truth is, it was a case of bad driving. I might have turned into the opposite curb. It didn't have a fire plug, probably..... And another thing. The nurse told me how you came to the hospital with me, soaked to the skin from the broken water pipe. Perhaps I am the one who should be offering—"

"Oh, no," Judith said quickly. "And now, I—I'll get back to the office."

Francis Jarvis accompanied her to the door of his office. "Good-by, Miss Howard. And I want to thank you again. I'll be glad to have you drop in any time."

Virginia and Bob Bent were mightily interested when Judith rushed her story with Dr. Eden Harris. "It didn't take you long to get under way after you broke the lease with Steve!" was Virginia's comment.

But Bob was more interested by far in the fact that she'd met Francis Jarvis.

"He's a big shot for fair." Bob told her, as they had dinner in the Bents' apartment that night. "He outfit has sold all the important securities in this town, since everybody got the idea they could make money on paper. See, that guy could bust up a car a night—and still not lose sleep. He's got a Diesel yacht, and a speedboat. Just the other day he bought a private plane." He grinned. "And with little Judy offers to be responsible for his accident!"

"Well," Judith insisted good-naturedly, "it was the only thing to do, under the circumstances. I didn't know whether he was rich or poor until I got into his office!"

"You say he took your name and address?" inquired Bob.

"Why, yes. I gave them to him, just in case—"

"If I know Francis Jarvis—"

"And you don't," his wife reminded him. "I wish you'd shut up."

Bob accepted this wifely thrust. "Well, then, I mean if what I hear about Francis Jarvis is true—he'll make use of that name and address very soon."

Virginia laughed. "Judith, just think! Maybe you'll find yourself in the for a yacht and a garage full of cars."

"Don't be silly, you two," Judith admonished them.

She did not say what was in her heart—that what she wanted, and all she wanted, was a chance to get back to her and say, "Let's get married, Judith. If you want to, work. That's all right with me. But I love you so much that I've got to have you!"

X X X

However, this Steve Fowler didn't sound, that day or in the days that followed. She did not even hear from the Steve who wanted to argue her into prolonging a mere engagement. Almost every evening Virginia and Bob dropped in at Judith's apartment, but this helped only a little. And there were nights when she would have preferred to be alone with her thoughts.

"I hear Steve's out of town on a business trip," Bob told her one night, his voice tentative and his eyes alert to catch Judith's reaction.

"Is he?"

"I'm sure," Virginia added quickly. "that Judith's stopped worrying about where Steve is."

But she hadn't. When the Bents had left, Judith realized that she'd smiled as good old Bob's effort to make her feel better. No doubt he was lying about Steve's business trip. The chances were good that he'd invented the tale so as to explain why Judith hadn't heard from Fowler. And the irrevocable fact was that she still thought of Steve in her waking hours, dreamed of him in her sleep.

Then one evening, just as she and the Bents arrived home from the workaday world, Dr. Eden Harris telephoned.

"I want," he said, "a beautiful companion for dinner."

Judith was delighted to hear that bantering voice. "Well!" she said, "I don't think so. I'm wonderful indeed. Perhaps I can make a suggestion."

"Go on," thought," said Harris. "I'll make one, I'll you. I'll be around in an hour."

He took Judith to a new restaurant in town. A delightful little place called John's Rendezvous, with a groaning table of Swedish "smorgasbord" to be dealt with before they had ordered the entree. But before the entree arrived there was a telephone message for Dr. Eden Harris. He returned from it smiling, and Judith watching his usually pleasant face.

"I'm sorry, Judith. Emergency case. I might be able to return in an hour—and I might not make it until morning. Would you rather I took you home?"

CHAPTER IX.

Judith's murmured regret gave no real indication of how deep her disappointment really was. For weeks she had been practicing alone with her thoughts. Those had been weeks whose monotony was broken only by the occasional visit of the Bents; and even those visits had been spoiled somehow, for the only reminded her of Steve Fowler.

Since the night she had met Dr. Eden Harris she had found herself often, remembering his sympathetic manner, but strangely enough not all his gaiety. His telephoned invitation, tonight had brought a flash of sunlight breaking through dull gray skies. And now he was being called away on an emergency case.

"I'll stay here, if you don't mind." Judith told him, smiling. "I'm sure you wouldn't want to take the time to drop me at the apartment. And I find I'm hungry, too!"

Eden Harris smiled. "You know, the more I see of you the more I'm convinced you'd make a perfect wife for a doctor." He patted her hand. "I'll really run back if I can make it. In any event I'll call you here within an hour." He took up his hat and coat, and added, "And of course we'll try again....soon."

"Of course," Judith said, and watched him hurry from the restaurant.

She had eaten many a dinner alone, but none had seemed more lonely than this one. Fortunately the food was excellent, but only by every bite Judith wished that this evening Harris could have been spared from a call. She was just finishing her dessert when a waiter brought a telephone, plugged it into the wall of the booth.

"For you, Miss."

It was Harris. "I'm awfully sorry, Judith. But I'm stuck—and probably until dawn. I'll phone you again soon, if I may."

"Oh, I'm sorry, Doctor Harris. I'd hoped you might be able to come back."

X X X

Slowly she replaced the instrument in its cradle, stared at it malevolently as if somehow it were responsible for the spoiled evening. It was just as she was leaving the restaurant that she ran into Mrs. Army Macdonald, the young wife of one of the junior executives in the office where she worked.

"Hel-lo there, Miss Howard!" Judith extended her hand gaily. "Where's Steve? Once Steve and Judith had gone to dinner at the Macdonalds and Mrs. Macdonald was still firmly convinced that they would be married.

"Steve had to work tonight," Judith fibbed.

"I'm so sorry we didn't get here earlier," Mrs. Macdonald told her. "You might have joined us. Jerry's making a telephone call, but he'll be here in a moment, and you could have a cup o coffee and a cigarette with us."

Anxious to get away before Macdonald returned, Judith pleaded that she must get back to her apartment.

Mrs. Macdonald smiled. "I suppose Steve is going to join you later. I'm awfully glad to know he's doing so well. I saw him the other day in that new car of his! And I think it's wonderful he should get in on that new city contract, don't you?"

"X-yes." Judith faltered. "I really must be going, Mrs. Macdonald. I'm sorry I can't accept your invitation."

Behind the effusive woman she glimpsed Jerry Macdonald pushing his way through the crowd. With a departing smile for Mrs. Macdonald, she hurriedly fled.

On the street car Judith's mind was filled with bewildering and disagreeable gossip. She had heard nothing of Steve's "getting in on" a new city contract—but then, she reminded herself, there was no real reason now that she should have heard of it. And the news of the car she resented. Steve's visit tonight had been well enough, and it was odd that he should purchase a new car, especially, angered at Judith's attitude, he had spent his savings on a new automobile.

She had a feeling that both Virginia and Bob had been aware of Steve's fortunes but had not mentioned them. Judith smiled bitterly. Judith Howard! To look at her, my stand a little too soon." she thought. Judith Howard! Even though he's had a piece of luck and could marry any one, he'll probably never hear from him again. And it's what I deserve."

It was at that moment she said nothing to the Bents about Steve's business deal with Macdonald. But through the newspapers she learned that the city was putting a vast new water system north of town, and she concluded that it was in this deal that Steve must have figured. One of the leading manufacturers of his firm was a patented pipe, and for a long time Steve had been working to get it approved by the city engineering department. Apparently he had succeeded.

X X X

She found herself waiting for a telephone call from Steve, telling her of his good fortune. To whom else would he tell it, if not to her? After all, this had been his big ambition during the four years they had been together. At least a farewell note she had had from Steve Fowler say, "If only I could make the engineering department in this town see the advantages and saving in our patented pipe! I'm sure there's going to be a big replacement job in the north end—and if I could put that job across it would mean a bonus. It might even mean my old salary."

Then one evening, after Judith had washed and put away the few dinner dishes she found necessary for a lone meal, there was a rap at the door. It wasn't the knock of either Bob or Virginia, and Judith could think of no one else who would be behind that door but Stephen Fowler. Feeling the blood mount to her temples, she discarded her apron and went into the little hallway, opened the door with a trembling hand.

There stood Francis Jarvis, hat and stick in hand, smiling pleasantly!

"Good evening, Miss Howard. I hope you won't mind my calling unannounced like this. Matter of fact, I tried to telephone you this afternoon."

"I—I work downtown," Judith said, forgetting in her astonishment to return his salutation. "I—won't you come in?"

"Thank you....." Jarvis walked into the room, tossed his hat and stick onto the davenport, his quick glance taking in the little apartment.

"Please sit down," Judith said. "I hope you've quite recovered from your accident." She held out a box of cigarettes.

Jarvis laughed. "I haven't come to announce that I'm suing you for damages, if that's what you mean." He took one of the cigarettes, lighted it carefully. "This is just a friendly call."

From behind a grey cloud of cigarette smoke he studied her. Then: "You know, I've thought about you a great deal since you were in my office."

"Yes?" Judith said, not knowing what else to say.

"Yes," he repeated. "A great deal. You—you intrigued me."

X X X

It was then that Judith noticed something she hadn't detected when he first spoke. A faint thickness in his speech an odd glint in his dark eyes, told her that Francis Jarvis had been drinking. She remembered that afternoon in his office, when he had gone to the sideboard for a drink; and she recalled, too, Dr. Harris' intimation that liquor might have had something to do with the accident. Looking now at his slightly florid, rather full face, she decided that Jarvis was more at home with alcohol than not.

"Indeed, yes," Jarvis was saying. "you intrigued me very much, Miss Howard." He stopped, looked at her. "You know, of course, that I'm not married."

Judith laughed pleasantly. "I should hope so, Mr. Jarvis!" Mr. Jarvis. It's something I hadn't thought about."

"Of course not," he agreed. But plainly he was nettled by the remark. He leaned forward suddenly. "Look here. You can't make me believe you came to my office that day just for the purpose of taking responsibility for the accident."

Judith's face suddenly paled with anger. "For what other purpose would I come?"

"Well—" Jarvis smiled. "It's interesting to speculate upon that. A number of possibilities occur to me. For instance—"

"I'd rather not hear of the possibilities," Judith told him, rising from her chair. "I'm sorry you came to your office for the purpose I stated."

Jarvis held up a hand. "Oh, it's purely speculation. For instance, I was thinking that you'll soon be taking your vacation. Perhaps you might possibly arrange to be away at the same time. Had you thought a really exciting vacation—something like Honolulu or Bermuda? Or you might consider Alaska or California. Somewhere that—"

"I'm afraid I can't," Judith said quietly, her lips dry and bloodless. "Please get out of here. Now!"

Jarvis only smiled. "You are dispense with all the prolog. Judith would have heard of it. And we've been through all that. Let's—"

Judith stepped to the door, threw it open and stood waiting for him to leave.

Jarvis stopped at the door. "I'll knock on the door. Clearly Judith said. "Come in, or without the slightest notion of what he was going. To her astonishment, Eden Harris walked in, and the very sight of the man on the davenport, he stopped, embarrassed.

Doctor Harris Judith said slowly, facing Eden, "this is Francis Jarvis. You've heard of him, you? I've just asked him to leave—but he seems to be drunk. I'm not serious about the invitation."

CHAPTER X.

Dr. Harris' expression was so bland that for a moment Judith feared that he had failed to understand she really wanted to be rid of Jarvis.

"Indeed yes," Eden Harris said. "I remember Mr. Jarvis perfectly." He held out his hand, and Jarvis accepted it without hesitation. "Personally I've no objection to your company," he pleasantly added. "But if Miss Howard feels that you should leave, then of course....."

The other's face clouded unpleasantly. "Are you suggesting, Doctor, that you'd put me out?"

"Oh, not at all." Harris answered. "At least not yet. For the moment I'm merely suggesting that you act the part of a gentleman and accept Miss Howard's invitation to leave. If you don't do that, then it becomes a rather personal matter between us."

MYSTERY PLANE SEEN IN OCEAN

Captain of Vessel Unable to Stop Because of High Seas

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 13 (CP Cable)—Captain John Dodge of the Newfoundland schooner Nina Mistikita reported today he had sighted an airplane floating bottom-up, nine miles off Cape St. Francis on the northeastern tip of the Avalon Peninsula.

The schooner had been unable to stop and salvage the machine as the vessel was heavily loaded and a high sea was running.

Members of the crew said they thought at first the object was a whale, but closer inspection showed it to be a grey airplane. They could see the propeller rising and falling, and could make out the pontoons. There was no sign of life aboard the plane.

The Public Works Department of Newfoundland Commission of Government launched an investigation immediately to attempt to determine the name of the plane and the crew she had carried. About two weeks ago, there were reports, never verified, of a mysterious plane flying over the mid-Atlantic.

Tonight, Wednesday, craft from the most part been small they have been enthusiastically called and handled by owners engaged in simple vacation pleasure cruise. Local grocery stores and shops have greatly benefited by their trade.

A check up of the registers at the city custom house made this week showed, however, that incoming freight shipments from outside points have not been heavy. Registrations include the large pleasure schooner Panawal, anchored in the Bay of Quinte for some time, and owned by a Rochester publisher. Also is of Gobie Point registry. The Cement Karrier at the present time is making bi-weekly calls between Point Anne and Toronto with cement. One of the more interesting craft is the Ella Ann, a motor boat has been 12 x Blue cross of Sidney, Nova Scotia, carrying a thousand of tons of coal for the Point Anne plant. She cleared this week for Toledo.

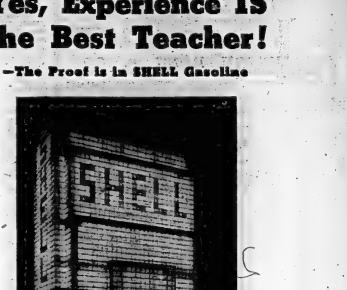
Posse Follows Trail of Campfires

Prince George, B.C., Aug. 12.—(CP)—A posse today followed a trail of campfires into the wilderness of Fort Nelson, B.C., 350 miles north of here, pursuing two men who may be connected with the $24,000 for robbery at the Hudson's Bay post at Fort Nelson, July 12, 1936.



The trail was one of campfires and fresh footprints, left by two men when they fled after an Indian discovered most of the furs cached at the post in a river bank near the Post Sunday.

Led by Game Warden J. S. Martin, a posse surrounded the cache and walked until nightfall for the men to return and continue removing the furs.

When the suspects gave no sign of returning, Game Warden Clark loaded the bundles and today picked up the fresh tracks and the ashes of recent campfires. Two canoes were found stolen from Fort Nelson.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Steels came to the fore in today's stock market after aviation and specialty issues had pointed the way in early dealings.

While backward stocks were to be seen here and there, gains of fractions to a two points or more were fairly well distributed near the final hour. Volume piled up on the extension of the recovery move, with transfers running at the rate of about 900,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Aug. 13 (CP)—Heavy demand for Dominion Steel and Coal B moved the price up to around 23 for a gain of more than a point on the Toronto Exchange today. General strength ruled throughout the steel group and the utilities, beverages and miscellaneous industrials posted more gains than losses.

The gold displayed spotty strength but the trend of the group was less definite than in Thursday's market while the base metals and the junior oils were generally steady on comparatively light action.

Some golds lagged through the early session but moved up near the close. O'Brien dipped and recovered and the last hour was marked by Pioneer, Pickle Crow, up on a rise of about 3 cents. Other gold closing higher by 1 to 10 cents included Macassa, Little Long Lac, Pickle Crow, Pioneer, Wright Hargreaves, Hamilton, Central Patricia, Coniagrum, Hard Rock, Preston East Dome, Lake Shore and McIntyre advanced fractions and Tex Hugh and Toburn are about 20 cents each. Pickle Crow's report for 42 weeks, Sylvanite, Lava Cap, New Golden Rose and Dariswater closed off a few cents.

Base metals had fractional gains in Nickel and Noranda and Beattie held an advance of 1%. The close was higher for Waite Amulet, Ventures, Pen Orville, Sherritt, Normetal and Falconbridge.

MARKET COMMENTS

The last few sessions on the local market have indicated a better tone and in addition it would appear as if the public is again coming into the market in increasing numbers. Several issues the past few sessions have shown appreciably on good demand and it would not be surprising if the strength in these securities spread to the rest of the list.

The market today harbors a large number of sold-out bulls who are waiting for the first signs of a sustained rally to get aboard their favorites In this connection, the "papers" are strongly favored, as well as the utilities and some of the construction issues. The public is today presented with a large number of attractive opportunities.

Although no one can accurately forecast exactly when the market will definitely turn upward, nevertheless the consensus in the Street is that higher quotations will prevail for the majority of the leaders before another three months. Consequently, on this reasoning, the time to buy stocks is now.

Hard Rock Has Much Free Gold

From an unofficial but reliable source, we understand that the Quebec Hard Rock mine has now shown by flat drilling to have a proven length so far of 250 feet, with plenty of free gold showing in the ore. Although efforts so far have been confined to a depth not in the upper levels, it is stated that the company intends to probe for the new vein on the bottom shortly.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Aug. 13.—Stocks just announced by Canning Bureau for the whole of Canada, and considering also that butter was being exported freely, they had confirmed the belief that there will be no appreciable surplus of butter this year in Canada, it was stated here yesterday in trade circles. Prices held within a narrow range, either holding steady or moving but slightly up or down, on produce market's generally. Receipts were fair-sized at 29c eggs, 394 boxes of butter and 10,603 boxes of cheese, excluding truck arrivals.

Sales at the Montreal Commodity Exchange were 200 boxes of Quebec No. 1 new cheese at 20¾c, shown by flat drilling to have a proven length so far of 250 feet, with plenty of free gold showing in the ore. Although efforts so far have been confined to a depth not in the upper levels, it is stated that the company intends to probe for the new vein on the bottom shortly.

Ends Active Participation With A McKee Record After 46 Years of Service

One of Few Remaining Links With Distant Past in Canadian Advertising

Through the retirement this month of Mr. H. E. Stephenson, Director of A. McKim Limited, the profession of advertising in Canada loses the man who probably had the best claim to the distinction as Dean.

Born on a farm in Ontario County, Mr. Stephenson gravitated as a youth, to Brockville, where he secured his first employment as clerk in a dry goods store. This he had a fair flair for selling was soon indicated by his originality and efficiency in arranging store and window displays.

Answering an advertisement for a bookkeeper in Montreal one day, he received a note from the late Mr. Amasa Walker, inviting him to come to Montreal for an interview. He recalls with interest the fact that Mr. Walker was one of the old Bonaventure station, the members of which were wont on announcing the death of Sir John A. MacDonald.

That evening he was given the position that marked the commencement of his career in advertising—a career that began with the modest wage of $6 per week.

He joined McKim's in June, 1891, just two years after its establishment, when it boasted a staff of six only, and was one of the few outside advertising agency in Canada. As stenographer to Mr. McKim, he learned the business from the man who was then the Canadian pioneer, but its most dynamic director for over a quarter of a century.

While still a stenographer, Mr. Stephenson achieved his first triumph when he planned, sold and successfully directed a $40,000 mail order campaign for a Montreal client with ambitions to invade the United States field. For those days, that was big business.

This experience brought him into close touch with such giants in the United States publisher representative first Frank Richardson, G. P. Beckwith and others, who soon learned to respect him for his wide practical knowledge of publications and circulations. Thus in the days of dozen and scores rather than close study of localized markets, and the efficiency of daily newspapers in cultivating them, that always played so important a part with Mr. Stephenson in the placing of advertising campaigns.

The retirement for his intimate acquaintance with the press of Canada was accelerated by the fact that when he assisted the late Mr. E. B. Biggar in bringing out the first edition of the Canadian Directory of Canadian Publications. He succeeded to the Presidency of the firm which was responsible for introducing many publications to the field of circulation that are still retained as standard features.

For a few years in the middle 90's, Mr. Stephenson took what he chooses to call a "post-graduate course" in advertising. For a time he was associated with the late and established advertising agency in Boston. Leaving it, he went to London, England, and joined the staff of the British manufacturers in the preparation of advertising campaigns and advertising suitable for Canada. Returning to Canada, he resumed his time in advertising work in Toronto. Enriched by these experiences in other fields, he came back to McKim's in 1896, when the late Mr. Walker was in charge of the business, he bought into the business, becoming a shareholder and eventually a director.

In the course of his long and varied career, Mr. Stephenson has seen press advertising develop from the primitive to the present day, the most potent force in selling it is to-day. He has witnessed the growth of radio advertising when its sole functions was to sell receiving sets to consumers and when "copy" was merely filling the space between the dots. Among the first to produce it when its potentialities for selling service and ideas came to be appreciated, and when the vogue began for personalities rather than the creative type of copy.

In the retirement of proprietaries and cosmetics in particular he is recognized as one of the highest authorities in Canada. His wide knowledge of the French Canadian market, with its peculiar type of print, background and influences that affect sales, he will be able to without an equal among Canadian advertising men.

Mr. Stephenson is retaining his financial interest in A. McKim Limited. Meanwhile he will devote his well-earned leisure to certain hobbies that are dear to his heart. The news of his retirement will naturally be received with regret by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances among the national advertisers, the publishers and the agency executives in Canada. But they will all have the satisfaction of knowing that from the side lines this interest in advertising will continue as strong as ever.

PEDESTRIAN HURT NEAR DESERONTO

Joseph McManus, Toronto, Sustains Fracture of Wrist

A peculiar accident occured on the highway pavement to a 64 all day rain between Deseronto and Napanee on Thursday afternoon, resulting in slight injury to a pedestrian, Joseph McManus, 52, of Toronto. McManus, Napanee, Thurso who was attended by Dr. R. C. Wills of Deseronto, was taken later to Belleville General Hospital for observation. It was found that the man had suffered a fractured wrist, when he was struck by the handle of a car driven by Max Serelsky, St. John's, N.B.

Mr. Serelsky was proceeding west on highway No. 2 when McManus without warning stepped from the south side of the highway directly in the path of the vehicle. The driver immediately swung to the left in an effort to avoid striking the man, but in attempting to avoid a collision, Jones applied his brakes suddenly. The car swung around on the road and faced east in the opposite direction, Mr. Serelsky car at the rear. Traffic Officer Sam Irvine investigated but laid no charges in the matter. Neither car was damaged.

Traffic Heavy

Traffic was tied up on Number 2 Highway at Bell's Creek three miles east of Napanee for practically all night, the result of an accident at the bridge there early on Friday morning. A semi-trailer and a passenger car driven by Gerard Charbonneau, 43 Ridpath avenue, Ottawa, collided on the south eastern extremity of the bridge, which is being widened with concrete steel and so firmly was it wedged in against the steel that it required the aid men from Boyce's garage all night to release the equipment. The driver was injured somewhat although he was taken to deliverance Hospital in Napanee by Dr. S. McCreary, who was called, for he suffered no injuries. The fates came to rest, the gas tank was ripped off, an explosion following, but no damage was done by fire. Traffic Officer Sam Ervine in charge of the investigation laid no charges, reckless driving would be laid on the driver of the truck admitted to the officer, that he had fallen asleep at the wheel.

WOODCHUCK ENTIRELY WHITE

Rarest of natural freaks, a pure white, albino woodchuck was captured by Dr. E. A. Carleton of Sirlington, Pennsylvania, week. Dr. Carleton while visiting friends in Maryland spied the little animal feeding on the lawn of a neighbor's garden. A trap was set and the 'chuck was captured. It is at present on display.

SOVIET FLIERS

the 143th meridian into Fairbanks. At 2:10 Gils morning (6:10 a.m. E.S.T.) the U. S. army signal corps here reported its Fairbanks station had intercepted a message from the plane. It said "everything is all o.k."

Radio operator Galkovsky apparently was communicating with a Russian station. The part of the messages intercepted read:

"...did not listen to you as we were taking bearings. Everything is all right. Crew feeling good. Signed Kalkovsky.

No Speed Record

It is about 1,400 miles from the pole to Fairbanks, but Levanefsky said he would not try for any speed record. His crew consisted of co-pilot Kostenafef, navigator Levchenko, mechanics Polebitchenko and Godovikoff, and radio operator Galkovsky.

The first two polar flights, one ending at Vancouver, Wash., and the other at San Jacinto, Calif., were made in much smaller single-motored planes carrying crews of three men.

Before the takeoff Levanefsky announced the flight was an experiment to study conditions for a regular transpolar airline service across the bleak polar regions.

The route of the Soviet fliers passes, where 2,000 inhabitants live in a lonely outpost, into northward across western Canada, over Edmonton, Alta., then Seattle, and on to the coast of Oakland.

Preparations at Edmonton

Edmonton, Aug. 13 (CP)—Acting on instructions from the Soviet Embassy, Washington, D.C., received by telephone last night, Captain James Bell, airport manager, began preparations for the landing of the Soviet fliers at Edmonton. Arrival is expected late tonight.

Two tons of gasoline awaited the Russian plane carrying the six Soviet airmen under command of Sigismund Levanefsky, scheduled to arrive here from Fairbanks, Alaska. Its eastern plan to continue only long enough for refueling for flight to Seattle and Oakland, Calif.

The monoplane, with a 131-foot wing span and crew of six carrying 25 passengers, will be the largest airplane to land in the Edmonton area and special arrangements were being made to receive it.

The plane will land on the Municipal Airport in the northwest section of the city, will take off on Portage Avenue, a 100-foot wide concrete road running 2½ miles north into undeveloped country on the city.

Police will be strung along the road to facilitate the take-off. Residents living near the field will suffice for the arrival of the ship which will be towed to the roadway by tractor.

OLD SOL SHINES BRIGHT O'ER CITY

Humidity Reduced by Cooling Breeze From North

Residents of the city awakened this morning with the brilliance of the sun's rays shining in their eyes, (the first time this week) and apparently enjoyed a refreshing night after Thursday night's sleep enjoyed in seven nights.

Early last evening cool breezes blew over the city, considerably reducing the humidity, which has been the cause of the hot, sultry days, scurrying down to a normal level.

Rainladen clouds disappeared before the southward flight of northerly winds and Old Sol came out in a blaze of belated glory which brought forth the comments of the majority of citizens.

Temperatures in the vicinity the early hours of the morning forced sleepers to reach for blankets. In some parts of the city, residents facing the west were hurriedly closing their windows as the morning air struck lightly-clad sleepers. All in all it was the best "sleepin'" weather experienced for some length of time.

WILL CONDUCT DAIRY SURVEY

For the purpose of making an extensive survey of the dairy industry and all methods in the British Isles, Mr. W. Hopkins, superintendent of the Eastern Ontario Dairy School at Kemptville, will sail on Saturday on the Empress of Britain for Liverpool and Scotland. While there he will visit the dairy farms and the best known dairy studied, including the National Institute for Dairying Research, the Dairying Institute, Agricultural Colleges and others. He will be gone until September.

REDUCTION IN RELIEF TOTAL

Whether canning factory operations in the Bay of Quinte district or Department of Welfare office in the placement of its registered feminine relief applicants remains to be seen, it was reported there" this morning. Relief totals may be given in that direction." It was stated. Calls for workers at the office on the part of canning factories are few and far between. But there has been a reduction in the number of those who register this month over the figures of last month.

OLD WAREHOUSE AT ALLEN DOCKS COLLAPSES TODAY

Structure Built Many Years Ago Was Sturdy Build-ing

With a resounding crash audible across the entire waterfront shortly after nine o'clock this morning, the old Allen Dock warehouse which for the past few years had shown visible weakening and buckling of its heavy beam supports gave way and collapsed to the ground.

The collapse of the familiar old structure marks the passing of one of the city's oldest landmarks which for sixty years had occupied a prominent position along the harbor front.

It was at one time the only dock and wharfage port for the busy coal barges which sailed into Belleville from Oswego ports.

Built by the late Nathaniel Allen the structure of its sturdiness in heavy walls and beams had held thousands of tons of coal for generations, but of late years had fallen into disuse with more modern methods of storage. For the passing of the white-sailed coal barges marked the first decline of the dock.

Owned for some time past by the Consumers Gas Company of the city, it has passi-recently been sold to other interests.

Though its piers had for years been used by scores of the city's residents as a place of recreation, privilege to a swim in the bay which it fronted and was popular with bathers, there was no one of whom were hurt at the time of the collapse due to the warning of the crackling structure.

QUINTS QUARREL AMONG SELVES

Dr. Dafoe Planning to Have Little Girls More Secreted

Callander, Ont., Aug. 13 (CP)—Outbursts of quarrelling led to the separation of the Dionne quintuplets from each other as much as possible, it was said here today. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe disclosed today as he prepared to put the quints back into circulation.

Dr. Dafoe said the little girls' whims, their slight colds and irritability had been magnified enough for them to appear before the thousands of tourists who have clamored since their birth to see them.

A change in the quintuplets was noted when they left the city for colds made their appearance. Dr. Dafoe said the five sisters have yet to get along famously together. They give each other toys with a smile and play happily together. But on Monday they began to quarrel.

There were bursts of temperity of tears shed over incidents that would have been laughed off a few days before. Visitors were kept out of Corbelle and it was not long before Annette, Cecile, Emilie, Marie and Yvonne, 5, from Monday the children were separated as much as possible to preclude the possibility of their pulling in the Dafoe nursery.

Dr. Dafoe spoke today of his fear the children know they are being used when they should be at their play-ground. He would not say, however, that he believed this had caused the short irritability.

Separated By Glass.

The children are separated from the public by a glass wall except during screenings but the hum of voices is audible and the quintuplets are decided sounds from tourists who do not heed the guards' instructions to be silent.

Dr. Dafoe believes some change must be made in the present plan of the arrangements for showing the children to the public. The method of exhibiting them without their knowing it is a difficult one but he believes there must be alternative is to exclude the public entirely and he would not like to contemplate the possibility of this happening.

The physician is appealed today to tourists for understanding of the problem he faces. He stressed that he is responsible for the health of the children and that if one died the whole world on him.

Hundreds of visitors have besieged his home all week and he gave an appeal today for the protection of a door sign that announced "Doctor not at home." "We have come so far it won't hurt to let us take a little look," is the tourist's usual appeal.

They don't seem to realize that the welfare of the quintuplets must be considered above everything else," Dr. Dafoe said. "I am going to see they are protected. I am sorry to disappoint the visitors but I have come so far but I want them to realize the consequences should we not exercise every precaution with our charges."

Romance in Roses

By ELIZABETH G. GRAY
Picture Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service

Mehitabel Sophia Perkins, spinster, opened her ivory enameled Colonial door, in answer to the deep thud of her antique brass knocker that gave such atmosphere to her vine-trellised cottage.

"Land sakes," she said, "if you book agents must pester the heart of me all day long, why not use the rear door like other vendors?"

A broad, good-natured smile answered her. "Now, ma'm, who could resist entering under an arbor of such glories as these? Why, could forego a tilt of that knocker, just to hear its music? Why—"

"You may cease your levity and state your business," said Miss Metty, sorrowful softened by the praise lavished on her special pride.

"You guessed it, ma'm, 'tis books—not ordinary books, but all the beauties of thought and nature re-luminously caught, compiled in one book to intrigue us just as sure as these roses grow so in your door. Rare gems, ma'm, songs that 'could wake to ecstasy the living lyre!'"

"Stigmarole! The liars I come across daily don't need any incentive to keep awake," she retorted tartly.

"Ignoring such rank heresy, the agent became so much more eloquent an exponent of the poets that are and were that Mehitabel gave in to the spell of his words; the tears dropped from her; she felt young, thrilled.

"I saw Hamlet," she barely breathed. "You are much better than he was. Why don't you quit peddling books and do that?"

"It's a thought," he said, "and I will send you a front row seat for my opening night."

"Oh," she gasped, "it would be wonderful. I'll buy a book to remind you of your promise."

Should he allow a guilty connivance to spoil a sale? Never. All's well in love and salesmanship.

His brave feeling bold a suggestion of Romeo and Juliet. Mehitabel sighed and thrilled. She gazed at the receipt as though it were her first love letter.

The book of verses came at last. The blood raced to Metty's face as she scanned the pages for some personal message. Fool! she cried to herself; but even so her austerity became softened as the white wine on and spring awakened her roses from their long sleep. Then came a morning when the first of them had burst into bloom. A booming voice hailed Mehitable as she was working among them.

"A letter for you, Miss Metty, from the theatre. Now, who could that be from? Think of going on the stage?" and he laughed uproariously at his own joke. "Whole town's wondering what it's all about."

A strong will alone saved Mehitabel from fainting as the blood pounded in her head and throat.

"Won't hurt any to let 'em wonder a while longer," she said as she took her letter.

Once alone she opened it. Enclosed was a theatre ticket and a scrawled note, which read:

"To Miss Mehitabel Perkins, from Robert Butler.

"Upon her advice I have assumed

The tragic role of Hamlet;
I am with hope and fear consumed—

Tonight, I toss the gauntlet."

Miss Metty's trim little figure was the first in the theatre that night. Her program told her that Robert Butler came third on the list. She never knew what the first two numbers were about. As the curtain rose above the din of harsh discordant music on the third act, her taut muscles sagged; she slumped; she metaphorically withered, dwindling awkwardly across the stage her hero was portraying into a chair reminiscent of the Elizabethan period. Clad grotesquely in a costume of the same period, with a tall silk hat atop his head, he fired the house to roars of laughter with his burlesqued soliloquy. He was called and re-called. He was a success.

Mehitable Sophia Perkins spinster, opened the old Colonial door in answer to the thud of her antique knocker, and a small shower of rose petals.

"Land sakes," she exclaimed, "it's you."

"Yes, ma'am," was the inane reply.

"As long as you are here you might as well come in. I can see you've got something to say, and I want to thank you for the theatre ticket to the show."

"Was it as bad as that, honest?" "Worse!" she said bitterly.

"I didn't sell very many books" he began. I kept thinking of what you said, and the roses and the sweet peace of it all here. I decided to give your suggestion a try. It was a joke. They thought I meant to be, so I exaggerated the offense and built on that foundation the best you saw. They said they'd try me out. You know the rest. It is a success financially. It would give us plenty to live on and we could live too, Mehitabel, for your old age."

For a moment Miss Metty gazed, for breath, into, with a swift fluttering movement, she arose, smoothed her limousine apron and made a hasty retreat, saying.

"Lands sake, our tea is boiling, and I do hate boiled tea."

follow a man who condones massacres or suggests making a family airplane so men and women lose their lives."

Mr. Rowe's liquor policy, and his recent pledge to "clean-up the beer parlors", came in for some stiff criticism from the Prime Minister.

"Mrs. Cockshutt of Brantford, President of the Western Ontario Women's Conservative Association," said he "spoke on the platform with Mr. Rowe at Woodbridge, saying the Conservative Party was formerly known as the wet party, and that now it has become the dry party. Mr. Rowe must have sat with his tongue in his cheek, when he recalled that he was campaign organizer for George Henry in 1934, at which time he was urging the people to elect a party (the Tories), which claimed the only issue of the day was beer and wine, and promised licenses to all hotels and restaurants by July 1 of that year if re-elected.

"In order to beguile the restaurant keepers into voting Tory, the Government at great expense had a list of all restaurant keepers prepared, and 15,700 applications for licenses were actually filed, only to be destroyed by some unknown party after the Government's defeat.

Fatal Not Questioned

"It was in order to take the issue out of politics by promising to give the act which the Conservatives had passed a fair trial that we made it operative. But we gave licenses only to hotels and certain clubs.

"Mr. Rowe and his colleagues are able to buy beer. He should know that I amended the act to make the penalty for selling beer to minors apply not only to the hotelkeepers but to the saloons as well. He states that only Liberals can get beer licenses. Nothing could be farther from the truth, and he well knows it. In St. Thomas, I'm told, the majority of hotelkeepers are Conservatives. I doubt very much if any one of them ever had his politics questioned. One of the first licenses issued in Ontario was to the late Home Smith, one of the senior executives in the Provincial Tory organization for years. And the last one issued, as far as I know was issued to Harry Hunt, one of the most outstanding Conservatives in all Toronto.

Hours of Sale

"Mr. Rowe complains of the hours of sale. We are giving greater local autonomy and we have asked the municipalities to advise us by resolution as to earlier closing. Mr. Rowe knows further that any municipality in Ontario by resolution and petition can secure a referendum for the purpose of cancelling existing licenses. From this policy of local option and autonomy we have no intention of departing."

The Premier also ripped the Conservative leader for knocking hotels as "mushroom dives", saying that a picture of every hotel in the Province was available for Mr. Rowe's inspection at the Liquor Board offices. "Let him go down there and see them," gibed the Premier. "If you can pick out a single mushroom dive I'll cancel its license at once."

Building statistics, declared the Premier, showed that during the last two years more money had been spent in improving hotel premises in Ontario than ever before. "And with the steadily increasing number of tourist transients entering Canada," said he, "it appears that these hotels are necessary."

FEAR RUSSIAN AIRMEN MISSING IN ARCTIC WASTE

Huge Plane Vanishes After Report is Radioed One of Engines Failing

Doubt Expressed Fliers Still in Arctic Area.

SEARCH FLIERS' READY

Fears Held Gasoline Exhausted Many Hours Ago

Moscow, Aug. 14 (AP)— Soviet Russia's missing transpolar fliers, in their last message heard here, reported their flight was uninterrupted by the failure of one of their four motors.

Pilot Sigismund Levanevsky, who with five companions was enroute to North America, messaged at 11.32 a.m. G.M.T. Friday (7.32 a.m. Friday E.D.T.) that a damaged oil pipe had stilled one of the motors.

"Flying 4,600 (15,090 feet) thru' continuous clouds," he said. "Used several lines fuel. Cause is as much lighter we are able to continue the flight with three motors without descending."

Last Message Friday

In the last message received at 8.13 p.m. G.M.T. Friday (10.33 a.m. E.D.T.) the intrepid flyer said:

"How do you hear me? Wait." Two hours earlier the Vancouver station heard the plane report "everything in order." The fliers' operator said however, that radio reception was poor.

Officials trying to regain contact with the plane were in constant communication with Fairbanks, Alaska, San Francisco and Washington.

(The plane was 18 hours overdue at Fairbanks at 8 a.m. E.D.T. Saturday.)

Difficulties Foreseen.

The transport started with enough fuel to cover it 4,000 miles about 900 beyond Fairbanks—but the flight plan called for land at Alaska to be more. Little "crash equipment" was aboard although the airmen had a rubber boat, tent, a minimum of food supplies and enough oxygen for 20 hours flight in higher altitudes.

Both Levanevsky and Navigator Levchenko had foreseen difficulties in the North Pole-to-Alaska section of the flight.

In the newspaper "for industrialization", Levchenko had described a

Mass Evacuation of Foreign Settlement in Shanghai Considered

HOTELS SEARCHED

U. S. Marines Call Out All Available to Strengthen Guard

Shanghai, Aug. 14 (AP)—Foreigners began evacuating portions of the International Settlement today as fighting between Japanese and Chinese increased in intensity and three foreign women were killed.

Bombs that dropped at the corner of Nanking road and the Bund, Shanghai's main intersection, killed the women. The bombs fell directly between the Cathay and Place Hotels. Scores were wounded.

British and United States emergency committees met and it was reliably reported that they were considering mass evacuation.

Guests at the Astor House Hotel and the home of Monsignor Mariani, apartment hotel adjacent to the Japanese Consulate, and also other established outside these hostelries. One unconfirmed report said a squad of Japanese military entered the Astor House to search for an American photographer.

Evacuate Patients

The French Catholic Hospital on the north bank of Soochow Creek was evacuated today.

A British and a United States resident of Shanghai were wounded by cross fire. A Russian was shot in the stomach, and two Chinese children were killed and 20 in the day.

British called their volunteer corps to patrol duty along with the American marine and volunteer guard.

FAULKNER OPENS COMING CAMPAIGN IN HIS OWN WARD

Minister of Health Speaks On Record of Government

WILL BE CANDIDATE

Attacks C.I.O. Methods In Discussing Union Question

Signalling the opening of his campaign for re-election as representative of the riding of West Hastings at the coming general provincial elections, the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner in an address to voters in his own Sampson Ward at the home of Patrick Rush, Trumbull street, last evening declared that this election would not be characterized by any of the outworn slogans of past times but a more modern one, and necessary by the exigencies of the present "Hepburn or John L. Lewis".

"It is up to you to choose, and for the rest of the province to choose—good government or C.I.O.", he added in his attack on form of unionization which would, he said, take away the rights of the people of this country to run their business without outside interference. "Let Canada be for Canadians. If the people of the country are properly led, then we have the perfect and happy accord."

The Hon. Dr. Faulkner in his warm-up address to the enthusiastic gathering discounted any reports he would run or offer himself for nomination in a Toronto constituency, declaring Mr. Balmer would have to do it."

Introduced by Mr. Fred Temple, president of the Belleville Liberal Association who added his plea for unity within the local party, Dr. Faulkner declared that this year conditions had changed since the year 1934 when the Liberal party had assumed office. "This time we are on the defensive," not the attacking side. We must convince through actual facts and figures what has been done for the province since we did go in. We must show them the country has been managed, not through the spirit or by the party of Liberalism. Go in the best interests of the people who make up this province. This will be easy for us to do," he said.

Province Comes First.

Soudan Grass Grows 10 Feet in Height

Soudan grass, a succulent type of hay that has been introduced this year on the farm of Mr. Hector Whitton, has reached the fine stage of cession of Rawdon. Towering from nine to ten feet in the air, this hardy plant which is said to be greatly enjoyed by live stock, will be harvested three times in the near upward.

This is the second year that Mr. Whitton has grown soudan grass and he speaks very highly of its food value. It is a heavy crop and there is now pushing its way through the earth and has reached a height of one foot.

A feature of this grass is that its does not have to be set in the row. It has a taste, juicy and succulent, resembling that of sugar cane.

Planes Fleeing Japanese, Confused, Bomb Crowds In Shanghai Concessions

Dr. Rawlinson, Outstanding Missionary, Killed on Street

SCENES OF HORROR

Both International And Federal Concessions Suffer Heavy Losses

Shanghai, Aug. 14 (CP)—Six foreigners and 500 Chinese were killed today when Chinese bombing planes apparently confused in escaping Japanese pursuit craft, bombed the crowded International and French concessions of Shanghai.

Dr. Frank Rawlinson, one of the outstanding American missionaries in China, and H. S. Honnberg, a wealthy American motor car dealer were the only victims identified. An English woman and a French policeman were killed as well as two other unidentified foreigners.

Dr. Dawlinson, 56, with his wife and 18 year old daughter, Jean, was motoring down the Avenue Joffre VII —one of the city's busiest streets, when the bombs fell. He stopped the car and stepped out, to be struck in the chest by a bomb fragment. He died at once.

Mrs. Rawlinson Shocked

Mrs. Rawlinson, although suffering from shellshock, drove the car to the foreign hospital, turned over the body of her husband and then collapsed. Jean was not hurt.

Two hundred Chinese were seiminded to have been killed in the refugee-crowded international zone while in the French concession 300 native people were killed.

Sixteen Chinese planes carried out the bombing operations. They concentrated on Japanese warships and troop concentrations. The bombs falling in the international zone apparently had missed their target.

Japanese planes took to the air to fight them. Pan Asia News correspondent reports one Japanese plane, which exploded in the deck of the Japanese flagship Idzuma, shot down a Chinese bomber.

Waterfront Area Damaged

The Chinese bombers flew in groups of nine and twelve. Considerable damage was inflicted in waterfront areas.

400,000 Miles Hourly Speed Of Finsler's Comet Estimated

Tail of Visitor Figured at Length of 5 Million Miles

STILL VISIBLE TONIGHT

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)—Perkins Observatory at Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio State University reports that Finsler's Comet, which passed close to the Big Dipper this week, was clocked at 400,000 miles an hour. That is a speed of a little more than 6,600 miles a minute.

The comet discovered by Dr. Peter Finsler, of the Perkins Observatory, kept a camera on the comet for two hours the night of August 10.

"During the two hours in which predicts.

the photograph was taken," the Observatory announced, the comet moved among the stars a distance equivalent to 1½ times the apparent diameter of the full moon.

"Its actual motion through space during this same interval of time amounted to at least 800,000 miles— 400,000 miles per hour.

The comet's tail, when photographed by Dr. Cherrington, appeared to be four to five million miles long. This was twice the usual predictions of the tail length.

The Perkins Observatory statement says the comet should still be visible tonight, and best observable soon after dark.

It will be found under the handle of the Big Dipper," the Observatory

HEPBURN HITS AT LEADER OF C. I. O.

Says There Will be Plenty of Time Before Election.

Sidgetown, Ont., Aug. 14—(CP) Forces opposing the Liberal Government in Ontario will be given "lots of time" before an election is held and the electorate will have "plenty of time to consider carefully the issues of the day".

Premier Hepburn gave assurance on these points at the East Kent Liberal-Progressive nomination meeting in Rondeau Park last night at which Douglas M. Campbell was nominated for re-election. At St. Thomas, Thursday night, the Premier announced the election "in a short time," but the exact date remains a matter of conjecture.

Declaring he stood by his administrative record, the Premier launched another attack on John L. Lewis and his committee for industrial organization. He charged that the United States C.I.O. leader was trying to get "this greedy hands" on the pay envelopes of Ontario.

Rowe is Challenged

Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative leader, was challenged by Mr. Hepburn to rescind any of the legislation the Liberal administration had enacted. He took credit for savings resulting from the contract-cancelling Hydro inquiry, reduction of interest rates and municipal indebtedness.

The Premier pledged himself to continue his drive on what he termed succession duties frauds. Already the government had collected $35,000,000 he said, and another $50,000,000 remained to be collected. This department now promised more revenue than did the gasoline tax.

In a brief address, a St. Clair Gordon of Wallaceburg, Liberal member of the legislature, announced that he intended to allow his name to stand before the convention in that riding.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The traveler and the weather lover travels to the cathedrals, museums, art galleries, and natural wonders. Among the latter are the phases of the weather that may be experienced and enjoyed, and at the same time make a journey more worthwhile, although these may be in the nature of an adventure.

Among the weather wonders may be mentioned the "cold pole" of Siberia, the heat of Death Valley, the fogs of Labrador, Mt. Waialeale, Hawaii, the "monsoon" season of India, the trade winds of either hemisphere, ocean fogs of the California coast, and Foehn wind of the Alps. These are only a few of the many. Some of them have great economic importance which are as interesting as their physical causes.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, Aug. 14—Pressure is high over the Great Lakes and the northwestern portion of the continent, with a moderate disturbance centred in southeastern Saskatchewan. Light to moderate winds are reported generally from coast to coast. Thunderstorms and rain from the Ottawa Valley eastward, while rain has fallen in the Maritimes, the weather has been fair in the Lake Superior—Northern Ontario and south winds; fair and moderately warm in the Prairie Provinces and northward winds; mostly fair and moderately scattered thunder showers.

Maximums and minimum thunder-showers in some districts. Sunday, mostly cloudy and warm with scattered showers; cooler with scattered showers in southern portion. Monday, mostly today and Sunday with showers in some districts, cool over north portion.

Allen—Cool to-day and Sunday; showers in many districts.

NOTE IS FOUND ON DEAD BODY

Montreal, Aug. 14 (CP)— A short note—"a philosophical distaste for life is the most deadly of diseases" —was among the papers belonging to Douglas Alexander, 30, Kingston, Ont., student, whose body was found yesterday in a canoe at Dorval, on the Lakeshore, 13 miles west of here.

The note was introduced during the inquest at which a verdict of suicide was returned. Alexander was found with the top of his head blown off and the muzzle of a gun in his mouth.

Alexander's father told the coroner his son was depressed because eye trouble had prevented him from continuing his studies.

The younger Alexander had left Kingston Monday, hoping to be able to work his way to England by ship from here.

BELLEVILLE FAIR TWO WEEKS AWAY

With fair date opening set just two weeks away, hurried efforts on the part of members of the Belleville Fair Board to complete last arrangements are now evident at the office of the Fair Secretary R. H. Ketcheson.

The Fair, an institution which for generations has served to entertain and instruct generations of residents of the district annually, will be officially opene by Dr. G. S. Henry, Minister of Agriculture Minister of Agriculture shortly after noon on Tuesday, August 31st, following the annual luncheon tendered visitors by the Boar. As in the past, the booming of a small cannon and the fluttering of the Union Jack from the staff at the entrance to the grounds will signal the opening.

Dr. Barton is also expected to address a gathering of agriculturists and citizens shortly after the opening of the fair.

This year as an innovation, it is hope to have the Belleville Municipal Band in attendance each day and nightly, attract attention to the fair by parading on the streets before proceeding to the park. On Wednesday, chief musical interest will be centred on the Ottawa Band, which will come to Belleville as an especial attraction.

At the present time several matters are under discussion, which include nightly dancing on the platforms and other nightly and daily attractions for both urban and rural visitors.

At the present time a force of men is busily engage in the final clearing of the grounds, the painting and cleaning of sheds and exhibition buildings, and an overhaul of the grandstand and track. Horses will predominate this year, and it is expected that some of the best races ever seen in Ontario will take place.

LONG INQUIRY IS ANTICIPATED OVER FINANCES

Prime Minister King to Announce Personnel of Commission

NATIONAL MEMORIAL

Mr. King Will Remain Aloof From Ontario Campaign

Ottawa, Aug. 14 (CP)—Personnel of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial financial relations has been decided on and will be announced during the weekend by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The commission, clothed with powers to probe deeply into Canada's governmental, economic, and financial machinery, is expected to begin its early date what will prove a long inquiry. The investigations may have an important bearing on future events in Canada.

Personnel to be Announced

Last night Mr. King said he might be in a position to disclose the names of the commissioners late today. The government's decision to launch the inquiry was made during the last session of parliament and in the intervening time economic, financial and legal experts have been making preparations.

ARCTIC CRUISE IS INAUGURATED

Capt. Smellie Receives Salute From Ships at Harbor Entrance

By R. K. CARNEGIE

Churchill, Man., Aug. 14 (CP)— Disregarding Friday the 13th superstitions, Capt. T. F. Smellie last night pointed his ship, the R.M.S. Nascopie, into Churchill Bay and received salutes from other vessels in this northland port, to begin an extended cruise of the Arctic Archipelago.

The stout little ship nosed out into the darkness amid congratulations filled. Members of the Eastern Arctic Patrol under Major D. L. McKeand, Royal Canadian Mounted Police under Superintendent G. F. Fletcher, Hudson's Bay Company officials and many distinguished scientists were included in the passenger list.

Ice Unusually Absent.

Favored by fair weather and an unusual absence of ice the Nascopie was well ahead of schedule when she arrived at Churchill on her voyage from Montreal after stopping at Lakeland, Hudson Strait and eastern Hudson Bay ports.

Governor General's Secretary Praises Mackenzie Air Service Pilot

NORTHERN FLYING

By GUY E. RHOADES

Aboard Vice-Regal Train en route to Burns Lake, B.C., August 14 (CP)— The Governor-General's Secretary today stacked records of northern flying along the Great Mackenzie waterway and found them among the world's finest.

A. S. Redfern, Squadron Commander in the Royal Flying Corps, during the Great War, noted that in more than eight years operation in the Northwest out of Edmonton not one of the more than 15,000 passengers carried received even a slight wrist.

Mr. Redfern was flown 2,000 miles from the Arctic Red River to Edmonton last week in the journey that made much waiting necessary. He flew with Archie McMullen of Mackenzie Air Service who is termed by him as the finest pilot he had ever seen.

"I have taught hundreds of men to fly," he said, "but I have never seen anyone like McMullen. He positively refused to leave the water when he considered the weather unsafe.

"He flew the plane beautifully and made a remarkable landing when we struck low clouds blocked our lateral visibility. I should think he is one of the best pilots in the world."

ADVISES PEDESTRIANS TO WEAR WHITE

Twelve years of steady mileage driving in the course of his commercial travelling has given Mr. Harry Ester of this city a keen insight into the hazards of pedestrians at present, using the country's roads and enabling him to pass on tip which, inexpensive as it may appear would be the means of saving many lives each year.

The veteran automobile driver simply recommends that anyone who asks that walkers on highways using the roads after dark wear a cheap pair of white cotton gloves, or failing this, the tying of a white handkerchief on one arm.

His points out No. 1 highway used to be white and objects on it easily distinguished in the dark. The oil drip of thousands of cars over the years has darkened it to invisibility.

"A woman in a white dress walking on the road can be seen a mile away a man, dressed in a dark suit, walking alongside of her is almost invisible. And generally, for politeness and safety's sake, the man takes the inside or travelled part of the road."

VARIETY KEYNOTE OF LARGE MARKET

Prices Held Firm to Close of Week	Last

Further evidence of the bountiful harvest, which Nature has blessed Belleville and the surrounding rural districts was brought home this morning at the city market, when a large and varied display of farm and garden produce greeted an unusually large crowd of Saturday morning shoppers.

Variety was the keynote of the fine exhibit of farm foodstuffs from the heaping piles of sweet corn and hundreds of bunches of radishes, which are yet putting in an appearance. Fruits of every description with plums, peaches, early apples heading a variable display caught the fancy of milady, in the inside market, another splendid exhibit of farm and dairy produce invited shoppers to spend. Chickens, fowl, butter and eggs were plentiful while delectable homecooking with not a few vegetables rounded out an attractive Saturday morning offering.

Tomatoes headed the variable vegetables display with prices remaining at the same level as those of Thursday. Bushels were offered at thirty cents and one dollar, with six and fifteen quart baskets, selling at twenty and thirty cents respectively. New Potatoes were plentiful with no noticeable change in price. Bushels were quoted at seventy-five and eighty cents with pecklets moving briskly at twenty and twenty-five cents. "There will be no shortage of potatoes this year," prophesied one vendor. If the late crop lives up to advance notices we won't be able to give them away."

Corn in Quantity

Sweet corn in large quantities was available for lovers of this vegetable with dozen lots selling at ten, fifteen, and two dozen ears for twenty-five cents. Carrots, beets, onions, radishes were plentiful and sold at prevailing prices.

ROLLINS FAMILY HOLD REUNION

Many Attend Function Held at Church Grounds at Cooper

Stirling, (Special) — Gathering from all parts of Hastings County in Hastings, where the name is most widely known, and from many distant places, the descendants and collateral descendants of the Rollins family, to attend the annual reunion and picnic held on the Church Grounds of Cooper United Church. The success which attended the function was largely due to the tireless efforts of Mrs. G. S. Rollins of Cooper Hill, president of the organization, and an able group of committee workers. The gathering was called to order by the president at the dinner, and a few brief remarks were observed in memory of departed loved ones.

Mr. C. S. Rollins presented a special group of prizes in the following order—Oldest lady present —Mrs. H. Rollins Sr., of Cooper; youngest lady— Baby Madeline, Trenton; oldest man present—Mr. Rollins Sr., coming the greatest distance was awarded to Mr. Albert Rollins of Hartney, Man., and the largest family was the family of Mr. and Mrs. J. Rollins Trenton. At this time a communication was read from Hon. Peter Heenan, Toronto, who was to be the speaker of the day. He expressed keen regret at being unable to attend the function and in his absence a message of greetings was given by Mr. Albert Rollins of Hartney, Man., who spoke on behalf of the Canadian West. The ladies of Cooper were also thanked for their efforts for the excellent services and kindness toward the gathering.

Election of Officers

During the business part of the afternoon which was conducted by the president, the following group of ladies and gentlemen were elected to direct the activities of the organization for 1938.

Honorary—Mrs. Albert Rollins, Hartney, Manitoba.

President—Mrs. Harris, Cooper.

Secretary— Mrs. H. Rollins, Stirling.

Honorary President—Mr. H. Rollins, Sr., Belleville.

Vice-Presidents—L. S. Rollins, Tweed; Mrs. Geo. Rollins, Cooper.

These along with the following executive committee will be responsible for the next reunion to be held at Oak Lake on the third Wednesday in August: Mrs. Geo. Rollins, Belleville; Jos. Rollins, Ivanhoe; H. Rollins, Sr., Cooper; Mrs. S. Rollins, Tweed; W. Rollins, Cooper; Mrs. Geo. Rollins, Cooper.

During the afternoon a number of members present followed with keen interest the series of sports events which transpired including running races, stunt races of various kinds; a baby contest, a fat man's race, a beer, which climaxed a happy and successful day in the life of those present. The name of Rollins, a name which is particularly well-known in the Hastings district for many years men bearing this name have been active in the affairs of life wherever they lived and it is still prominently connected with Township and County Council.

BOY RECOVERS ALL HIS PENNIES

Knocked From His Hand as He is Counting Day's Receipts

One paper, one thick journal of an out of town afternoon edition, was left on the counter of the numismatist, that must have been carried there by the boy delivering along Front Street during the earlier hours of the evening.

The number of pennies and nickels that glinted under the rays of the electric lamp above, as they were carefully counted from one grimy little hand to another showed that it was painstaking and serious, this checking over of the day's proceeds.

Somehow it happened. Probably a sudden lurch in the part of some unconcerned pedestrian, who perhaps barely paused the length of coins as that cascaded from jolted little hands to the concrete, to bounce and roll with glee into the shadows—most of them into the depths of an open street grating close by.

The above ground search had been finished. But the bamboo pole and baited hook method of tilting children over a fence into darkness on the underground exploration that was about to be carried on through the open ironwork of the grating. Just a stick, picked up from somewhere and a wad of gum, heated to tacky softness with a match, and the borrowed flashlight was needed.

Fearing perhaps paid little heed to the kid who treasure trove into the darkness, but last accounts were the day had not been a loss occasions, again appealed to the electors of the riding to permit him the privilege of administering his office without regard for party rights. "Let me do the same for one man as I would for another. Let us manage our country that way and see what good government can do for it. Let us emulate the example of Premier Hepburn when he announced at the time of the resignation of the Hon. Mr. Croll, and the Hon. Mr. Roebuck, "my province comes first. Can a voter help but be proud of such an utterance from his elected highest authority?"

Patronage was decried by Dr. Faulkner as a threat which, if carried too long would eliminate the country with a cleavage that perhaps would never be healed. There has been criticism of myself in Belleville over this very thing. But My Howe declares there has been too much of it. We have acted on the fact that when an important position is vacated by the government for some one else through the years we have offended him and all his friends, and when you come over in his place you will find that twenty more have also offended. Good government cannot be carried on if this system develops. Remember, when you deprive a man of his job you have deprived him of his living, and that of his family."

Describing the opposition group as "one of the most discordant that has ever offered themselves for the voters of the province," the speaker declared that election had the chance of voting for "good government or Toryism."

Good government must be contrasted with the "evils and lawlessness of the C.C.O." Only people who consider this question closely, he averred. Better times in the country did not come from this sort of unionization, but in proper leadership.

Hepburn For Unionism

"We have unions of our own here, one wishing to be free not to join or bind you to any extreme principles. Premier Hepburn is not against properly conducted strikes, nor against picketing. You can do either. That's the crux of the question. He simply wants to keep Canada for the Canadians."

Salvation of the country lay more in the proper distribution of wealth, he pointed out turning to the collection of estates through this tax by which Premier Hepburn after he had succeeded collected $2 millions of dollars from 66 estates which were overlooked by the Tories. This is the taxation which one can divide, taking money from the dead which might otherwise be disbursed through the profligacy of some rich heir. Hepburn has done so far, better than ours at that, he said.

More money collected by this means by the Hon. Mr. Hepburn to a beneficial account, was forseen by Dr. Faulkner.

The present government will have an item selling point to the electors of the Province at the election in that it "Hydro, and the savings, that have been realized in its payments, upon which the opposition can have nothing to say, continued the speaker.

Record of Government

"What can they say also in the matter of giving the municipalities the whole cost of the upkeep of Old Age Pensions, Old Age Pensions and mother and one child pensions, the abolition of the entrance fee paper cost, the taking off of the Provincial tax; the taking off of the 20 per cent Provincial Highway cost which has been substantial these years, all important points made possible through good government."

"The only thing the opposition can say is that now is that they have nothing to offer the people of the Province.

"There is also the need for the construction of a tuberculosis sanitarium, Dr. Faulkner declared the matter of whether it was to be built in Belleville or vicinity was not the issue. "We must have a central point. In my opinion As strong a city as Toronto, Ottawa, who suffer are served, I care not. I am not built."

This election as far as he was concerned would be fought above board and on the clean issue; he advised his hearers to use the same tactics as they kindly things if you feel called upon to say concerning the opposition you may later have occasion to retract, he told them at the opening of his address.

The suggestion that a general meeting of Liberals be held in the clubrooms in Belleville on Tuesday night next for the purpose of naming delegates to the Marmora convention was made by Dr. Faulkner. Two delegates will be named by each ballot box "And let us have a full meeting open to all of Belleville," he urged.

At the meeting held for Samson Ward, Maurice Callaghan was chairman, president; Mrs. Wark, first vice president; John Finkle, second vice and Maurice Connell, treasurer.

The Governor-General of Canada, Lord Tweedsmuir, will be extended an invitation to open Old Home Week. It is felt that in view of the fact that his name and the name of this village are both taken from Tweed river and situated in Scotland, he will consider the matter in a very favorable light.

A number of suggestions have been and others will be given consideration, all having as their purpose to make Tweed Old Home Week an occasion not soon to be forgotten.

St. Carthag's annual social and picnic was held at Tweed Memorial Park on Wednesday afternoon and evening. For a time during the morning and early afternoon it appeared that a postponement might be necessary owing to the heavy downpour of rain. Clearing later, however, brought out a large crowd to the supper for which the ladies of the church have for a long time been noted. Refreshments and games and amusements of various kinds and in later dancing with the Aces' Orchestra providing the music, kept the crowd entertained until after midnight.

Bernard Wright who was recently seriously injured in a motor accident, was brought home on Thursday from Belleville General Hospital. Though much improved he will be confined to his bed for some time owing to the fact that he had sustained a fractured neck among other injuries.

Two American tourists returned to their homes this week taking with them more than 125 pounds of fish, made up of six lunge and one pike. The lunge averaged twenty pounds each and were the result of a week's fishing in Stoco Lake. Other campmen, local and visiting, report the best fishing in some time.

Tweed Horticultural Society will hold its annual flower show at the Pavilion on Friday, August 20. The dry weather of July has had a disastrous effect on some flower gardens, but it is expected that there will be a fine display of cut flowers and plants in spite of this handicap.

Mr. Stan Palmateer of Tweed has been added to the Ontario Provincial Police Force with headquarters at Belleville.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop was taking a walk Saddday afternoon and a big fat man went passed fanning himself with his straw hat, being such a fat man he was pritty near round, and I said, O, pop, I wonder if I want to be that fat, aint that funny?

Well, it's fat, wich starts with the same letter, and in a way it may even be fearse, but it has its compensations just like evrything else, pop said. Ever since the first fat man played the part of interlocutor in the first primeval minstrel show it has been a common saying, both by word of mouth and by printed matter, that fat men are amusing. Well now by this time I myself has heard so often that they really believe it, wich makes it to all frients and purposes practically true, he said, and I said, Well punning, pop, what good does that do to fat men?

It's an unending source of satisfaction to them, I mean to the most depressing adversity, pop said. Now supposing a fat man's car gets a flat tire. A crowd of smiling faces immediitly surrounds him as he vents and puffs, and any doctor will tell yy hiss that nothing is better for the health than to be surrounded by smiling faces. Or suppose the fat man's face gets a tooth ake. Now nothing is more pleasnt to behold than a thin man with a swollen jaw, but a fat man unexpectedly pufted out still further is an occasion of general rejoicing, so you can imagine how his suffering is alleviated by the thought, I all the innocent merriment he is causing. So now maybe you'll think twice before you make a dogmatic statement about how fat you want to be, pop, I said. No sir, I still wouldn't.

TOO MUCH HUSH!

People say there is such a thing as too much silence. Often one wishes that modern machinery and motorcars could run with less noise especially in that place where there are heavy grades and yet perhaps there is a limit to silence. Absolutely silent highways and streets might be too dangerous unless there were devices to give the warning in some other way than by sound.

While undoubtedly there are occasions when sound of any kind is undesirable and distadvantageous, there are others when some sound seems more normal than utter silence. It is in regard to one of these occasions that the Christian Science Monitor speaks of under the title "Too Much Hush". The Monitor says:

"Already Chicagoans miss those whistles. There were three long, window-rattling ones for each bridge. And there are fifty-four bridges. That's 162 blasts just for one ship seeking its watery way through Chicago traffic. And there are from five to ten ships a day—perhaps eight on the average. That's 1296 toots. Take 1296 very loud toots out of the air along the Chicago River in one day and even with the noises remaining there's a void that stands out above the din and thrusts itself upon one.

"Chicagoans used to fuss awfully when their conversation and telephone calls and even wandering thoughts were rudely blown right out the window on the reverberations set up by a ship asking the bridge tender below with three steam-powered shrieks to "lift 'em up and let us by." But there's that stunning silence since the city told the ships not to announce their approach with raucous fanfare any more. The bridge tender at each end is supposed to keep watch and when a vessel heaves in sight looking as if she meant to keep on coming, to shoo autos and pedestrians off the spans and point them skyward, then rush to the phone and warn the next bridge tender that a customer approaches. The alarm is then passed along the river from bridge to bridge, leaving in its wake that earsplitting quiet which to those who have grown used—Though they didn't know it until now—to the marine chorus, is so shocking.

"Lake vessels, big and little, must have whistles, the rules say, that can be heard for three miles. Chicagoans miss those blasts and currents. They feel vaguely all day long that there's something wrong, something missing, a mistake made somewhere. There's an economic angle too. Commerce seems suddenly to have stopped. Noise, especially those bridge signals, meant business. Just to know that business goes on in a dignified hush isn't satisfying. Some residents say they are considering petitioning the city to let the ships blow just one little, decorous blow apiece. That, they sigh, would be better than nothing.

PROVINCIAL ELECTION

Announcement has been made that the Province of Ontario will hold an election this autumn on a date now to be set. This puts at rest any doubts of the Government's going to the country.

The voting will take place in the mid-autumn in all probability, a season when the people can spare the time to think on the issues of the day. The farmers will have garnered their crops and the dwellers in cities will have opportunity to attend meetings in a season when the weather is not too hot nor too cold. The election will take place in that part of the year when there are no other great attractions as there are in the summer time when holidays appeal, and in that season when the people have ended the autumn's undertakings and there is a general sense of satisfaction with the year's work.

The campaign bids fair to be one of great interest.

Small crimes always precede great one. Never have we seen timid innocence pass suddenly to extreme licentiousness. —Racine.

Nothing so cements and holds together all the parts of a society as faith or credit, which can never be kept up unless men are under some force or necessity of honestly paying what they owe to one another.—Cicero.

LEST WE FORGET

"Why do the nations so furiously rage together, and why do the people imagine a vain thing?"..

In Flanders field the poppies grow
Where many heroes rest below
Whose sacrifice has seemed in vain
To satiate men's greed for gain
If not for pelf, for selfish power
Make peaceful people to them cower
These heroes sacrificed their lives
To try and break the tyrant gyves
Of War, and get release
From envious hate for blissful peace
Dictators now on every hand
With satellites at their command
Are forced to be their latent tool
To generate despotic rule
With iron hand they would impart
The ethics of Bonaparte
And seem to try to emulate
The "Man of Destiny's" sad fate
Whose ruthlessness has shown before
The horrid ravages of war.
The sequence of their selfish aim
Will bring them just perverted fame.

Our dead are glorified, and yet,
Why cavil still: "Lest we forget".

FEW PEOPLE KNOW THAT THE ANCIENT INDIAN LANGUAGE OF THE MOHAWKS HAS BEEN PRESERVED

and is still spoken in the Mohawk community of Tyendinaga, close to Belleville, also at the settlement near Brantford where Captain Joseph Brant, War Chief of the Six Nations, led his people when the United States rejected loyalty to the British Crown. One descendant of Captain Brant, living on this Tyendinaga reserve states that she thinks in Mohawk and speaks and writes in English. Editor of the Trenton Courier Advocate has this to say on the subject:

"In a recent issue we told you that the Mohawks on Tyendinaga Reserve are permitted to speak their own language at will. We were referring at the time to a despatch that at Brantford efforts had been made or were being made to stamp out the Indian language.

We know for a fact there are Indians on the Deseronto reserve who cannot speak one word of English and when they appear in court an interpreter has to be on hand to speak for them. But there are not many Indians over there who are like that.

In Christ Church on the reserve the hymns are sung in the Mohawk tongue. This we know as we printed those hymns. And with many little words we found in these hymn sheets.

It is said that there is no profanity in the Mohawk language, but when you come to realize that the white man's profanity is a lot of words, also found in the bible, but phrased differently and in many cases sacrilligiously and that these very same words are in the Mohawk tongue, then it is more a matter of choice or a matter of cleaner speaking that prevents the Indian from swearing or taking His Maker's name in vain.

FRONT STREET CERTAINLY PRESENTS A MORE DECOROUS APPEARANCE by reason of the parallel parking which gives it a wide open spaces appearance. There is much more room in the centre of the road for motor cars to speed and freight trucks to manoeuvre. Not all Front Street business men approve of the change wholeheartedly. One prominent merchant remarked recently to a group of citizens surveying the street that the best advertisement Belleville ever had was its crowded business section. Visitors from out of town commented on the appearance and remarked that this was the busiest burg they had seen. Now said the merchant there is room for three cars in the centre of the road and speed has been increased giving pedestrians just that much more opportunity to be bumped. However, it has been truly said that a difference of opinion makes horse races—and also lawyers.

OTTAWA PARADE

WILFRID EGGLESTON

One of the boys in the Press Gallery had a report from his editor which asked, in effect:

"Which Governor General of Canada was it that broke his neck in his sporting days?"

This stumped him for a few minutes. He decided to appeal to a walking encyclopaedia — none other than the former prime minister of Canada and re-affirmed Conservative leader, R. B. Bennett.

His note asking for help came back swiftly ,endorsed something like this:

"It was the Earl of Minto, but the accident was not quite so serious as that." Mr. Bennett had not failed him.

xxx xxx xxx

The member of the Gallery pursued his researches further, consulting Lord Tweedsmuir's life of the former Governor General.

"In the Grand National of 1876 he very nearly came by his end. He was riding 'Zero', a limber bay with magnificent shoulders, much lauded by the public," wrote the then John Buchan.

"Here is his own account. The horse was going splendidly, and coming to Valentine's Brook I got a real good steadier at him—'Diagonal' and 'Jacka' were leading, and I was next to them. My left stirrup fence exactly in his stride and never touched it, and, as far as I know, tumbled head over heels on landing. I jumped the fence almost touching the left-hand flag, and, looking back, found Tom Cannon standing by me, who waited back for the weighing room scramble. On our way we heard that Joe Cannon had won on 'Royal' at which I was very pleased, for besides his fine horsemanship he was an excellent fellow.'

"Melgund," continued Tweedsmuir "or rather Earl (as Lord Melgund) "thought he had only lacerated internally a muscle, but Sir James Paget, who was telegraphed for, confirmed the view of the other doctors that he had literally broken his neck. "You are one of those extraordinary people," said the great surgeon afterwards, "who have broken their necks and recovered. Your backbone should be very valuable." Melgund offered to leave it to him in his will. "Oh," said Sir James, "I shall be dead long before you, but the College of Surgeons will be very glad to have it." After being practically a cripple for months Melgund consulting Mr. Wharton Hood, the bone-setter, who advised exercise, and his own will power and the coming of the hunting season revived him."

M. J. Coldwell of Regina, now associated with J. S. Woodsworth in the leadership of the C.C.F. in Canada, first entered public life as a returned man in 1921 at the invitation of a group of ratepayers in the municipality of his school in the Saskatchewan capital. The modest office led, by contention, to a seat in parliament and a post at the forefront of the Farmer-Socialist group in Canada.

He shows much promise as a leader, according to those who have worked him. He is one of the clearest, most fluent, readiest speakers in the House of Commons. He is well-read and has a logical mind.

That he has also the stamina which public life so much demands is indicated by the strenuous life he lived for two or three years prior to coming to Ottawa, as well as since. He was principal of his Regina school, taking classes five days a week, speeding every week-end campaigning, using the aeroplane as much as possible, to do distant parts of Saskatchewan. He owns a great deal to his wife, who unfortunately has been an invalid for several years.

Coldwell comes of high Tory stock in the county of Devon, England, and heard numerous debates in his own home as a boy on political and religious questions. Possibly as a re-action to the conservatism of his youth he developed into a marked radical. Hating war he became a pacifist and a socialist.

He is a great lover of literature, both fiction and economic. He is fond of walking, swimming and rowing. In younger days he was devoted to rugby football. For recreation, like so many other M.P.'s, he reads detective yarns. He is fond of the theatre and the best in music.

Coldwell was christened 'Major' James William, the first being a family name. He tries to drop the 'Major', usually, because of its military flavour, but it gets into print in spite of that. One of his political opponents, reading from parliamentary guide, took him up task one day about his pacifist doctrines, and arguing that it was inconsistent for such a man to flaunt military rank in his biographical notice. The laugh was on the critic, however, when Coldwell explained what the Major really stood for.

Jarvis said nothing. Slowly he got to his feet and walked toward Eden Harris. Then, without warning, he struck out at him viciously. But the young physician was apparently prepared. With surprising swiftness he blocked Jarvis' wild swing.

"Don't be a fool," he said quietly. "And don't make your presence here any more unpleasant than you have already."

Avoiding Judith's gaze, Francis Jarvis pocketed his hands, drawing quickly he took up his hat and stick, and left the apartment. Wearily Judith sank into a chair. "Oh, but I'm glad you came!" she breathed thankfully.

As much as I'd like to pose in the role of Galahad," Harris assured her, "I'm afraid your friend would be perfectly harmless. Even if I hadn't arrived on the scene I'm sure you could have squelched him." He shrugged softly to himself. "Yes . . . Francis Jarvis is one of those lamb who goes around with the armor of a gentle alcoholic haze." He stopped down before Judith, folding his legs under him tailor-fashion. "Tell me, what have you been doing since I succeeded you in that restaurant?"

Judith laughed. "Oh, I've been ordering men out of my apartment."

"So I see."

She looked down at him affectionately, seriously. "You've been bored to death."

"Wondering whether you needed a doctor?"

"I wouldn't admit that."

"Have you forgiven the—the boy friend?"

X X X

Judith was silent a moment, and Harris said, "I'm sorry. I shouldn't have asked that."

"Why not? I'll answer it. I— I'm afraid I haven't, quite."

"Did you think that Jarvis might help you to forget him?"

"Oh, no!" Judith turned to him quickly. "You see, the day after Steve went to his office I decided to give him my name and address, because I thought it was only fair that I haven't seen him from that day until this."

"Evidently he mistook your fine purpose."

Judith nodded. "Yes . . ."

"Well!" Harris reached into his pocket, brought out a well-worn pipe and tobacco pouch. "What do you say we talk about something pleasant for a change? Even if I smoke a very reprehensible pipe?"

"Yes to the first question and no to the second," laughed Judith.

What had promised to be an unpleasant evening turned out to be a thoroughly delightful one. Released from his arduous duties, Eden Harris relaxed entirely in Judith's company. When Anne Benis dropped in, an hour later, they found the two in the kitchen making candy.

"I'm speechless," Virginia exclaimed. "I never again expected to see a male and female in the kitchen making candy. I thought that had been replaced by the quaint custom of male and female making whoopee."

Eden Harris grinned. "Judith and I are very old fashioned in our ways."

And when Harris had gone, Virginia whispered to Judith, "Darling, I like that man!"

"So do I," Judith admitted slowly. "I . . . like him, too."

With the hour that she'd found a staunch friend in Eden Harris, Judith's whole philosophy change as the days went by. Virginia Benti noticed it almost at once. Judith, she felt sure, was coming out of it now. I was afraid for a while that she wouldn't. But she is!"

"You mean that doctor?" asked Bob innocently.

"I don't mean anything—yet," said his wife.

She would never have been so sure almost a month later, however, on this very day Steve telephoned Judith, asked her to meet him for luncheon, and she had refused then?"

"Well, sometimes the girl goes off the deep end."

Judith smiled slowly. "I haven't done that, Steve."

"Of course you'd say that."

The remark was like a whiplash. "I'm not asking you to believe it, Stephen. Because what I do now is none of your affair."

X X X

Her swift anger seemed to soften him. "But Judith, I . . . doesn't the fact that I still care what you do —doesn't that mean anything to you?" Discreet it was, that I still feel the way I always did?"

"I don't know what it means, Steve. All I know is that we came to the end of things for the two of us."

"But that isn't true," he said quickly. "Judith, you've had a shock. It looks now as if I'll be able to do what I wanted all along. Marry you on an income that will let you quit your job."

Judith's blaks of breath was sharp and clear, as though someone had tightened a belt at her waist. There it was! Suddenly, unaccountably, here was the thing they had both wanted. But what frightened her, what sent the blood from Judith Howard's face, was not the sudden realization that Stephen Fowler was offering her a marriage that meant a whole new life relieved from office routine. What frightened her was the knowledge that his proposal struck no ecstacy into her being. She liked Steve, yes. Perhaps she still loved him. But something was gone now. Something had been lost, and the fearful thing was that she wasn't sure it could be found again.

"I . . . . I should have known, Steve. I'll have to think about it."

"Think about it! Why, Judith, we've been thinking about it for four years. We—"

Judith nodded slowly. "I know, Steve. But sometimes we change. We grow apart."

It was painful to see how all the assurance went out of Stephen Fowler when she said that. Judith sank back against a chair, to hide his hand, to tell him that this was what she'd wanted, to tell him that her hours away from him had been a hell as well.

But something wiser than her heart kept her silent. She kept shaking stubbornly, "I've got to get away and try to see what's happened to me."

At 2 o'clock she left a tearful Steve; and that night she hurried from the office and met Avoiding Virginia. She held to her seclusion into the next day, going on for so long before Virginia had come to her door. But at 5 o'clock young Mrs. Bent sought her out, shoved a newspaper in front of her. "You may as well see this now as later, Judith."

At first glance she did not see the significance of the news story to which Virginia pointed. Then suddenly, with a catch in her throat, she remembered that this was the deal in which Steve had been engaged.

"It's quite a mess," she heard Virginia saying. "I'm afraid it implicated Steve."

Judith dropped the newspaper on her desk. "But how can they? After he did was sell them the pipe."

"I don't know how much graft, darling. All I know is that they have, for a while, put Steve himself in a guilty—and nothing's been proved yet, except that Steve's office and city hall made money on the deal."

"Virgie, will you tell Mr. Borden I can't be home for dinner?"

"Where are you going?"

Judith faced her friend resolutely. "I'm going to Steve, of course."

"Listen, Judith! Don't be a fool. If Steve's innocent, then he'll come out of this all right. If he's not, then you don't want to be mixed up in it."

"But I do want to mix up in it. Doesn't it occur to you that maybe he got mixed up in it tryng to help me make enough money to marry me!"

With that she left the speechless Virginia. Downstairs she hailed a taxi—and was soon at the office of Steve's partner, needed to talk with Steve's himself. By the afe went to Steve himself. By the excitement she had forgotten that it was the noon hour, and she found the place almost deserted—except for Stephen Fowler! At the far end of the big room he sat at one of the salesmen's desks, his head in his hands, oblivious to her approach.

"Steve . . . ." she said softly.

He looked up suddenly. "Judith! What are you doing here?"

He smiled weakly. "Oh, sure. I'm in the bonegrow theoretically. But the bars don't go up."

"Just a minute, Judith. There is something to it. More than even you know. Some of it didn't take any money on the deal, but I did know that somebody in the highway department was going to make a profit at the expense of city taxpayers."

"But, Steve, I don't see how."

Judith's eyes widened unbelievingly. "You know there were things to do that, Steve?"

"Of course you'd say that."

The remark was like a whiplash. "I'm not asking you to believe it, Stephen. Because what I do now is none of your affair."

Stingy Husband Kept Half His Income a Secret From His Wife

"I can't understand him," wails a lady who has been married seven years and kept house for her husband, two children and herself, all on $100 a month salary. In addition, she has paid insurance, managed two weeks' vacation for the husband every summer, and contrived in the seven years to put by a little nest-egg.

To do these things, the wife tells me, she has endured many hardships, some of which seem foolish to me, such as not having a doctor when she was ill, and neglecting her teeth rather than spend money to go to a dentist. She has never had a day's vacation, though her husband has two weeks regularly every summer.

Ten days ago she made the discovery that the husband for whom she had skimped and scraped had an income of $200 instead of the $100 he claimed he was getting. His salary, it seems, was always more than the $100 he said he received when they were married. Naturally, the wife is hurt and distraught, and begins her letter:

"I can't understand him."

Whatever else this lady may have to complain of about her husband's unfashionable ways, she should be glad that against him, because no woman really understands no husband, any more than any man really understands his wife. Perhaps that's part of the fun of marriage; they have for each other, guessing not being such a poor sport after all.

There are thousands of men who never confide in their wives about their business affairs, amount of salary or whether their lives are insured. Don't ask me why. I know only, from the hundreds of letters I've received on this subject, that it's so.

The verdict of the wives is that secretiveness gives their husbands a sense of power. But it's an injustice under which the wives rage eloquent.

So many states there is a law which permits uncollected bank deposits, after the lapse of a number of years, to be used for bank building purposes. A person, indulging in the stingy luxury of having a secret bank account, may visualize a bank he has helped to build while his family goes without necessities.

There are a great many reasons why men do not confide their business details to their wives, sometimes, as in the case of this husband, it looks as if they were stingy. Often, I suspect, it is the discovery that the husband is making twice the income his wife supposed brings indignation instead of joy.

Instead of giving him a wifely piece of her mind, let's hope the wife realizes the sum total amount of energy into consulting a dentist and saving what's left of her teeth is neglected teeth. And I hope she'll insist—sweetly but firmly—on having a vacation during the summer is over.

According to the wife's letter, their marriage had been conspicuously happy until the discovery of the extra hundred per month leaked out. To give the husband the benefit of the doubt, however, this the rest of us, he hated to be put through the third degree. With that much money he could have in fact may have been keeping the family Colcondes as a magnificent surprise.

Whatever was his reason, the secret-bigger-salary is a thousand times better than the reverse of the medal. Suppose, for example, he is behind his income one and confided that he had an accumulated debt of several thousand dollars, instead of having to live on the budget even more carefully?

Eleanore Whitney Smart Model for her trim, well-cured figure

By Helen Follett

Excessive thinness is no more to be desired than an over-accent of adipose tissue! Fashion, demanding a figure of standard weights and measurements, is a health promoter.

The girl whose figure is not much above or below "silver" should see energy. She shouldn't stand if she can sit, she should snatch rest periods during the day and go to bed early at night. Social activities must be cut down for women realies that talking is a tiring business that takes a toll of vitality. Talkers wear out their faces as well as their friends' nervous systems.

Sunshine is the great help when one wants to put fat on one's ribs and flesh upon the appetite. Nourishing food eaten slowly, will put out sharp elbows and add curves where curves should be. A little more butter on the bread will produce a better result from the bathroom scales. The little "slimpsy" must have a balanced diet, but she requires a larger intake of fats and starches. Three or four tablespoons after dinner will hurry up the campaign for adipose padding.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Aiden)

CAMPUS CREDIT will go to the girl who wears a charming suit of black velveteen, the Tyrolean jacket featuring stitched pockets and novelty silver buttons. There is a white satin sweater blouse.

A GOOD IDEA for Autumn costs is that of having detachable fur trimmings. A fitted coat in a black nubby tweedy fabric has a twin scarf effect in chinchilla-dyed fox, held at the throat by a large suede belt. The scarf is detachable and is nice enough to be worn with dresses and other coats or suits.

ALWAYS EXCITING are the first frocks of Autumn. A nice example is the one-piece short bolero with scalloped edge, is lined with pale blue satin to match the blue satin blouse and sash-girdle.

THE WHISPER of taffeta still rustles through the mode. A lovely evening frock is of black taffeta made with a very fitted waist and wide, full skirt. The heart-shaped neckline and the hem are banded with jewelled embroidered ribbon bandings.

A BIG POINT is made of afternoon frocks in the new collections. A charming model is of a silk jersey with a gilet of white crepe chine. Sleeves and hem are embroidered in silver.

Still Queen of the night is the white evening frock. A beauty is of white silk carmen, entirely embroidered in bands of silver foil-beads around hem and the deep decolletage. It is worn with a trailing ostrich scarf of blue shaded to grey.

Save Energy If You Are Slender

by the business period. A basket of vegetables, some fruit, and flowers were sent with Mr. Barrager to Belleville, for some needy family and for some sick person respectively.

Seventy cents collection was received and the meeting closed by repeating the Mizpah in unison.

The hostess then served a very delightful lunch which was heartily enjoyed by all.

Wise to Tell a Child Process of Travelling

Fears Incurred in Childhood Likely to Stay With Him Forever, Says Grenelle

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Bessie and Bobby loved to travel. The process was a mysterious, important and very complicated.

At first they were anxious to have a part in it. "Let me buy my own ticket, please, Daddy?" Bobby begged.

But Father wouldn't. He said there wasn't time.

"Give me my ticket, Mummy. I want to give it to the conductor myself," Bessie demanded.

But Mother wouldn't. "You'd lose it. And then what would you do?"

"What would happen?"

"You might be put off the train. Father might be arrested."

So Bessie stopped begging for her ticket to hold. The responsibility was too great. But she could never be replaced. Bessie imagined, from what Mother said, that the conductor would take Father off to jail.

Bessie was always very travelsick after that, until she saw Mother or Father give the tickets to the conductor and saw him march away apparently satisfied.

Travelling had become a terrible business.

Bobby followed Father about and wanted to help with checking the baggage. But Father was always short of time, and it was too complicated, Father said.

Bobby began to see that it was too complicated. He felt that when they were tops on the train, when the train had started, and the conductor had visited away satisfied. Father had accomplished something really tremendous, something very few men would be capable of accomplishing—something that Bobby was afraid he would never be able to cope with himself, even when he was entirely and completely grown up.

So it came about that when Bobby and Bessie were old enough to travel alone, they were afraid to.

They still have that awful feeling, when the conductor comes for your ticket, that perhaps you haven't got them, after all! That's sinking feeling, that horrible cropping the feeling of guilt and shame? I do."

Not So Fair to Them

Really, it isn't fair to represent travelling or any other practical business as such a tremendous undertaking to children, even if Father does get all sorts of fussing around giving orders. Can't the figure out some other way of making Father feel important?

Why not start 20 minutes or half an hour before the time, and take the whole thing slowly and carefully? Let us try the matter-ing! Explain to the children how much their tickets will cost. Count the money in their hands—in sight and mine is not too early to begin teaching the children how to buy tickets.

It makes them realize that railroads don't saw him, materials of literature in a book, but has some practical side. Explain to them, likewise, it gives them an understanding of what things cost.

Then you will have your difficulty. You will not be popular with the man behind the ticket windows But never mind the slight delay. The repetition will make only slightly his attitude or that of others waiting to buy tickets. And it will lose his job, nor the others their trains.

Then the children engage all responsibility for their own tickets and select a safe place to keep them.

Canada's delegation to the assembly of the League of Nations which meets in Geneva September 13, will consist of Senator Raoul Dandurand; Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of National Revenue and Hon. Vincent Massey, High Commissioner in London, Mr. King stated. Senator Dandurand, Minister without Portfolio and government leader in the senate, is already in Europe.

National Harbors Board Site

Mr. King also disclosed decisions had been reached on the sites for the proposed new Supreme Court Building and the National War Memorial. The site will be on a cliff overlooking the Ottawa River behind the present group of dominion federation buildings, and the War Memorial across Elgin Street. Place at the head of a widened Elgin Street is the Cenotaph, around approaches of certain measures within his control.

Announcement of an early general election in Ontario has led Mr. King to discuss the line of addressing three political picnics in that province. In this he is following a rule he has consistently adhered to since he became leader of the Federal party of remaining strictly aloof from provincial politics.

Powers of Taxation

The Royal Confederation Mr. King is about to make will have the task of reviewing allocation of taxation powers and sources of revenue between the Dominion and Provincial governments set out in the British North America Act, King stated. FOXBORO AHEAD IN FINAL SERIES BY BEATING LATTA

Win First Game 6-4 Behind Fine Hurling of "Bud" Wilkins

CALLAGHAN SHELLED

Foxboro Threw Away Many Scoring Chances in Contest

Latta, Aug. 14 (Special)—Foxboro took the first game of the Ontario League finals here Thursday when right on the locals' home lot they cuffed the offerings of two Latta hurlers for an even dozen safeties to score a rather impressive victory over their old enemy, Latta.

Foxboro's diminutive one-man pitching staff, "Bud" Wilkins, set the homesters down with seven scattered safeties and being afforded splendid support in the pinches had very little trouble after the third inning, although in the last frame the homesters staged a rally which threatened to pull the game out of the fire when two safeties netted them one run, but a fast double play executed by the visitors put a fitting climax to a real exciting and crowd-pleasing game.

Callaghan Derailed

After being blanked for the first two innings, the heavy hitting Foxboro crew began to clout Callaghan's offerings real hard and in the seventh with two aboard and none away Ray Hall mauled the hurler was derricked in favour of Youngs, Latta's curve-ball hurler, in the six innings he pitched, Callaghan was touched for nine safeties, struck out eight and walked two. Young in his relief role gave up three hits, fanned two and walked one. "Bud" Wilkins ran into trouble in the first inning when Latta scored a run without a hit as Hall was hit, stole second and scored on two successive fielder's outs. Latta scored two more in the third on two errors and a walk coupled with Simpson's double. From then until the ninth, Bud set the Latta boys down almost in order. Bud gave up seven hits, struck out an equal number and walked two.

Four Base-Running

Williams wielded the biggest bat as he was responsible for four of the poor base-running no less than five being caught off bases, two of them at third, and both of them would have been scored on the next play. Honors figured prominently in the scoring, only two of Latta's quota being earned, while Foxboro were gifted with one run by sloppy fielding.

Williams fielded the biggest bat for the winners, collecting a double and two singles, while Gary Bowles and Breese got a two-bagger apiece with Gowe and Orr collecting two safeties over the route.

The second game will be played on the Foxboro diamond this Saturday afternoon. A big turnout is assured as both teams have provided a real good drawing card.

BATTLE ROYAL WON BY PAYNE AT LOCAL ARENA

Best Card Since Almost Took Over in This City

GARNER WINS TWO

Ted Feilding Earns Poes of Crowd in Downing Billy The Kid

A smarling scowling Lion of the North strutting his stuff and treating his chest in true Tarzanian style, Ted Fielding, in other words lived up to advance notices as being a bold bad man last night at the arena when he took the measure of Billy the Kid, gentleman wrestler, in two falls out of three in the main go of a fine wrestling card that was easily the best the simon pures have produced to date.

The largest crowd of the season alternately cheered and jeered as the "Lion" with a typical feline snarl protested to the censure of Billy's chest in a victorious tattoo as the session demanded.

It was a fast and furious bout from gong to gong. Both Fielding and the "Kid" are speedy wrestlers and the three falls lacked nothing in the line of excitement. The crowd worked the wrath of the customers early in the first fall with his snarling antics. They jeered him as he protested; they jeered him in victory.

Plenty of Action.

There was plenty of action in all three falls. The boys cut loose with everything they had and at times fanned the enthusiasm into pandemonium of Toronto, around the ring with more or less reckless abandon.

Fielding won the first fall after twenty minutes of hectic mileling, when he secured the "Kid" with a series of flying tackles, then pinned him to the mat before he could say "uncle". But the second chukker saw the "Kid" again apply his aggressive tactics. He hung the "Lion" side on the ropes in a fantastic series after strong minded of gruelling matwork, then pinned him with a body slam to win the fall. The "Lion" attacked the "Kid" after the bell and all three men in the ring rolled around in a grotesque display of threshing arms and legs.

Twenty minutes of "anything goes" in a wrestling setting which saw every hold in the wrestling calendar and a few that haven't used by the scowling "Lion", his aggressive tactics again secured for him the favor of the crowd but he finally came through with an aerial spin and body slam that won him the fall and the bout. The crowd stood and cheered him as he strutted and swaggered to the dressing room.

Wins Two Bouts.

Red Garner, popular light heavyweight champion, proved himself an iron man when he entered the ring in preliminary for Ed Gazley who could not appear, and then went on to beat Ukrainian, Jim Timoski after fifteen minutes of smart matwork, then appeared again in the semi-final against Eddy Payne to win the odd fall out of three for his second successive win of the evening. Payne, who repulled Garner about fifteen pounds in weight, proved to be a fast, clever and agile wrestler. He extended the champion to the limit and easily gave Garner the hardest and toughest opposition he has met in a Belleville ring. He took the fall in nineteen minutes. Red came back and with his usual speed and wrestling savvy threw Payne after nine minutes of speedy chuckholding to body slam. Payne almost smashed the redhead aplenty in the first minutes of the third fall but Garner, who, for some reason or other, back to win a popular verdict. Payne received the best of the gazaits and will be welcomed back.

Hold Battle Royal.

A mad mauling melange of flailing arms and legs as five wrestlers cut loose in the battle royal which saw no holds barred, every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost. The boys banged up early on, the "Lion" after he had flipped Garner on four times and lost the ring side by means of some nice teamwork threw him out of the contest.

Red Garner was the next to fall beneath the gangling tactics, Garner was pinned and decided to call it a night, not because he wanted to but because he had to. The genial man wrestler, Billy the Kid, victim of the "Lion's" vicious tactics in the ring took the measure of Eddy Payne to win the bout.

The card on the whole was a pleasing one and was well received by the large crowd present. Ladies' night brought out a goodly number of the fair sex, who demonstrated that they can wrestling bout as well as the men.

Results:

Teddy Fielding, 176, threw Billy the Kid, 176, Toronto, two out of three falls.

Red Garner won from Eddie Payne Port Perry, two out of three falls.

Red Garner threw Jim Timoski.

TRENTON TO HAVE JUNIOR PLAYOFF

Given Berth in Junior "A" Series For the Provincial Title

Trenton Aug. 14 (Special)—Sport writers were informed yesterday that Trenton would be represented by a junior "A" team in the coming O.B.A.A. playdowns and in all probability meet an aggregation from Belleville in the initial round. With manhall enjoying an excellent season in this man' down—thanks to George Cobley and Arthur Norting—this man's town—thanks to junior organization and although a definite lineup is yet to be hazed Trenton will be backed by an able bunch of lads.

CORBINS DEFEAT BELL SARGENTS IN FIRST GAME

J. Bawden Hurls Shutout Ball All The Way to Win 14-0—

DIAMOND SOGGY

Corbins Collect 15 Hits And Score in Every Innings But One

Corbin Locks are away to a flying start in their series with Bell-Sargents for the championship of the Intermediate "A" group in this city and the right to enter the Provincial playdowns. Last night at Coleman Flats on a diamond that was not conducive to good ball, the Bawden smashed crew easily defeated the "Lockmen" from Pinnacle Street by a score of 14 to 0 and with Johnny Bawden reaching the heights, that he did in the playdowns of last year, that resulted in a championship for the Percival Stores. Bawden limited the opposition to four hits, two of them secured by Art Cole and at all times was master of the situation.

On the other hand, Eddie Schriedon who hurled for Bell ball all season did not seem to be able to keep the ball out of the alley with the result that Corbins saw fit to bastard to all corners of the pasture. He yielded in all 15 hits made up of homers, doubles and triples and best of all the Corbins were hitting their blows in the clutches, a condition sadly lacking in the closing innings by Bell. The contest, scored in every inning but the first and eighth St. Dennis and Speedy St. Louis, the top and bottom of the batting order got the Corbins off to a start with St. Dennis getting three out of five and St. Louis, Hannah and Reid hit for three triples while St. Dennis and Hannah got by the circuit. Schriedon's pocket out one and struckout but one, while Bawden never walked a batter and has five strikes to his credit.

Diamond is Soggy

The fielding was not on a par with other contests this year but the cause of this downfall was the condition or the diamond. It was wet in the outfield and the gardeners had a hard time in holding their feet in the slippery going. Bawden retired the side in order in the first, eighth and ninth and only four men reached him in the other frames so that is hurling deluxe. There was a real fielding features, the mill run of softball being played with Corbins having a distinct edge in error departments. Bell-Sargents have had a long layoff after being put out of the city series by Point Anne and it is expected they will be much better in a series of games, that gave the Corbins a playoff victory last season, where they rose to dizzy heights losing the game by six runs but winning the round by the same margin.

We have seen a lot of thrills in sports and we wonder if some can remember away back.... "Daw" Whalen slipping two goals around the post at Brockville on wet soggy ice in the beginning of the season to defeat Belleville in the O.H.A. Hagerman rifled one high and far away in Guelph to open two rival O.H.A. provincial championship is Belleville over the Walkerville Chicks in Essex. Teddy Gallagher, star left hander of the Kingston Frontenacs fought one down through by Jack Ouellett and blasted it so far that Gallagher Chevy did not even bother to go after it.....The brilliant catches made by "Wicky" Bass, Belleville's centre fielder, in the Intermediate series, when he whirled 10 batters in a three game series to win the playoff.....The great times the Belleville hockey team had when they played Niagara Falls Cataracts in the game fame of four roads covered with this ice and snow down in the Peninsula and the final game in Toronto, won by the Falls on a fluke shot after Goalie Jackson had stopped 60 shots.....The great series with the Toronto Millerals, when the betting odds were 10 to 1 that Belleville would not win a game in Toronto and the Millerals tamed them here and in Peterboro.....The excitement playing hockey games in Cornwall in the-times of the Big Six group when everything went and every man for himself.....and so on into the night. Those were the happy days.

Did you know, that Belleville hockey team for three successive years defeated three Kingston teams on their home ice by the identical score 4-4. That was when Kingston had the Frontenacs, Quecks and R.M.C. playing in the Big Six group, Brockville, Cornwall and Belleville made up the other three entries.

Some great horse racing has been given the fans in this district through the years with the performance of Tod Gale in his first start on Ontario tracks being the most outstanding of the year. Mitchell's brought this green pacer to Belleville for his first start and was highly flabbered in the second heat heading up the track, when the word was given. Metcalfe set him to reaching the second half and he simply ripped up ground, rounded the field and came home a winner by some five lengths in 2.12. That mile was probably around 2.05 for the horse from wire to wire separately timed. It was funny to see the green horse to know so much about starting. When he heard the bell he would dig in his toes and stop in nearly his length. Most peculiar for a green pacer but he was a good one, probably one of the best that has been in this district. Other great pacers were Dayspring, who was probably a 2.05 pacer while peak when we saw him race and Manuella owned by the late William Peak and the late George Powell respectively. Another great exhibition of speed was witnessed when Romola owned by Charlie Stewart raced at the old fair ground going down to defeat but made the bottom turn after being given the word.

Football has made rapid strides in the past few years in this district, primarily being fostered by the Collegiate Institute, later branching out to include other teams. The best showing of any football team in this city was that made by the University of Toronto Schools a real-good team going down to defeat in two bitterly contested games. In the first game the worst of the tangling in that series irrespective of anything that might be said to the contrary, Roland Polzwell and Jack Morgan, members of that team were on a par, Polzwell being the ace backfielder and Morgan a staunch lineman. Prospects are bright for a good intermediate squad to represent this city in O.R.F.U. competition this season and football is a grand sport for fall and winter pastime.

In the past few years since leaving this desk, the lacrosse game has come to the fore but as always pays tribute to the old game that laid the preference to the game played in a big way here. Some great players came from this district including Fred Peters, Bill Hamilton and others. The current team in the box game is making it interesting for Peterborough and Peterborough is assured of a playoff spot and with Harry Moore, a former resident of note, at the head of the coaching job, the team should be in for a terrific real competition for other contestants in this series.

In closing, the horse races at the Belleville Fair should be the best held here in some years. Our friend, Jack Lafferty of the Parks Board, and chairman of the Grounds Committee is working every hour to have the racing strip in splendid condition and R. H. Ketchenon, the general secretary, has been promised a fine field of horses for every event. There will be three days of racing at the Fair with two events for each day.

Cards Win 12 Out of Sixteen To Move into Third Place And Threaten Giants, Cubs

All Has Been Accomplished Without Help of Dizzy Dean

LEADERS ALL WIN

Yankees Restricted to Three Hits by Rose of A's

By SID FEDER

The all-important, one-and-only Dizzy Dean, is beginning to look like a fifth wheel on the Cardinals wagon—and a somewhat mussed fifth wheel, at that.

Not that the great one isn't needed. If he was in there with his zeal stuff, the pin house gang would be right in the thick of things for the National League pennant chase.

But they're winning games with out him—and that's what they pay off on. They've come up with some good enough pitching from half a dozen other supposedly ineffective performers. The least of whom is Grandpa Jesse Haines, and in the usual few weeks, have started a drive that may yet make it tough for the pace-setting Chicago Cubs.

While Dean's surge, a comeback of no mean proportions, has carried the Cards from fourth to third place, won twelve and tied one in sixteen starts, and left them only two games back of the second-place Giants. And in all that stretch, Dizzy hasn't been as useful as a fur coat in a sudden cooling. In both his starts in that 16-game run, he has been belted out.

Dizzy Dean's Arm Fails.

To state all the facts, Dizzy isn't right. He hasn't been right since the all-star game. But even without him, the Cards are doing all right. The burden has fallen on Paul Dean, Bill Lee, Roy Bob Weiland, Grandpa Haines, Si Johnson, and Lon Warneke, relief ace of Mike (One-Man Team) Ryba. Of these, Weiland and Johnson have been the St. Louis life-savers.

Weiland started four games during the run. Johnson opened three. Weiland, pitched three complete, won three and lost none. Johnson took three and lost one.

Weiland did it again yesterday, pitching a 10-hitter to top the hopeless Pirates 4-3, thereby stretching the Cards' current undefeated streak to seven in a row—six wins and one tie.

Did Not Gain Ground.

The Cards, however, did not pick up any ground on the leaders by the win, since both the Cubs and the Giants won. The Cubs, maintaining their 6½-game lead, pasted a fourmaking record for the season by trampling the Reds 22 counts 10 to 6, with a 21-hit attack.

Carl Hubbell pitched his best game of the season, a six-hit, nine-strikeout performance, and the Giants thumbed the Phillies, 5-0.

The Yankees, poison to first division clubs, were trimmed 4-3 by the last-place Athletics, who stopped the league-leaders with three hits.

The Pirates did not cut their 11½-game lead, however, since the second-place Red Sox took a 3-0 beating at the hands of Pete Appleton and the Washington Senators. The Tigers took advantage of the Red Sox's setback to pull up to a second-place tie with a 7-4 win over the Browns.

Cleveland's Indians knocked the White Sox down to fourth place with a 7-3 beating.

The Reds's six-hitter gave the Bees a 5-2 win over the Dodgers.

One Never Can Tell

By MARY LINDA HELFANT
McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

"Why aren't you a raving beauty?" Phyl Dalton scolded the girl in her mirror Saturday late in August. "You're too little, too slim, and your features are too irregular. But you're rather sweet," Phyl admitted naively. "I hope he'll like you!" she added wistfully. The girl was not aware of it, but at that moment she came winsomely near to real beauty.

"I wish I had a closetful of jewelry clothes to choose from," she sighed. "Still, I'm lucky to have a new dress at all. Phyl carefully smoothed an imaginary wrinkle from her gray cotton crepe. "A Parisian model from Bowman's bargain basement!" she giggled. "But it's a darling for $2.98."

The Phyl who greeted Bob Munroe in the stuffy boarding-house parlor, though somewhat flushed and breathless, was her usual sedate self.

Until he had come to take charge of the advertising at Whimsker's the office had meant to Phyl merely the place where she typed countless pages each day for $15 a week to pay her room and board and the tuition for the Saturday afternoon art class at Bradley's. But with Bob's coming it had become an enchanted garden. All the girls were openly wild about the new manager but Phyl worshiped him from afar. At first Bob Munroe had little time for the social amenities. One afternoon he literally ran into Phyl as they were leaving the office building.

"How careless of me, Miss Dalton," he apologized.

Phyl wondered if he could hear the hammerlike beating of her heart. She wanted to say something clever, but could only stammer, "Oh, it's quite all right."

Quite naturally he fell into step beside her. When they parted at her boarding house a bewildered Phyl had accepted his invitation to lunch the next day. More luncheons had followed, but this was her first evening with him.

She glanced over at a laughing party of young people seating themselves at the next table. Then she stifled a startled exclamation. One of the girls, a vivid, painted creature, wore a dress exactly like her own!

Phyl was silent on the way to the theatre. Was Bob aware of her bargain basement outfit? Oh, if only he hadn't noticed!

But the play, also, was hopelessly spoiled for poor Phyl. One of the ushers was wearing a black dress made just like hers.

"Let's have a couple of dances at Thirty's roof garden, Phyllis," Bob suggested when the play had finally ended. Phyl wanted to plead a headache, but just then Mr. Cransley, one of the bookkeepers from Winsmker's, passed them with his wife.

"Good play, wasn't it?" Bob greeted them pleasantly. But Phyl could only mumble a choked "How do you do?" Mrs. Cransley, faded and middle-aged, wore a stand-collared duplicate of her own gown!

"Clever fellow, Cransley," Bob said when they had gone on. "I've heard he has a hard time getting by since his illness last year. Mrs. Cransley is pretty, isn't she? Good dresser, too."

"How he is making fun of me," Phyl thought. "No, he isn't that kind. Perhaps he is trying to make me feel better."

At Thirty, Phyl forgot the humiliation which had almost spoiled her wonderful evening. She loved dancing. How beautifully Bob danced!

A little later while they were dancing, they almost collided with a young couple, somewhat worse for the evening's gaiety. As Bob swung her exactly out of their way, Phyl noticed that the girl, a fuzzy-haired blonde, wore what had become to Phyl a nightmare in gray, a gown like her own.

She was silent, and preoccupied on the way home and had a hard time keeping the tears back.

"He'll never ask me out again," she told herself sadly. "Of course he knew before that I was poor, but a man enjoys going out with a well-dressed girl, and not a fright!" Phyl was growing more and more dejected. She recalled his almost morose silence at the theatre. Even now he was distressed! But they were already at her door, and she must thank him.

"Thank you so much," she began in a small, rather pathetic voice. "I've had a most delightful time."

"That's good. Phyl, will you—" Bob paused, as if at a loss for words. The girl looked up at him in surprise. "Phyllis, won't you," he began onto more, "don't you go with me to Symphony Hall tomorrow? Mother and the girls are coming in to hear Zimbalist, and I want you to meet them."

Phyl could only nod blindly.

"And dear," he continued softly, "please wear this pretty dress again tomorrow. You look so sweet in it!"

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE Close

Toronto, Aug. 14 — The week's gains in the Toronto market were increased substantially in a lively session today, the gold particularly reflecting the recent cheerful note. Gains were general in the secondary and junior golds while the seniors were quiet but firm. Higher prices ruled for the banking, utility, food, beverage and steel issues and changes in the western oils and the base metals, though narrower, were mainly on the upside.

Buffalo-Ankerite moved up ¾ to 10¾ and gains of ¼ to 15 cents were showing at the close for Siscoe, Lapa, Pamour, Sylvanite, Central Patricia, Kirkland Lake, Toburn, Hardrock, Bidgood-Kirkland, Dome Gold and Canadian Malartic. Gains were registered for Wicke Crow, Preston and Kerr-Addison but were not held.

Closing prices were a little strong for Consolidated Smelters, Wells Amalet, Ventures, Sherritt and Chromium and International Nickel. Ground 3-4. Sudbury Basin dropped a few cents and the other base metals were steady. Silvers, including Eldorado, Mining Corporation and Nipissing were slightly lower in quiet sales.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 14 (AP)—Selected oils, steels and specialties did most of the advancing work in today's brief stock market.

There was a burst of strength at the opening, representing large over-night buying orders. The ticker tape hummed along briskly for a while as numerous 1,000-share blocks changed hands.

Early gains of fractions to a point or more were reduced or cancelled in many instances as the advance drew to a close, although the favorites finished near their tops.

Canadian issues showed small advances. Distillers Seagram gained ½, Canadian Pacific a similar amount, and McIntyre Porcupine ¾. Dome Mines, however, lost ¼. Canadas 4's were unchanged and Dominion funds remained at 99 3-8's cents.

Business Kodak was the most popular of the specialties, jumping some seven points at the best, apparently in reflection of favorable earnings.

Board Room Gossip

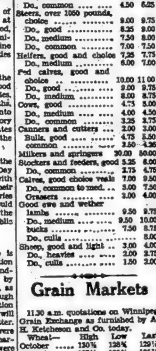
Aldermac Mill at 600 Tons

Aldermac Copper Corporation is now operating its concentrator at 600 tons daily and the rate is officially expected to be increased to 800 tons by the week end and 1,000 tons by the month end. A new large crusher has been cut into the mill.

Underground preparations for the 1,000-ton rating have been pushed hard in the last few months and now with five or six stopes operating, the mill is kept running at capacity. The No. 3 orebody has opened up very much better than expected.



Latest reports from operation of the ore body are higher than last plant at Niagara Falls have been very good, it is understood officially, Chemically the process has worked fine and now the mechanical difficulties are being ironed out.

The strength and activity in the gold stocks is regarded in a good deal of comment of these securities. For the first time in many months the Globe and Mail of Toronto yesterday carried a front page story on the "Golds," which indicates how important an advance in the mining market is considered.

"It is entirely likely that the locked-for advance in the Labor Day may materialize in August, with brokers already handling fresh buying book." From the number of enquiries reaching Financial Service it would appear as if very many in the "papers" will result in a huge public following.

Pulp and Coals

New York brokers say there is increasing activity in the option market and the much often enough traders taking an important position on the long side of the market will protect themselves with the latter. Those interested in options were looking for a rise "at the psychological" which some brokers were quoting as follows: American Radiator, Standard Oil, around $300, New York Central $375, Cons Edison $112, General Motors $87½, Chrysler $625, Montgomery Ward $462, Sears, Roebuck $675, U. S. Steel $225, Texas Corp. $400 and Woolworth $412. It was remarked that these calls would carry through the period when bulls would say the stock market should be discounting Fall and Winter improvement in general business.

Dressed in Moslem robes, Sheik Abdulla Ali, 34-year-old leader of the Moslem community at South Shields, Eng., is shown with the brother and sister of the English girl he married six months ago, who are now his adopted children. If the law doesn't take them from him. It seems that the Sheik's marriage was performed according to Moslem rites only, but British law insists that a ceremony be performed in a register office. The Sheik refuses to go through with a second marriage, pleading that such a ceremony is contrary to his religious beliefs. So the law threatens to take Norman, 13, and Norah, 12, unless he changes his mind.

HUGE PLANE

a "blank spot on the map" the point 1,215 miles from the Pribilof Islands.

In Case of Foul Weather.

He said that if the plane found weather unfavorable it might not land at Fairbanks but continue to Anchorage or Nenana.

Once they reached the Alaskan coast, the fliers had planned to travel a 370-mile air route to Fairbanks between the Mackenzie and Colville Rivers, skirting the Yukon near the Arctic Circle.

"The part of the flight," the article read, "will be most unpleasant because the fuel supply will be diminishing, cutting down chances to find a suitable landing spot. Levanevsky, Gromov and newspaper 'Red Star'," had said that in case two of the planes of four motors failed "it would be quite possible that we would be forced to dump fuel, considerably reducing the distance of the flight. During a test flight we used only two motors for a time without trouble."

Seattle, Aug. 14 (AP)—The U. S. Signal Corps announced today its anchorage Alaska station intercepted a message from the missing Russian trans-Polar plant at 10:44 a.m. E.D.T., only part of which was readable. The coded part, with blanks, was translated to read: "No beam. Has 2 x x have trouble with 2 x x wave band."

The Signal Corps' Alaska communications system, which made the announcement, stated:

"10 R 34 E E. Diapasone."

The Signal Corps did not immediately indicate whether the 8:44 time was last night or this morning.

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 14 (AP)—Sir Russian airmen who sought to base a new transpolar route from Moscow to the United States remained missing today in the Arctic wastes.

Famous Alaskan "mercy fliers" stood ready to launch a search.

Hampered by head winds and veiled in silence, the big four-motored transport plane of Pilot Sigismund Levanefsky literally had vanished.

Many Hours Overdue

At 4 a.m. E.D.T., the plane was ten hours overdue here on a 4,000 mile flight from Moscow, and an increasing number of observers expressed doubt it still was in the air.

Levanefsky was flying to Oakland, California, via Fairbanks and Edmonton, Alberta, along what the airmen hoped might be the future route of trans-polar passenger plans.

In pioneering the course, which called for a first refueling stop here, the huge plane carried a small freight cargo in addition to its air complement, twice the number of two previous successful trans-polar air flights.

Fears 'Gas' Exhausted

Official information lacking on the plane's fuel supply and consumption, but sources here reported the gasoline probably would be exhausted at 3 a.m. (E.D.T.) today, a few minutes short of forty hours after the takeoff.

There was no indication Russian officials had asked a search be started for the fliers, but Alaskan aviators, veterans of many a stormy flight, stood ready.

Radio Silence Led to Delay

Whether the plane was down on water, land or ice (as ice at 82 at the top of the world were matters of pure conjecture. It was the fate of the pilot's monoplane if it had been forced down by storm or lack of fuel.

While U.S. Army Signal Corps listeners waited anxiously for radio message, an authoritative source close to Pan-American Airways here at Seattle expressed belief the airmen may have been forced down in the Siberian wastes.

Declining to be quoted, this source said the opinion the fliers never reached Alaska but came down somewhere in the vast, unsettled area.

An Unpleasant Situation

From Anchorage, Alaska, representative at Seattle, came only one statement.

"It is an unpleasant situation."

The last word received here from the fliers came at 11 11 a.m. (E.D.T.) yesterday when the Point Schmidt, North Siberia, radio station heard the plane's signal letters. Four hours earlier the U. S. Army Signal Corps intercepted a message the plane was driving into strong headwinds.

Moscow, Aug. 1 (AP) — Soviet officials here today were unconfirmed but reported that one of his trans-Polar plane's four engines had been cut out before Russian radio stations lost contact early today with the plane bearing Levanefsky to Fairbanks, Alaska.

The last radio signals from the plane indicated engines the Pratt Whitney motors were heard at 1 a.m. (6 p.m. E.D.T. Thursday) quickly faded.

Levanefsky previously had reported he was flying at an altitude of 14,900 feet and that he intended to continue using only three motors because that would have been considerably lightened by having consumed a great part of its gasoline supply.

The original amount of gasoline carried was not disclosed.

Oil Line Damaged.

Levanefsky's message said a damaged oil line was causing the motor to fail, but gave no hint that the fliers suspected it might imperil their 4,000 mile flight to Fairbanks, Alaska, thence to Oakland, Calif., by way of Edmonton, Alta.

(The plane was 12 hours overdue at 6 a.m. E.D.T. today. Increasing anxiety was felt at Fairbanks where numerous observers believed the plane might already be down.

(Its cruising range was unknown but a refueling had been planned at Fairbanks instead of attempting a non-stop flight such as two previous Soviet planes accomplished.)

21 Degrees Fahrenheit

Weather reports from the Soviet Weather Observation Station near the North Pole said the sky was overcast with narrow clearings through the mists. Visibility was between 10 and 12 miles. The temperature was 31 degrees Fahrenheit.

Soviet officials were not alarmed at the silence that enveloped the fliers, recalling that Valeri Chkalov and two companions who flew non-stop to a pasture in Southern California were unreported for 30 hours after crossing the North Pole.

Soviet stations continued to search the ether for some signal from the fliers, and the Chief of Russia's Civil Aviation kept in constant touch by telephone with North American authorities.

Trust in Plane Motors.

Before the flight, Levanefsky had said "the flight of a land plane over water, of course, will not be pleasant. If one of the motors of the heavy plane gives trouble, it will be very unpleasant because we would be unable to alight at sea for the plane would sink.

"In order to fly with three motors it would be necessary to pump out some fuel. We trust our plane motors," he added.

Havas News Agency reported the petroleum tanks of the Atlantic Petroleum Company, Far Eastern subsidiary of Royal Dutch Shell caught fire, setting up an ahead of flame and smoke into the sky in a section to the east of Shanghai proper.

C. J. Head, a British subject employed by the Hongkew Wharf Company, was wounded when Chinese planes bombed the waterfront area. A warehouse belonging to Jardine, Matheson and Co., a British concern, was destroyed.

Ships Clear from Harbor

All merchant ships were cleared out of the harbor, leaving only the Japanese first and foreign warships standing by.

The Havas correspondent watched 330 marines land on the Hongkew riverfront. Lining up in front of the Japanese telegraph office, they cheered their flag, booed briefly in protest and marched off in a hostile city direction.

Hall Kingdom was deserted except for Japanese sentinels entrenched with machine guns behind sandbag barricades.

The scene in the French concession, crowded with homeless refugees, was one of horror. Shattered bodies lay across the pavement. Several mothers were in flames.

One French policeman was among the killed.

At nightfall the aerial operations ceased but in the city's environs heavy cannonading continued. It was believed Japanese warships offshore were shelling Chinese positions in Kiangwan and Chapei areas.

The cabinet session was believed to have decided on the following steps:

New Credits Expected.

Strengthening of land forces at Shanghai; new credits for the forces in North China and extension of mobilization measures, including moves to mobilize the financial and economic resources of the country.

In addition, a special session of the diet was expected to be called for early next month.

16-MILE BATTLE

Japanese And Chinese Planes Engage Over U.S. Flagship

By The Associated Press

First foreign fugitives from Shanghai fled today through a gauntlet of bursting shrapnel.

Beginning a mass flight from the undeclared war between China and Japan, a group of 200 women and children boarded the S.S. President Taft after a perilous two-hour trip by tender.

Sailors kept the frightened passengers, some with infants in their arms, huddled below while shell fragments splintered deck floors and railings above.

Chinese planes, flying in formation, rained bombs again on Japanese sections and the waterfront in an attempt to destroy the Japanese base of operations.

The Chinese attack answered a dawn offensive by Japanese land, sea and air forces that spread through the rich Yangtze valley, the heart of China's commercial wealth.

Fighting at Shanghai

By Morris J. Harris

Associated Press Foreign Staff Correspondent

Shanghai, Aug. 17.—Tuesday (AP)—Chinese soldiers drove desperately at Japan's fortress-like naval headquarters under the glare of searchlights early this morning at the land, and at the banks of Shanghai entered its fifth day.

On both banks the Whangpoo river, Shanghai's outlet to the sea, fighting raged furiously, large Chinese forces hammering with infantry and artillery against Japanese naval marines, both wings from the river.

The Chinese asserted they had captured the Japanese headquarters huge steel and concrete building at the northern boundary of Shanghai's Hongkew district, and had sent their soldiers into nearby Hongkew park whence Japanese guns had been blasting their lines.

This has been the keypoint of the Japanese shore positions.

U. S. Flagship Is Shelled Five

Shanghai, Aug. 16—(CP)— A massed fleet of 61 Chinese warplanes rained bombs on the Japanese section of the waterfront of Shanghai today in a determined effort to destroy the headquarters of the Japanese garrison and—the first and third Japanese fleets.

British and United States authorities ordered the immediate evacuation of non-combatant citizens as the battle became general along the 15-mile front encircling this international city of 2,500,000 people. British and United States marines and bluejackets were ashore to cover the evacuation.

The flagship, flagship of Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, was in the centre of the hail of shells and bombs from the land and air engagements. Many Chinese and Japanese planes were operating directly above the cruiser.

Mr. Hepburn said Mr. John L. Lewis (head of the Committee for Industrial Organization), the would-be labor dictator, "is going to get a $36,000,000 a year," said the premier. "Mr. Rowe complains about his campaign funds but might not Mr. Lewis like to see his generosity defeated, and might be not contribute some of his millions to Mr. Rowe from the pay envelopes of the workers, to support Mr. Rowe."

Mr. Hepburn made his statement at a picnic given by Thomas Blakelock, M.P., at which he acted as host. He said satray "by this silly talk of me being dominated by the millionaires." The premier said Mr. Rowe had plenty of millionaire friends and then came his reference to Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Hepburn said he had been criticized for spending police in municipalities in which there were strikes.

"I have never sent police to any municipality except at the request of the municipality, and then the only instructions given were to maintain law and order in that municipality," he said. "I believe in the right of labor to form its organize and to strike if they wish. But I also believe in the rights of a working man to work when he wants to."

DRIVER NOT HELD

Officer Finds Car in Good Mechanical Condition

Shannonville, Aug. 16 (Special)—William Barnhart, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Barnhart, well-known Shannonville residents, was fatally injured when struck by a car driven by Herbert Diamond, 149 Foster Avenue, Belleville, on Highway No. 2 on Sunday night.

The boy was accompanied by his mother across the highway, who was meeting a west-bound Collacutt bus when he apparently became frightened and ran to the north side of the road to the south directly in front of the car, which was proceeding west on the north side of the road. Mr. Diamond immediately applied his brakes after hitting the boy and skidded approximately forty feet, coming to rest on the south side of the highway. The boy was picked up by his frantic mother and was immediately rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by Mr. K. R. Vivian, local garage proprietor. He was received at the hospital by Drs. R. S. McCrary and J. J. Robertson, but the boy's life had passed away at one o'clock without regaining consciousness.

Many Injuries

He sustained a fractured skull, broken leg and other serious injuries. Traffic Officer Sam Irvine, who investigated, said the pole Diamond to blame as skid marks found at the scene of the accident showed the Diamond car to be on the right side of the road and also to be travelling at a locale rate of speed. Examining the car, the traffic officer found a slight dent in the left fender and hood, this apparently being the only damage to the car. Later examination of the car, he said, found it to be in good mechanical condition. Betty Matthews, who was waiting for the bus was an eyewitness to the accident and according to her testimony the driver had no chance to miss the boy.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his father, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Barnhart, three brothers and two sisters, all at home.

An inquest was opened today by Dr. J. J. Robertson, coroner for the county, after preliminary evidence was taken the hearing was adjourned a week and the body released for burial.

SOME PROGRESS

Toronto, Aug. 16 (CP)—With Premier Hepburn of Ontario as mediator, conferences between employers and strikers in textile mills of Peterboro and Cornwall opened at Queen's Park today. Confidence was expressed the discussions would end the labor disputes which have closed the mills for weeks.

The strikers' delegations, representing more than 2000 employes of Canadians Cotton, Limited, and the Dominion Woollen and Worsted, Limited, met in the morning prepared, they said, to accept any reasonable proposal. They seek wage increases.

General Manager R. G. Tolmie and his assistant, W. V. Boyd, represented Canadian Cottons. H. H. Harrall, managing director, and R. G. Kellock, K.C., company solicitor, acted on behalf of Dominion Woollens.

Separate conferences to discuss the demands of the Cornwall and Peterborough delegates were heard. The Peterboro strikers seek an increase of 10 cents an hour and of 25 per cent. in the scale for pieceworkers. The Cornwall strikers ask a straight 20 per cent. wage increase.

The Cornwall local of the United Textile Workers Union was represented by Arthur Laverty, Alan Roberts, John Lamoreux, Leo Lamberty, Abraham Shave, Homer Belanger and Percy Lazarus. The Peterboro delegation was headed by Union organizer, John Smith, and Michael English, both arrested and subsequently released on bail in last week's rioting in Peterboro. This is the same arm with which the tanks of the local Argyll Tank Battalion will be manned. It is stated.

English Refuse to Recognize Possibility of Another War; No Militarism in Great Britain

Supt. T. D. Ruston Back After Short Visit in Old Country Tells How Low Estimation He's In With British Attitude

The red spectre of war is far from the mind of the average Englishman, he refuses to recognize the possibility of another general European conflict, with the result his sole might be drawn. He prefers not to talk about it. Instead his mind is on bank holidays of week ends at the sea side of accordion bands and back gardens and home honnely every-day affairs.

The general prosperity in the British Isles at the present time which has advanced to a point far above that of most years has been caused by the sudden expenditure of money on armaments, but has come rather largely from the general civil development of the country, and as the result of employment of labor and funds on hundreds of new construction and other worthy purposes time past.

This is the condition found by Mr. T. D. Ruston, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society of this city who has just returned after a rather brief vacation spent in the British Isles. His findings are not based on surface conditions but come rather largely from the general civil development of the country, and as the result of employment of labor and funds on hundreds of new construction and other worthy purposes time past.

This is the condition found by Mr. T. D. Ruston, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society of this city who has just returned after a rather brief vacation spent in the British Isles. His findings are not based on surface conditions but come rather largely from the general civil development of the country, and as the result of employment of labor and funds on hundreds of new construction and other worthy purposes time past.

War Talk in America

"If you want want to hear war talk you've got to come to this side of the water as far as Britain is concerned. Of course there is a lot of talk about armaments and war and the like over there, but it is confined mostly to the Central European countries. Britain simply don't really believe that any outbreak will immediately occur, so buried the local observer this morning.

Interested, England's mind is on her back gardens, her watering pots and her every day affairs, and isn't concerned with what the other fellow is doing any more than is the case in every day affairs. The defense which will completely isolate Britain from the thoughts of attack."

A Yorkshire man by birth, Mr. Ruston visited the scenes of boyhood days, meeting again many friends seen in the early years of more. It was in this County of Yorkshire that Mr. Ruston first gained tranquility of living was perhaps most felt amid the pastoral scenes. Far different, from the busy hurry of London, and the manufacturing towns later visited for purpose of examining the reason for the country's present condition.

Rough Eastward Crossing

Leaving Montreal, on July 11th, he sailed on the Empress of Richmond. Warned by radio of a heavy storm on the Atlantic which was even then felt on the eastern sea board, the ship was forced to slow to steerage way and lay to off Point for a whole day battling heavy swells which sent ninety per cent of her passenger list to their cabins with extreme cases of mal de mer. The crossing was rough, with the violence of a heavy summer storm, but on the last day via fine sailing was experienced.

Landing at Liverpool, Mr. Ruston took the boat train to the North Yorkshire, where resides his sister, Miss J. Ruston. From there a short visit was spent with his brother, Arthur, at Gleeds, whom he also had not seen for several years.

But it was in Hull, England, the next stop, that difficulty in recognition was most experienced between Mr. Ruston and an old school chum, now a retired member of the Hull Corporation. Not for twenty-eight years had the former chums met, but after brief momentary confusion, Al Selby, soon recalled with ready facility and pleasure.

London as of Old

The local man's visits from thence included stops at Shipley in West Yorks; Bellingham; Bradford; Harrogate; Birkshead; Wallasey and Harrowgate, in England, where friends and relatives were always met after an absence of many years. Everywhere the same sign of good times existed. At Selby, town of boyhood days, the largest seed factory in the British Isles was running at top speed, employing hundreds of hands in its output.

Back to London by rail and speed of money being spent, freer than ever, was noticeable. Two days before the war when business thrived and contentment reigned supreme. At Selby, there were not the least of the places where Mr. Ruston knew, the prosperity of the new era. Four days were spent in this city.

Then Lillian Gish, the local visitor during his stay in the larger cities, and the noticeable absence of militarism in any form—the absence of uniformed soldiers on the streets, the quietness with which recruiting for the army and navy was being carried on. The lack of glowing posters in this direction, and the publicity with which the Prince and Princess viewed alarmist reports of war.

Also the desire of the Englishman to share in the general better contentment, evidenced by the fact that one bank holiday one day last month a total of 450 special excursion trains were needed to convey vacationers to Blackpool, Britain's watering place, for the day's outing.

Sailing from Southampton on the Empress of Britain on the way back home, Mr. Ruston experienced an ideal crossing, the smallest ocean voyage on the return. His enjoyment of the trip was heightened by the companionship of a former Belleviliian, Mr. Chris Holmes, one time manager of the local Capitol Theatre, returning from England, after a visit spent with his parents there. Holmes, formerly with Famous Fatty Stillman also of this city, will remain in England with Mr. Holmes' parents, until September, after accompanying him across.

Pennsylvanian Hurt When Tire Bursts

Archibald Kearney of Pennsylvania was critically injured one mile east of Marysville on Saturday night when a tire on his motor car blew out hurling the machine into the ditch. He was rushed to Belleville hospital, where he was attended by Dr. J. J. Robertson. The man sustained a fractured skull, a severe inch scalp wound, a broken jaw and numerous body bruises. Four other occupants of the car were unhurt except for a shaking up and shock.

Dr. Robertson performed an emergency operation to relieve the pressure as soon as the man was admitted and the physician stated today the man was resting comfortably and would recover. At the time of the accident, Ramsay was proceeding eastward and Traffic Officer Sam Irvine investigated.

WILLIAM MOORE DIES AT AGE 79

Was Prominent Citizen And Active Church Worker

William Moore, well known citizen of Belleville and a former resident of Thurlow for many years, passed away on Sunday at noon at his home 84 Hillcrest Ave., after an illness of some weeks' duration. Had he lived to the first of January he would have rounded his 80th birthday.

The second son of Alexander Moore and Elizabeth Campbell Moore, he was born on the farm in the township of Thurlow. He received his early education in public school of Tamperille, and in the high school at the age of eighteen years and following graduation, went to the calling of teaching. Later he obtained a life certificate and taught for many years in large rural schools of this county, at No. 4 Milbridge, No. 4 Sidney and No. 4 Moira. He matriculated at Albert College and subsequently entered the University of Toronto. During his third year of study at his institution he suffered a serious breakdown from which he never fully recovered. His health compelled him to abandon study after a lengthy period of ill-health and he was forced to retire from active work. He could engage in farm work, which he followed for thirty-five years, during the past ten years he lived in Belleville.

Gifts in Teaching

Several years ago it fell to his lot to preside at the death of the teacher who had been master at Moira Public School at the time of the death at the centennial observance of that village when old settlers had gathered and again sat at feet of one whose brief career in the cause of education aroused in the deceased the ambition of what a career his might have been, but his health was broken. In all he taught seven years but those seven years were years of distinction of a character so marked that these terms of service are still remembered.

Aside from his agricultural duties he took an active part in church work. He attended the Roslin Presbyterian Church many years, and was ordained an elder thirty-two years ago. He was well-known in church circles, and for many years was appointed a representative elder to Presbyterian Assembly on special occasions. But Mr. Moore's church activities were not confined to the Presbyterian Church. He was president of the South Hastings Sunday School Association for several years, this entailing many long trips to the different parts of the district.

In Bible Society Work

For more than twenty-five years he was president of the British and Foreign Bible Society in South Hastings being twice made life member. The late son of his death, his was secretary of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross.

The Sunday School was his main field of church activity, for over half a century he taught Sunday School in this city, in Thurlow, Tamperille and at Plainfield and was superintendent of the Roslin Presbyterian Sunday School for many years.

The cause of temperance also found him a strong advocate. During his long years of religious activity he made many warm friends, seeking always after the welfare of every one with whom he came in contact. He followed the lives of former Sunday School members with an interest which ended only with his death.

The local community benefited in many ways during his life, his loved music, sang with a splendid bass voice in church circles from his boyhood, and while not a music teacher several of the choirs in the district in which he lived derived benefit from the instructions which he freely gave.

William Moore will be remembered as one of the finest of personalities and a man of marked gifts, all exercised in the service of the best for his fellowmen. He was a man of utmost conscientiousness and those of his family remember his unselfishness devotion and sincerity of purpose in all things.

He was never married, his parents being David McKechan Moore of Vancouver, B.C., Robert Moore of Tamperille, and Alexander Moore of Belleville and one sister, Miss Mary Moore of this city, who has been devoted to him throughout his life.

Butler, K.C., at the opening of today's local police court in James Chan, Pyrodinus, who pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and intimated that he was not able to pay the assessed fine at that particular time.

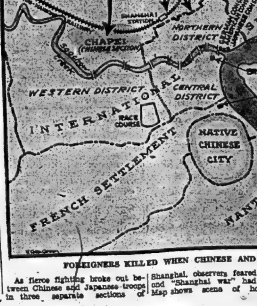
CLEVELAND OFFICE REPORTS ACCIDENT

While returning home to Cleveland for special strike duty, Officer W. J. Nelson, veteran police officer of the Cleveland, Ohio, police department, reported motor accident to the Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville today.

Near Trenhigh, on Highway No. 41, early today, a truck driven by John McNamara, Belleville, sideswiped my car, badly damaging the rear door and fenders. McNamara stopped and gave me his name and address. I was just breaking over the top of a knoll when the truck loomed up in front of me and travelling in the centre of the road. As the truck driver swerved his truck to the right-hand side of the highway, the rear portion of the truck sideswiped my car, no person was injured," was the report handed to Provincial Constable McBrien by Officer Nelson of Cleveland.



"My family and I are building a summer lodge on the Madawaska River, we just nicely had it started when I received word to return to Cleveland for special police duty owing to the darned steel strike. We had only recently commenced our holidays," informed Officer Nelson as he also revealed to fellow officers of this province the fact he was retiring next month. "Yes, sir, I'm due for superannuation next month and I'm going to spend every summer in Canada from then on and really enjoy myself," added the silver-thatched Cleveland police officer as he shook a hasty exit from the Provincial Police Headquarters and headed for Cleveland and special police duty.

TOURIST TRAFFIC IS QUITE HEAVY

Majority Coming on Recommendation of Those Who Completed Visit

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 16 (CP) — "We have never experienced anything like this before," Dugald H. McIntyre, director of Ontario Tourist Bureau here, said today in regard to record movement of tourists now underway at this border port.

"One noteworthy feature is hundreds of parties are crossing here on recommendation of friends who preceded them," he said. In steel centres of Ohio and Pennsylvania many firms are giving employees fortnight vacations, and large groups of them are crossing to fish in Northern Ontario. Interest in bass and pickerel fishing is especially strong. Early predictions made at this bureau tourist traffic would exceed last year by 25 per cent are being shattered. Movement this month is really nearer 50 per cent. greater than last year."

"If provincial government continues its present re-stocking of northern streams there is no reason why next year's movement of fishermen will not exceed present record breaking influx."

THE SUN'S BLAZING SHELL

Right in our own age, our own day, one of the greatest discoveries of the ages in regard to astronomy has been made possible only as a result of the modern airplane which carried equipment of science up many thousands of feet and photographed the corona of the sun in the eclipse in June of this year.

"What we call the sun," according to the New York Times which tells a long story of the importance of the discovery in the photographs, "is really the photosphere, an atmosphere of incandescent gas. Enclosing this is still another globe—the diaphanous pearly corona, which is the glory of a total eclipse and from which project jagged streamers that have tricked the eye into accepting them as the corona itself. So we must think, not of a single glowing ball, but of a series of concentric blazing shells, diminishing in intensity from the center outward. The core of that celestial onion is the real sun—the sun that no eye will ever see, immersed completely in its own fierce effulgence.

"Major Stevens (who flew the plane and took the pictures) is an amateur in astronomy who rose above the lees of our atmosphere, murky even on a perfect day, to an astrophysicist. His success is an accident. He soared aloft primarily to photograph the moon's shadow as it rushed over the earth. It was only as a matter of routine that he photographed the corona as all. He is not the first Columbus in science who set out to reach Cathay and ended by discovering new land.

"What of the astrophysicists who have been photographing eclipses for half a century and who have found nothing but streamers in the corona because they were looking at the sun through a turbulent, hazy atmosphere? They suspected that their eyes and their pictures had deceived them. Photometric measurements published as far back as 1919 by the Swedish astronomer Bergstrand had indicated that the streamers are no more the corona than the clouds in our sky are the air that we breathe.

"But the mystery of the corona remains. What is it? Comets have passed through it without burning up by mere friction, as meteors do in our air. Its atoms must be fewer to the cubic inch than in any vacuum which we can relate. And the relation of the streamers to the sun spots — what of that? More flights like that of Major Stevens are needed to answer the questions of an inquiring mind. Perhaps when the next favorable eclipse occurs, which will be in 1940, balloons and planes will rise to stratospheric levels where there is no weather, where the sun always shines, where the corona glows in ghostly beauty. Astronomers wearing oxygen helmets and riding on gasoline engines to gather new knowledge about the nearest blazing star—it is a strange picture, yet one destined to become a reality."

The age of wonders, not of fairies in the woods and in dells, or of goblins in the deep recesses of midnight, but of truth is here as far as scientific discovery goes.

THE SHANGHAI SLAUGHTER

What happened at Shanghai on Saturday when Chinese aircraft killed many, has shocked the world. The International Settlement and the French concession which residents had every right to believe would be respected was bombed in error, say reports, by Chinese craft in fleeing Japanese planes. Whatever the reason the fact is that hundreds were killed, one estimate putting the number of dead at near 1200 and many hundreds wounded, most of them natives of course and a few Americans, some of them missionaries.

Whatever was the reason the event is one of the most woeful and may lead to complications. Nations have informed China and Japan that they are not going to permit Shanghai to be made a shambles nor base for military operations.

The slaughter in Shanghai may mean the alienation of much of western sympathy for China.

THE ANVIL

I wonder that the metal stands the test;
The hammering of dogma and of creed,
The lifting ferment of a world's unrest,
The battering of ignorance and greed!
The dead-white flame of atheistic scorn,
The ringing blows of ridicule and doubt;
The infidel's rough handling and the worn
Deceits and prayers of the half-devout!
Yet still the anvil of God's mercy stands
Singing its answer to each heavy blow,
The stronger for humanity's demands—
And man bends on it, steadily and slow!

BOY SCOUT KING

Egypt has a new king, a brand new king, young and handsome, a prize catch for some predatory or other female for he starts his kingship with a capital of fifty million dollars left him by his father, King Farouk I, who took over the Egyptian throne just fifteen and a half years ago hard work and overtime accumulated $50,000,000. King Farouk II is only eighteen years old, has been carefully educated in England, was an enthusiastic Boy Scout, and is well qualified to become a real king as far as conditions will permit or a pawn in the hands of schemers. He is six feet tall, big boned and fair complexion, and was acclaimed as "The first Sovereign invested as King of modern Egypt, the Senior Arab Kingdom." Egypt's population is 16,000,000.

Egypt's fascinating history dates back to the Pharaohs and Moses and Children of Israel. Cleopatra, who died 2,000 years ago will always live because of her loves and loving biographers. She was the last of the Ptolemaic Dynasty, and her love for Antony and other prominent Romans was followed by Egypt's transition into a Province of the Roman Empire until 641 A.D. when the power of Rome weakened and the star of Mohammed gained the ascendancy.

The suzerainty of Turkey over Egypt was terminated by the British government in 1914 when Turkey became an ally of Germany in the Great War and Egypt became a British Protectorate with the present King's father on the throne as Sultan, later King. He died May 11, 1936.

Hailed on a recent visit to London by the British press as "The Most Perfectly Brought up Boy in the World," the Prince's education began at four with a pretty Yorkshire widow, Mrs. Ina Naylor, as his nurse and governess. She remained his governess until he was fifteen and the Egyptian Parliament voted $80,000 to defray the expenses of himself and suite during the Crown Prince's first year of education in England. His residence at Henry House, Kingston Hill, where protected by Egyptian military guards he became a favorite with the local tradesmen for his democratic ways and was familiarly dubbed "Prince Freddy."

Farouk has four charming sisters who dress like English school girls with pigtails down their backs. His mother, Queen Nazli, is a descendant of a French commander of dragoons whom the Emperor Napoleon took to Egypt, and from this ancestry King Farouk inherits his "heavy dragoon" appearance, big-boned, healthy and hefty, with a fair complexion most rare in an Egyptian. His Majesty is quick at arithmetic and also skilled in the intricacies of higher mathematics. Like any Oriental potentate he keeps a taster who first samples his food lest he be poisoned, an English licensed pharmacist who is known in Egypt as Eric Titterington Bay.

A striking tribute to the benefit conferred on Egypt by British overlordship is contained in the following from a prominent observer of world events in the United States:

"Almost nobody disputes that half a century of British dominance in Egypt, more or less disguised, has acted as the greatest graft-purge in Egyptian history. Standards of administration have been upped and the fourteen-year reign of the late King Fuad was marked by more material progress in Egypt than the previous 2,000 years."

Mesmer Ian drove to the wharf last night to meet the steamer Hero, on the return trip from the Bay of Islands regatta, and Gunter and Hunter excursion. He fell asleep and was left aground when the boat arrived. The passengers landed and dropped for their homes and still calmly slept on. The Hero went to Trenton and returned to Belleville before her trip down the bay. As she came up to the wharf the sleeper awoke and got his hack in readiness for passengers and could hardly believe his senses when he saw the boat deserted instead of crowded with passengers.

Distinguished Group from U.S. To Enjoy Beauties of North

Travelling to Weekenkoon Lake For a Week's Holiday

A HAPPY PARTY

That the vacation possibilities, scenic beauties and fishing attraction of Hastings County enjoy wide spread fame is evidenced in the arrival at the beginning of last week of a fairly large but distinguished groups of American tourists ever to visit this part of Canada.

Included in the group which spent a week exploring and testing out the fishing possibilities of the holiday land around Weekenkoon Lake, were Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury, Stephen Gibbons, Assistant Secretary of States Attorney General Robert Jackson, Commissioner of Alcoholic Beverages R. Brudenell Carter, Director of Correction Edward F. Dalton, Commissioner of Narcotics Harry J. Anslinger, New York City Police Commissioner, Lieutenant George Gelly, United States Coastguard Service, Judge James O'Connor, Rochester, Louis Weihe, President of the Genesee Brewing Corporation, Rochester, Donald A. Daley, Rochester, Monroe County Democratic Committee, Emil Hurja, Assistant Statistician of the National Democratic Committee, and a famous adventurer who has prospected gold in the Yukon, and searched for oil in the wilds of Afghanistan and Abyssinia. Mr. Hurja is also a famous collector of old books and manuscripts and possesses one of the most valuable collections in the world. Thomas Haglin, Rochester, and Sherwin Paxton, president of the Paxton Canning Company of Rochester.

Accompanied by Priest

The Rev. Father Edward F. Kirk parish priest of Hillcrest, North Jersey also accompanied the party, who lunched at the Hotel Quinte before proceeding to their various homes after a "week in the finest holiday land in the world." Father Kirk lingered to chat with a representative of the Belleville Intelligencer before taking his "afternoon nap" as he put it.

"I am no stranger to this part of your country," he said. "For a number of years Mr. Weihe and I cruised in and about the Bay of Quinte, and I might add, that it is one of the finest spots for a water holiday in the world. But four years ago, Mr. Weihe was so kind as to offer advantages to be had here, that he purchased a cottage on Weekenkoon Lake. Every summer he invites parties of his friends to spend a week's fishing and needless to say they have the time of their lives."

Enjoy Meeting Guide

One of the thrills derived by Father Kirk is his annual meeting with Harvey Ostrom, noted guide and "man of the north country" who looks after Mr. Weihe's interests during the winter months. He is a character by himself," Father Kirk stated "and has a wonderful philosophy of life. Every summer panics".

Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea in "These Three" with Miriam Hopkins now playing the Capitol.

Harvey and I go out on the lake alone and have two hours chat. I have learned a lot about the simple life as far from the madding crowd as fellow and it is a refreshing pleasure for me to be with one, the nearest close to life."

Father Kirk is a great admirer of President Roosevelt. "He is a real man, and although we do not always agree with his policies, he always has in mind the welfare of the man on the street. He is to the American nation, what the King of England is to you people. He is interested equally if you may put it that way; he has everything, health, wealth and the ability to lead men. He is always thinking and has every interest of the nation at heart."

Speaks on Economics

Speaking of the economic situation, Father Kirk remarked that one of the phenomena of the present day is that there are more men working in the United States today than there were in 1920. "Just why that is, no one seems to know. It is a job for the statistician", he said. "The increase of emigration has not communicate with that of industry, yet we have a large number of unemployed. You must have seen the same condition here in Canada."

For diversity of thought I never met a more interesting group of men," Father Kirk declared referring to his fishing trip com-

Little Benny's Note Book

His fellows was standing around the letter box talking and arguing and Puds Simkins said to Sherry Judge, Are you used to it, pet, Shorty?

Meaning about Shorty not being as short as Herbit Kline the new little kid that just moved in and got in the next block, and Shorty said, O, I've decided to grow all my feet like from now on. It's not hot to sag so short, he said.

O is that so? Well you cant name me anything hotter? Herbit Kling said and Shorty said Sure I can. how about a tall guy reaching up with his own bare height and saying a short guy is not as practically hardly any effort?

Well how about a short guy standing there with absolutely no effort at all and having the tall guy reach for it and then reach for another one to hand him? Herbit said. And anyway I think a guy is less libel to him his head against low places as he goal through life, and even a few bumps now and if you add them up long enough, would make a bump the size of a small mountain, so that's what the big guy has got ahead of him to worry about, he said, and Shorty said, Well maybe so, but look how a tall guy can step over things that a short guy has to walk around, and look at all the wear and tear on his shoes it saves him.

Well say, who wants to worry about that at our age? Herbit said. And besides, a short guy can always get bigger if he changes his mind, but a tall guy is all it ways up already and had no other direction to go, so what future has he got to look forward to? he said.

Being the best anser yet, and has then there was a silence during the corner sounding as if something was up, and we all ran down to see only nothing wasn't.

GERMAN PLANE COMPLETES TRIP

Fort Washington, N.Y., Aug. 16, 1937.—The German seaplane Nordmeer, completing her first survey flight in the International effort to establish an air route across the Atlantic Ocean, landed in Long Island Sound today at 7:37 p.m. E.D.T. after a 2,362-mile hop from the Azores.

The big seaplane was catapulted from her mother-ship, the Schwabenland, off Horta in the Azores Islands at 3:10 p.m. E.D.T. yesterday and averaged about 150 miles an hour for most of its trip.

The Nordmeer, at oil-burner, flew 1,000 miles from Lisbon, Portugal, last Friday.

A MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

CHAPTER I.
ADRIFT

The picture of the missing girl stared up at Jane Carey from the front page of the morning paper. Two women were talking about it on the train that carried Jane nearer a city where anything might happen.

One said, "Poor thing. I wonder if they'll ever find her."

The other answered, "Some of these rich girls don't know when they're well off."

In her corner by the window, Jane listened breathlessly, unable to hide the excitement in her lovely face with its wide set eyes of hyacinth blue against the misty gold of her hair. She, also, had been reading about this girl, who, adored and surrounded by luxury, had simply vanished one day. A girl who had everything, walking out of a perfect home without leaving a trace.

What was New York. So big that you could get lost in it with family and police hunting everywhere. Jane wished the train would run even faster to get there more quickly. But she didn't want to be lost—she wanted to find happiness, love, money.

The fat woman continued, "There's a disease they call amnesia, a sort of nervous breakdown. Perhaps her memory's gone. She may be wandering about—"

"I guess girls lose more than their memories nowadays," the second woman remarked with grim finality. "She couldn't wander far without being noticed, dressed in those expensive clothes. No, I think she killed herself."

They lowered their voices, gloating at Jane with little pecking looks. And she grew conscious that the black hat and coat that had seemed so right in Fond du Lac wouldn't be smart enough in New York.

To the click and rumble of the train, Jane's dreams began to move and sparkle. Back there, in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, nothing had ever happened.

From the small garage on the highway, owned by old Tom Carey, her father, he and Jane had watched cars swoop past and around the corner. He said to say, "There are worlds out there, my girl—cities and seas to cross. Some day we will go, you and I." Instead, he had gone on the longest journey of all alone. Her darling, her wonderful father, with the fierce unappeased hunger for beauty that had riddled through his crippled years. And because the spirit of adventure Tom Carey had never been able to let go in his son Jane's inheritance, she sold the garage. After funeral expenses and debts were paid, she had two hundred dollars. It had seemed a lot in Fond du Lace.

But it didn't seem so much when the train finally pulled into the Grand Central station. Bewildered by the shifting pattern of crowds, Jane took a taxi to a rooming house in a train acquaintance had recommended.

She hardly glanced at the tiny room, and didn't stop to unpack her valise. "I'll just run out for a moment," she told herself, "to get the feel of it."

Once she started walking she couldn't turn back. Everything was more wonderful than she had imagined. Cars, shop windows, faces, were glittering by like a procession. Yet there was the feeling that these things slid over, around and beyond her, not caring if she ever kept up with them or not.

After all, why should anyone care Why should one eager, longing girl matter among people who already had homes, problems, relationships? Jane's throat tightened as she thought of her father, the only person who had ever cared what became of her! She dved him an answer to all he had given her from his own hunger of life.

She stood at last on the corner of 50th Street and Park Avenue, with her proud, bright head to throw up at the blocks of stone that were like fortresses. You had to have a password to enter— friends, clothes, the ease of owning beautiful things.

"I've got to have them," she said and without noticing where she was going, she moved quickly.

"Say sorry." A courteous voice with a foreign accent, drew her up. Jane had bashed off the curb, almost into the arms of a stranger whose amusement flashed down at her. He had heard, of course. He had heard her say she'had to have things!

For an embarrassing second, Jane was held by pale blue eyes set in a narrow blood head. "May I be of any assistance?" he asked politely. And there was a well bred, reserved air to his slim figure that brought him from any intent to annoy, offered.

"No—oh, no, thank you." She color whipped in Jane's cheeks. What a small town girl she was! She gave a little gasping up at those houses. Muttering to herself, "I regret—" and then, with a sigh, he stepped aside.

Jane hurried on, conscious that he stared after her tall young body in black. Here, the very first adventure she had run into, she had fled from. Suppose she had said to him what was in her mind—I want to meet all sorts of exciting people, go to all sorts of exciting places!

Well, she hadn't dared take a chance.

"How can a girl know fascinating men like that?" she thought disconsolately, turning off Park Avenue. It seemed an anti-climax now to go back to the stuffy room in the train with the lamented colors Jane hated dinginess.

Girls streamed out of offices at 5 o'clock, their pretty faces full of secrets—boy friends, clothes, parties. Jane envied them. Envied them, thought rebelliously. She hadn't time to envy. She had to find.

She bought an evening paper, glancing down the headline. The missing girl those women had been talking about on the train, hadn't been found yet. Jane felt sympathy over her shoulder. The charming stranger was nowhere in sight. Jane quickly picked her way back to the old brownstone house on the East 40's that Tom Carey had recommended by with an unfamiliar rattle that increased her loneliness.

The first dip into the city had released all the pent-up impatience and dreams that old Tom Carey had encouraged during his long years of illness. He had said to his daughter books on travel, papers, magazines that brought the world into Fond du Lac garage.

"Oh darn!" Jane said angrily, and flung over to the window. Rows of yards with puny trees. A few clothes opposite. Women moved in kitchens the same while of skimmed milk. Gaslight supper parties, their backs and elbows twisted in cramped habit.

Jane thought of her father again with a pang of loneliness. She had never before realized how utterly she had depended on the dreams and plans they had made together, how completely he had filled her with tears for the existence of any friends of her own age. There had been such a magnificence about him: in spite of his poor body distorted by rheumatism; a knowledge that had made him head of the High School in Fond du Lac seem dull. Even Jane's mother had only existed as a passive soul to be waited on until she died when Jane was 12.

It came over her now with renewed wonder and compassion that her father's whole life expressed sacrifice in the dull, colorless town he had offered his wife, and the people who had stopped for petrol at the garage.

Yet until his death had Jane known of his romance long ago with Mrs. Bertram Colter. The faded letters she had found in the desk and destroyed, had explained it all to the girl Jane. Some one Tom Carey had surrendered to her family when he married Jane's mother, who had been a young man with no visible future. The letters explained why one of the richest ladies in the world was confined as an invalid to her bed in those many years, but they told Jane, sent Jane handsome presents, and occasionally invited her to the big house on the hill where young Bertram, fresh from the University of Wisconsin, tried to make love to her.

Jane sighed and smiled. She might have married Bertie—perhaps would have lived on the ninety dollars a week Tom had built out of the garage, somehow, though, not good enough—

It was growing darker in the little park. Jane hurried, her staring at pictures that drifted as on a screen. Jane Carey was selling family at charming rum with soft foreign accents. A young princess of modern times had married one of the unknown seas as misty mauve as Jane's eyes; and she dreamed. She Lands she had never seen, music she had never heard. Gay little tables set out under southern suns perfumed with mimosa. People relaxed in summery white beside blue skies.

Why I don't make all this come true, it never will," Jane spoke desperately to herself in the little room that had closed in again. And she caught up her handbag, dumping its contents on the bed.

Five one hundred dollar bills. If she had been sensible she would have deposited them in a bank. But she hadn't thought of it. Couldn't one buy with those crisp, new bills? The clerks who were over the bureau reflected her as in a clouded pool—the gold of her hair she had never cut, rippling from her forehead, delicate as filagree around her face, tucked beneath a yellow silk at the slender nape of her neck. Her wide set eyes were with their dark, curling lashes against her fair skin, gave her touch of candor. Yes, she was beautiful.

She couldn't live forever on five hundred dollars. If she were in the market find a job for the few weeks it took those girls she had seen today. Those young men would fall in love with her sooner or later, and evenings in the movies would be fun, and a little room in an apartment with a kitchenette and radio. Then, if she were hanged with her husband and babies, that would be the end of her knowing what lay beyond in unattainable worlds.

The pictures were moving faster and faster in Jane's mind. She must act while she had the will and daring, or slip into a niche, a hole from which she could never climb out. Act—make action—attract action.

She was as lost in this city as if she actually were lost. No one in Fond du Lac cared, except old Mrs. Colter, and she was an invalid.

Suppose she pretended to forget who she was, where she had come from! Suppose she turned herself into a self-made mystery girl!

"I dare you to," she said to the girl in the mirror. "I dare you to buy the sort of clothes you always wanted." Then when you look like a million dollars, go out on the street and simply be lost. Somebody or something will find you. Why, life hung from again when you can choose who you're going to belong to. It fairly begs an adventures, why shouldn't I be one!

CHAPTER II.
TRANSFORMATION

Jane Carey squared her young shoulders and walked quickly from the shabby rooming house into the June morning. Last night she had challenged her own spirit of daring; today she was gambling everything she had—five hundred dollars, her age whose skull she was about to burst open. Why should she worry herself in a small city, while she waited for fortune to seek her out!

Until she reached New York. Jane hadn't realized how very desperate and lonely she was, how that the only prop and inspiration she had ever known, was removed from under her. Her father's death had left her so utterly adrift, yet all the ambitions he had instilled in her in the small garage of Fond du Lac were winged and ready for flight. Never would she forget the cars that swept around a curve, always out of reach and sight. Jane hadn't come from which she had never climbed out. Act—make action—attract action.

She was as lost in this city as if she actually were lost. No one in Fond du Lac cared, except old Mrs. Colter, and she was an invalid.

Suppose she pretended to forget who she was, where she had come from! Suppose she turned herself into a self-made mystery girl!

She counted her money again and then put it back in her handbag. She had been expected to be a child of the long-haired artist type, and dreams that old Tom Carey had encouraged during his long years of illness. He had said to his daughter books on travel, papers, magazines that brought the world into Fond du Lac garage.

Five one hundred dollar bills. If she had been sensible she would have deposited them in a bank. But she hadn't thought of it. Couldn't one buy with those crisp, new bills? The clerks who were over the bureau reflected her as in a clouded pool—the gold of her hair she had

CHAPTER III.

She sped from the little shop more anxious than ever to get to the blocks that weighed her down. Both arms were full of boxes. She even settled in long, slim lines under the silky material of her coat as the hat slanting against the pelaled gold of her hair. Perfect.

Jane had a hermit marvelling at the complete change in her appearance. "Is that you, Miss Jane? Why, you look like a picture you did have known her!"

"I've looked only see me," she thought with a little choke in her throat. "How proud he would be!" Because this is the way he had always dreamed of his daughter—a radiant lady.

Well, now she must have a thorough job of it. Jane's face seemed as she collected the shop labels she had tripped off, and the discarded clothes that had represented the girl from Fond du Lac. But when she rounded them all up she stood hesitating. Old Tom Carey's ring and about forty dollars were in her new suede bag. Yet it wasn't too late—not yet. She needn't go on with this folly.

"I should never be satisfied again if I didn't find out what was around the corner," she decided, and recklessly she caught up the bundles to drop it in a rubbish box as she hurried out.

She moved as in a trance to the Park Avenue, obedient to the instinct of the lovely face down that seemed to be leading her along.

There was a cold lightness in her head, a sense of letting go, as if she were feathery, floating through space. She was unconscious of the fact that people after her face and for she stood out as unusual in the strange enchanted way she walked, and the dreamy state of pure bliss as the silk she wore.

Words began to drum in her mind. She felt as if indeed she were no longer Jane Carey; as if, tearing up her valise check and throwing away her old things, she had suspended the third threat that tied her to familiar backgrounds.

"I can't remember—who I am—I can't remember—" She repeated it over and over like a hypnotic little formula, soothing.

Jane had no idea of how far she had walked. Traffic lights changed from red to green as she started to cross a side street, and back to red as the stream of cars until they were prostrated upon her. Curious persons seized her elbow, pulling her to one side. "Look where you're going, miss!"

Like a sleeper rudely wakened, Jane gazed up at the face of a policeman.

Without thinking, she spoke aloud the words she had been murmuring to herself, "I can't remember who I am—" The words of the policeman.

The effect of being lightened on on her elbow as if he expected her to collapse, led her to a sudden fear. With gruff kindliness, he hammered questions at her. A crowd gathered, staring as if she were an exhibit.

The buttons marching up and down that uniform suddenly meant handcuffs, fudge, prison.

"I don't remember anything," Jane said more faintly. Her dark lashes quivered over her frightened blue eyes.

A young man in a grey Stutz roadster stood his car to the curb and sprang out, shouldering his way to where she stood.

"What's the trouble?" he asked in a low, easy voice, as he looked at Jane as if he rather hoped she needed help.

"Oh, and it's you, Mr. Kaye." The officer directed his ruddy frown at the tall figure in grey flannels. "Here's a lady says she don't remember who she is—God knows I'm—" he snapped at the circling faces. "I'll have to take her to the station." But he sounded strangely reluctant. Jane was so very exquisite in the blue gown that had led her into all this trouble.

In her corner, she turned, clasping her hands. "Please make him let me go," she begged this stranger with second her only friend. "I haven't done anything."

"Lady hasn't done anything, Michael," the young man echoed with pleasant assurance, and he smiled down at Jane, a quick, gay, devil-may-care light in his dark eyes.

"I can't be letlfr—her go if she don't know who she is," the officer was obstinate.

"Don't you really know?" The young man gave her a cue to escape she was too flustered to take.

"I don't remember," Jane faltered, for it seemed to her if she admitted she knew, she might be forced tell the whole story. Her eyes, misty hanchiefs, in the shadow of long lashes, were childish and helpless.

The young man's handsome face appeared further to broaden. He took her firmly by the arm. "Come on!" he said.

The officer bulked in front of Why how ever let that picture in the papers put such ideas in her head?

She stared at the shining gadgets on the driving board while her rescuer, the tall young man in grey flannels, murmured to the police-man.

Then everything was settled suddenly.

"Here you have a heart, Mike," the wonderful young man said in a leader voice. "Send in your report I'll vouch for this young girl. I'll see that the lady until her people turn up. She's an old friend of mine in beside her.

Jane sank lower in her corner, a girl of misty gold and blue who didn't know where she was going or why she had started with the motor.

"I'm muttered the young man, his black brows drawn to a frown. He was in the car and forward away from staring faces, a lanky individual ambled to the curb, aiming a cigarette.

"Thanks," he shouted after them. "I'll get back that car picture, did he?" Jane gasped.

"Forget it, what he did," the young man said rather grimly. "That chap sticks to my line. Keeps on the job, the tabloids." He'll interview my pal Mike, and call it a human interest."

They flashed around a corner and into Park Avenue, and Jane, who had gotten you into trouble," Jane said timidly.

"Trouble!" Her companion gave a chuckle. It's the only thing to live for. Isn't it something?"

Jane glanced at him. A grey hat was pushed back from a tanned, his black eyebrow. His long nose, thin, not of society. Jane had met the very sweep and slant of his profile gave him distinction.

His long fingers played a tattoo of impatience on the wheel when red lights slowed him down. With lazy shoulders he turned, taking her in deliberately, surprisingly. The chic blue straw cocked on gold that the French coiffeur had sculptured into pleated curls, and defying a very blue, her long young body in smart beige and blue.

"How come you can't remember? he drawled.

"Why—I don't know." Jane's heart drummed with the fear of the blood to her cheek. Better have him think her dumb than a little cheat, an impostor whose 5 years had been spent in a garage watching cars like this vanish around a curve.

"Well, don't worry," he was saying. "I expect there'll soon be a hue and cry after you. Not that it matters matter," he added naively. "Mike's Anthony Kaye—Tony to my friends."

Green lights shot them up the Avenue. Jane turned to hide the quickened excitement in her eyes. Anthony Kaye, one of the wonderful, most sought after men in New York. Tony Kaye, whose escapades ran into headlines. Even in Fond du Lac, where old Tom Carey let him hunger for worldly beyond his garage, had brought up his daughter on all the papers and magazines he could afford. Jane had read of Tony Kaye. A rich, gay name in the society columns when it wasn't in the news.

Kaye looked at her again, but now with a cynical hardening to his lips.

"Heard of me?" Evidently young Kaye was used to the effect his name had on women.

Jane shook her head. But her mind whirling back all the thrilling things she had read about him and his friends. Jungle-hunting aboard in mid-ocean on a bet; the time an Italian dancer had tried to commit suicide for him; he had lost a small fortune in Monte Carlo and gambled back in a night. It made her a little dizzy to think in her mind that this was the man on one person born to everything she wanted in life.

"Still in fog?" Tony's voice could be very caressing. "You're an intriguing lady," he went on, slanting around at her. "And I'm thinking if I'm a hurry to have you found."

"I don't think I want to be found," Jane said frankly. If only she could keep on riding and riding with Tony Kaye—

He gave one of his chuckles. "Expetions it is! Maybe the old family place and all that. Only few miles from Tuxedo."

Jane felt his quizzical eyes but this time she kept herself still and then. "Now, Mr. Kaye, you can't do that.

"Can't I though?" Jane's new friend with careless arrogance pushed on unconcernedly by, steering for the Stuts roadster. "Hop in," he whispered.

CHAPTER III.

ROYAL ADVENTURE

Jane sloped breathlessly back in the low red leather seat of the Stuts. Nothing mattered now except to get away from the prying' eyes of the onlookers she had attracted by her low amateur performance on a crowded street. It had seemed a brilliant adventure on the June afternoon to play at being an enchanted princess who couldn't remember where she had come from. It had seemed simple to trust the little garage of Fond du Lac far behind her, and to start out in beautiful clothes as a supposed victim of amnesia, courting fortune. He couldn't guess that she had read articles on the Kaye Estate which he had inherited at the death of his parents. If ever she had wanted to make things happen, then her beginning was too fast for her to think. Panic tingled through her nerves. There was a line to Tony Kaye's mouth and chin that warned against trifling.

"Perhaps you oughtn't to take me there," she murmured.

His gaze narrowed upon her. "I promised Mike we'd be at my apartment in town. There'll be hell to pay when they start ringing me up for news. Anthony and I—" He laid clutched his arm as he darted between a limousine and a taxi.

In Search of Charm

Last year, I spent a wonderful holiday at the foot of the Mourne Mountains in Ireland. I stayed at a sweet little cottage, where the choice pretty flowers grew in friendly rivalry. They grew all around the cottage, and their beautiful hues ranged from the most delicate shell pink, to the sweet shade of pale lavender.

From the windows, the view was one of unforgettable beauty. There, in front, were the lofty mountains of Mourne, rearing their stately heads in grand majesty. As the sun shed its rays, it transformed the scene into a veritable fairyland of colour. The whole of the mountainside seemed a glorious roseate hue, surrounded by a golden glory. Were I artist, I would have tried to reproduce this magnificent effect on canvas—but I doubt if the hand of man could ever portray adequately, the beauty of the Mourne Mountains. As I gazed with rapture on the scene, I realised that here was charm in its natural setting.

From our cottage, I went by road to visit Dublin, but was stopped by my old lady who asked me to buy her a packet of tea when in Dublin, if it seemed. The face I looked on hand of man could ever portray adequately, the beauty of the Mourne Mountains. As I gazed with rapture on the scene, I realised that here was charm in its natural setting.

From our cottage, I went by road to visit Dublin, but was stopped by my old lady who asked me to buy her a packet of tea when in Dublin, if it seemed. The face I looked on had not changed one jot or tittle since my last visit. I found charm, that elusive and eternal quality, is to be found among the most rich, in the countryside and everywhere about us. We cannot manufacture it for ourselves. It is a priceless gift to the fortunate. Those that possess it are quite unaware of the fact, but they find the world a very happy place in which to live. Charm at present only when everything is pure and lovely, and thrives in a lovely nature, just as flowers grow in the sun.

What are the ones who possesare charm! As a magnet attracts steel, so do sweet charming natures attract friends, and keep them! My search for charm continues. I find charm and beauty everywhere.

A Day at Oak Lake

Oak Lake is a popular summer resort in Hastings County, about 14 miles from Belleville. So many are going to Oak Lake every summer, either to camp in a cottage or to picnic for a day, and many go to enjoy a dance in the Casino in the evening. We often said, "Why can't we go to Oak Lake, as other people do?" but we never mustered up courage to go as there are no men in the family to drive and help us to get there and back. At present the United Church is having their summer school there and it would be fine to spend a few days there and attend the various sessions. However the day we recently spent seems to satisfy us, and we now laugh when our friends say "When are you going to Oak Lake again?"

It was a fine Sunday morning about three weeks ago when there was something in the air that seemed to portend a storm. A stillness that is unusual, accompanied by a haze that was treacherous, it seemed to me. I was engaged in looking at the pictures in the London Coronation number of one of the periodical papers printed there, lent me by a neighbor, when an auto horn interrupted me. It was a call from some friends from Prince Edward who had come to take us away for the day. They had wisely packed a generous supply of food for the dinner, and we would go to Oak Lake and eat it by the lake, under the shade of the trees, away from the heat where it would be cool and pleasant.

We had a very nice drive in a new auto and we stopped at the store where there were tables beyond the row of cedars that extended along the lake shore. Some were sheltered by a canopy on the side hill and many tables were there awaiting for our dinner. Our dinner of canned chicken, and roast beef, fresh berries and cake and all the accessories of a good meal was enjoyed under the shade of the trees, and in view of the water where many bathers were disporting themselves and divers took every leaping from the running boards and falling and splashing in the water. Young ladies, with their beaus seated themselves on the tables and partook too full bathing suits and I thought how times had changed and of what the people of my younger days would say if we had appeared dressed like that, and on Sunday, too. After dinner the baskets were packed away and we sat enjoying the cool breezes and watching the people, young and old, in the water for some time, when great clouds began to gather in the west. Black and threatening it grew back, there were soon, hidden by lighter ones, all in swift motion. After some time it began to sprinkle and all hastened for their autos which were parked all along the hill at the top and along the side hill. There seemed to be only a straggling tree here and there and by the time we reached the auto it was pelting down thick and heavy. Everyone sought shelter in their cars and there were dozens all around us glad to be under shelter even on that bare and bleak hillside.

As we sat there hoping it would be only a shower, we realized we had never experienced anything in our lives like this. The rain came down in sheets, driven by the strong wind and at the end of half an hour there was no let-up but the wind died right, grew in intensity, and volume until the hillside was a veritable river and the driver was concerned about the equipage, fearing the water was entering in. We had often heard of cloudbursts and here we were on this Sunday afternoon at Oak Lake experiencing one of the worst of its kind. Not only did the rain pelt down upon us but the terrible peals of thunder and flashes of lightning seemed to be almost near us and above us, and all around us. This added terror to our discomfort. We were sure every explosion took effect near us. We looked around expecting all moment to see some one near us would be struck. Two cottages received the bolts although, fortunately, unlived. Some buildings were burned in the vicinity. The West Indian Negro in a barn was reported burned. After an hour and a half we decided that we were going to get out." So down the road we went, the storm not a whit abated, over the road that we had said an hour more would make impassable as the water was rising over it in a stream. We were heading for Belleville. We passed many cars standing by the way that they could not go in such a blinding storm.

When we reached Belleville the storm was over and our friends went on their way to Prince Edward, after partaking of a hot supper together. We, alas, were not so bad in Belleville but they had their rainfall, though in Prince Edward they had none, which was unfortunate as it was needed badly. We urged them to stay all night as we feared for those dirt roads over the mountain. This was the first Sunday picnic and the experience is such that does not encourage me to try it again. I shall also remember Oak Lake and the cloudburst and electrical storm will not soon be forgotten.

A Meeting Place

Yankees from Ontario and Rochester, N.Y., Meet

Decided to Canada they'd go for some sport.

Andersons one and all to greet "Out to Oak Lake," they said, "we will meet."

The day set was very fair,
Not much breeze in the air.
From ten o'clock on one
They began to come.
Said Sadie to Ezra, "Looks as though we'll have fun."

Both Mary and Cornelia Tommie
The handshakes and kisses
Exchanged happy birthday wishes.
Then the cars were spread with food quite plenty
To feed a lot more than twenty.
There were pies too, galore,
Chicken, veal and lamb, pork, beef and more.
"I'm sure they didn't need any more,"
Said Mary to John, "I like to have a duck in that lake."
"You're right," said John, "that water would be great."
As I stood staring that coaster
Into the water.
But little Mary said with a start,
"I'm gonna ride with the coal."
Soon thunder was heard
Giving warning of a storm,
Whether your house large and small.
Flee to cars a shelter to seek."
But unfortunate Eddie got a wet skin.
For the car in which he parked
Wasn't made like Noah's Ark.
As the rain came down faster
Eddie said, "I need the dry cleaning."
Little Aunt Maggie, so meek and mild,
Stood that rough gale with a smile.
Soon the sky began to lighten
And the rain ceased falling.
Some drivers tried their cars to start
And found they couldn't get a spark.
Those that were rain-proof
Helped the others with a boost.
Pleasure seekers were before
Were ever held up on Old Oak Lake Shore.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

Two Great Revivals "Theme Three" and "Music is Magic"

The havoc wreaked in the lives of three innocent adults by the whispering campaign begun by a lying, spiteful child provides the theme of the powerful drama, "Theme Three," which brought Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon and Joel McCrea to the Capitol Theatre last night as smash revival bit No. 1 and continuing today and Tuesday.

From the pen of Lillian Hellman, the famous Broadway playwright, the story of "Theme three" is so skilfully developed and so brilliantly acted not alone by the stars but by the supporting cast as well, that the result is one of the most gripping and magnificent pieces of entertainment in the memory of this reviewer.

Briefly, the story is that of two college girls, Martha (Miriam) and Karen (Merle Oberon) who, the daughter of a young doctor, Joe Cardin (McCrea), turn a disbelieved old New England mansion into a charming school for girls.

A romance develops between Karen and Joe, so Martha conceals her own love for Joe. The school prospers but there are two disturbing factors in Martha's life, spooning actress and, who has installed herself as elocution instructor; the other is Mary Tilford, a vicious, lying child, who bullies the other children and will go to any lengths to escape the school duties.

One night, Joe happens to fall asleep in Martha's room while waiting there for Karen. Martha's aunt sees him leaving and the children, eavesdropping, overhear the aunt's unmistakable false conclusions. On these, the cunning Mary bases her plan to get even with the school, forcing her chief victim, Rosalie Wells, to confirm her wicked lie.

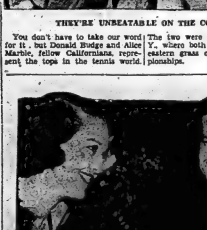
She succeeds in convincing her grandmother that evil is afoot in the school, with the result that an ugly scandal ensues and the school's pupils are taken away. Martha sues Mrs. Tilford for libel, but the case is lost, and the romance between Karen and Joe broken.

After a while, however, Martha succeeds in winning a confession from little Rosalie. So life is resurrected and Karen and Joe are reunited.

"Music is Magic"

Combining a good story, catchy music and eye-filling dance specialties "Music is Magic" is shown at the Capitol on Thursday, featuring Alice Faye. "Music is Magic" is a delightful all-singing, all-dancing show for talented Alice Faye. Her singing of the four hit numbers including "Music is Magic," "La Cumba" and "Honey Chile", is one of the high-spots of the picture.

Ray Walker, as the young master of ceremonies, who tries to project his sweetheart, Miss Faye, into stardom in Hollywood, is likeable and makes the most of an important role.



The comedy is handled by Mitchell and Durant, whose rough-and-tumble antics lend the sad-faces into gales of laughter. Both Daniels gives a clear-cut characterization to the role of the producer, picture star whose temperamental tantrums serve to give Miss Faye her first break in the movies.

The plot concerns itself with the efforts of Miss Faye, aided by her sweetheart and two friends, Mitchell and Durant, to win fame and fortune in Hollywood.

Miss Faye manages to get a part in a chorus in a filmaclass in which Miss Daniels is the star. Mitchell and Durant are also in the picture.

When Miss Daniels goes temperamental, Walker shrewdly sets about staging the startling test for Miss Faye and is himself appointed dance director.

Supplementing the main romance is a rivalry for the affections of Walker, back between Miss Daniels and her screen daughter, Rosina Lawrence.

LORETTA YOUNG IN LATEST MOVIE ROMANCE

Loretta Young, popular screen actress, and Joe Bankhieri, noted movie executive are seen dining at one of the night spots of the movie colony. The two are seen often together and their names are linked by friends as participants in Hollywood's newest romance.

AT THE BELLE

"Parnell"

Hailed as the first big hit of the new season, and the most powerful motion picture attraction in years, "Parnell", the tremendously moving fictional drama of Charles Stewart Parnell, uncrowned King of Ireland, opens a four days engagement at the Belle Theatre commencing tomorrow (Tuesday), matinee daily with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy of "Test Pilot" at the head of a cast of big names.

Gable plays their first co-starring success since "Men in White" and "Manhattan Melodrama," the new picture presents Gable as the dynamic Irish patriot who sacrifices a glorious career because of another man's wife, and Miss Loy as that man's wife, lovely Katie O'Shea, wedded to a man she despised.

The picture was directed and produced by John Stahl, who gave the screen such successes as "Back Street," "Imitation of Life" and "Magnificent Obsession." It is based on the famous Broadway stage hit, written by Elsie T. Schauffler, for the screen version the work of John Van Druten.

In the impressive supporting cast are Edna May Oliver in her first role since "Romeo and Juliet," this time as the lusty, lovable Aunt Ben; Billie Burke as the giggling giddy Clara, and Alan Hale will play the ambitious Capt. Willie O'Shea.

Director Stahl personally selected every member of the remaining twenty-five players with speaking roles. Of these the most prominent are Donald Crisp, Edmund Gwenn, Donald Crisp, Berton Churchill, Donald Meek, Kate Price. Neil Fitzgerald, Leonard Hodge, J. Farrell MacDonald, Montague Love, Beryl Mercerity, Phyllis Coghlan, Byron Russell, Brandon Tynan and Murray Kinnell. Adding a spectacular touch to the picture are more than a thousand Irishmen and women and children who play the background a true flavor of Old Erin.

John Van Druten, the scenarist, worked for six months to produce a script that would do justice to the magnitude of his subject, the political direction of Parnell and Katie, and the motivating force behind their romance, the stirring fight waged by Parnell for Ireland's freedom.

The stage play was a romance of tremendous emotional depth and power. The screen has retained all this, but goes further. It shows Parnell, the man, as well as the lover. It shows him leaving New York in March 1880 to the cheers of thousands of Irish-Americans. It shows him as a hero. It shows him arriving in Ireland where he was the "Uncrowned King," and the man to whom the British statesmen members of the Irish party, it shows him in the House of Commons, his greatest battlefield. One of the dramatic highlights is Parnell's trial. Accused of meeting Mrs. Phoenix Park murders, he proved his innocence after five of the most sensational trials in English history. So much so that these offered Art Director Cedric Gibbons opportunities for bigness and brilliance in setting.

At the height of his power, Parnell, who never looked at a woman, met Katie O'Shea, who was estranged from her husband. It was love at first sight with Parnell and Katie. Each fought Parnell's love until he became ill. Then she invited him to her home at Eltham and their romance blossomed.

O'Shea, following the withdrawal of Parnell's political support to end Katie's refusal of further financial aid, started a divorce, naming Parnell. For Katie's sake Parnell refused to defend himself. The resulting scandal ruining him politically all at the moment when he had the Irish Home Rule Bill in spite of his hand. But he had Katie and that was enough.

There has never been a more beautiful love story written and Parnell will surely reach deep into the hearts of all who see it.

The gorgeous Metrotone News flashes will be exhibited on the same program.

"Easy Living", Funny

The matchless, merriest romantic comedy of the year, "Easy Living" featuring Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold and Ray Milland will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times with Popeye's juniest cartoon, "Olive Oyl's World News event and "Little Pioneer," a gripping multiple-reel color drama.

John W. Dafoe, President, and Editor-in-Chief of the Winnipeg Free Press is chairman. Another who is in a position to represent the point of view of the Prairie Provinces. From the Maritime Provinces the government has chosen Robert A. Mackay, Professor of Government at Dalhousie University, Halifax, and from British Columbia, H. F. Angus, Professor of Government at the same University, British Columbia, Vancouver.

To Have Wide Powers

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the central purpose of the Commission is "to provide for a re-examination of the economic and financial basis of confederation, and of the distribution of legislative powers in the light of the economic and social developments of the last 60 years."

While the terms of reference of the Commission place special emphasis on financial problems, they are of the widest possible nature. The economic and financial aspects is due to the experience of recent years that the powers of the provinces have found it difficult or impossible to meet their responsibilities in the measure desirable to them.

In any new alignment of constitutional powers as between the Dominion and the provinces it has been considered essential to include measures which would place the governments on a more independent financial position.

Among other tasks laid before the Commissioner are: the question of the allocation of revenue sources and governmental functions as between Dominion and Provincial Governments and the suitability of the present constitutional law, practice and probable future conditions.

Study Public Debts

To look into the character and amount of the public debts of the provinces and municipalities and to study public debts and expenditures as a measure of the ability of governmental units to discharge their responsibilities in the present framework;

To decide whether the present distribution of legislative powers is adequate or conducive to efficiency;

To investigate Dominion subsidies to provinces and municipalities.

To express "What in their opinion, subject to the retention of the distribution of legislative powers essential to a proper carrying out of the Dominion's duty to convey with national needs and the progress of national unity, would be the effect a balanced 'relationship between the financial powers and the obligations and functions of each governing body."

Economic and social developments since 1926 have forced both Dominion and Provincial Governments to assume responsibilities not contemplated when the constitution divided up the sovereign powers of the newly created Dominion. This is one of the fundamental reasons assigned by Mr. King for the re-examination.

Municipal Finance

Discharge of these responsibilities, the Order-in-Council appointing the Commission stated, involved expenditures so great as to demand the most efficient administration and also the widest possible division of powers.

Statements have been made that Provincial Governments lacked sufficient revenue sources to enable them to meet their responsibilities, including the cost of unemployment relief, social services and debt payments. If this were true new revenue sources should be allotted to them or their burdens should be relieved. The commission is to report on this question.

The problem of municipal finance is also referred to in the order-in-council as an essential part of the problem of provincial finance.

Economic and social changes past and present, are matters of concern to commissioners. One of the reasons for the appointment of the commission is that the setup devised at Confederation might not be adequate to meet the "economic and social changes and the shifts in economic power which are in progress without subjecting Canada's governmental structure to undue strains and stresses."

MATTERN SCOURS

The first day's flight will take Mattern over the ice floes of the Arctic Ocean and the four-motored Russian plane may have been forced down. He said he would return to Fairbanks tonight without attempting the last leg and will be ready to continue his search as long as hope remains.

Mechanic to Accompany

"Hank" Jones, Mattern's mechanic, will accompany him in his rescue mission. Clear weather was reported over most of the route the merry plane will fly today.

Meantime, attempts will be made to coordinate the search for establishing contact with Russian rescue planes, Soviet officials said.

Joe Crosson, Alaska's veteran pilot of many flights, who has directed the search for the last three days, said today if the Russian plane landed in Alaska a systematic search should find it. However, he added: "A rescue in the Arctic regions would be more difficult," he said.

Believed Down on Floe

In 1932, Levanefsky flew into the wasting of Siberia to rescue Mattern, who crashed on an attempted world flight and nearly died before aid reached him.

Crosson, veteran of many an Alaska rescue flight, and S. K. Robbins and Murray Stewart, Alaska airways pilots, soared northward from here Saturday in a fan-like hunt which netted nothing.

Soviet pilotes and two icebreakers were enroute to emergency bases near the pole in an attempt to rescue the six fliers before the bitter Arctic winter, already setting in, closes down.

Levanefsky's huge plane crossed the Pole early Friday and soon afterward reported trouble in one of its four motors. Faint radio signals next day and Saturday indicated the plane was in trouble. In Moscow, the Soviet flight committee expressed belief the ship was down on an ice floe.

Message Picked Up

One weak, incomplete message—"No bearings, flying trouble with ... wave band"—picked up early Saturday by the U.S. Army Signal Corps at Nome, Alaska, at 10:44 a.m. E.D.T., gave hope the airmen were down safely.

This was more than seven hours after the 40-hour flight the airmen deemed the plane capable of flight.

In Washington the Soviet embassy reported Russian radio stations were unsuccessful in efforts to contact Levanefsky, who was crossing the Oakland, Calif., via Fairbanks and Minneola, Alta., on a course he hoped would some day be a commercial airline.

Hunting for lost aviators is an old story for Crosson, who flew the search for Will Rogers and Wiley Post back to California after their tragic crash near Point Barrow in 1935.

Recruited in Russia

Edmonton, Aug. 16—(CP)—In hope of imparting encouragement to the Russian airmen thought marooned somewhere in the Arctic regions since their transpolar airplane was apparently forced down Friday, a message was broadcast from here in Russian on Saturday and early Sunday.

It was known the polar airplane was equipped with long-wave receiving apparatus, although transmitting equipment was short-wave.

The message urged the fliers to continue efforts to inform the world of their whereabouts.

DECIDED DROP

At London, Robert Comrie died of injuries received when his automobile collided with a bus while at Hamilton, Mrs. Margaret McWhirter, 45, died from injuries received two weeks before when struck by a car.

Weekend crashes took two lives in the border. In Windsor Alcide Grant, 53, was run over by a car and injured fatally, while at Leamington Alfred Milner and Alfreda Burke, 11, Chicago, fatally, when they crashed head-on at Dead Man's Corner.

Licences Suspended

Last week Hon. T. H. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, announced the licenses of scores of Ontario motorists were suspended on charges at Aylmer and Simcoe as a campaign aimed at the dangerous driver. All motorists were invited, through newspaper advertising, to report cases of recklessness, giving complete facts.

In a single day about 200 cases were reported and 54 cancellations resulted, Mr. McQuesten said. All complaints are checked by traffic police before action is taken.

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 16—(CP)—Settled in a fall down the control Orange building elevator shaft. He returned with the wife from Derry Day celebration at Oshawa. He was unaware his wife had gone upstairs in the elevator to their fifth floor apartment and walked into the shaft. Mrs. Reitle found him at the bottom, his skull fractured.

Despite the attempt at a rescue of a fellow-doctor, Dr. R. T. Kidd, 32, Atwood, was drowned in Lake Huron near Kincardine. He was swimming with Dr. J. D. Colquhoun who went to his assistance when the latter's kidd got into difficulties in eight feet of water. He went down, however, before Dr. Colquhoun could save him.

SOVIET FLYERS MISSING ON POLAR FLIGHT

The third Russian transpolar aeroplane, a four motored machine piloted by Sigismund Levanefsky, is sang overdue at Fairbanks, Alaska, where it was to make the first stop on a proposed flight from Moscow to the United States. The aeroplane, carrying six Russian aviators, is reported to have run into severe storms over the North, Pole and was only using three of the four motors when last heard from. The fliers planned to stop at Fairbanks and Edmonton, to refuel.

Chicago Cubs Bowled Over By Reds in Twin Bill

(By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Did you ever see a worm turning? They're doing it all over the place these days. Washington's wallowing Senators are breezing along on an eight-game winning streak. Pittsburgh's pathetic Pirate machine going back toward third place in the National league, and Cincinnati's collapsible Reds have just made the high-and-mighty Chicago Cubs holler "uncle."

But for the championship of the society of turning worms, and for the classiest job of upsetting the applecart, we give you Connie Mack's collegiate collection of athletics.

They're either a brave band of youngsters, or they've been fooling everyone—including themselves—for a long time. Every other outfit in the big league falls apart at the mere mention of the Yankees and their big war clubs.

Take three Straight

Connie Mack's kids staggering along in the league cellar looked them in the eye over the week-end, didn't bother to touch or flex one, and proceeded to take three straight every mother's son.

Young Edgar Smith, who had been trying all season to his first straight victory, completed the sweep of the series with a seven-hitter pasted on the Yanks for a final, that hasn't been duplicated since May, 1934. Not even the champion Cleveland Indians accomplished it, but any club swept a three-game series from the Yankees.

The breaks made it easy for the A's go down in the books as the greatest little surprisers of the season.

The Yankees maintained their 10-game lead in the pennant chase, since the second-place Detroit Tigers nicked away a six run lead and lost 6-7 to St. Louis Browns.

In the National league the jinx-loaded Chicago Cubs were walloped thoroughly by the Reds and lost a doubleheader, 13-6 and 2-8 as a result their league lead was cut by four games because the second-place Giants turned back the Phillies 5-3. The Phillies to register a 5-3 decision for their third straight win.

Washington belted over the Red Sox twice, 9-3 and 8-3, to climb into fifth place and give the Boston crew the sixth by trouncing Cleveland 5-3 and 3-2 in a bargain bill.

Paul Derringer of St. Louis pitching easy relief and the Pirates picked up a win, 6-4 and 5-3, to make it three straight over the Cards. Brooklyn and Boston Bees battled through a 7-7 tie in comedy of errors, and split, the Dodgers winning the opener 7-6 and Danny MacFayden tossing a three-hitter for a 9-1 Boston win in the nightcap.

NEWARK BEARS WIN TWIN BILL

Even Matters With Royals Although Nothing Depended on Result

(By the Canadian Press)

Newark Bears are even with Montreal Royals now and the Bruins chose a most embarrassing time to get even with the Canadians for the double defeat Montreal plastered on the Bears recently.

It wasn't a question of league leadership. The Bears went at it as though they each got a share with the Royals and defeated them 8-3 and 10-6 before the Canadian home fans Sunday.

Joe Beggs won the 17th victory of the season in the first game, limiting the home club to eight hits, while the Bears took advantage of Ed Chapman, who walked 10, made a wild pitch and was hit 10 times.

In the nightcap, Dave Harris' home with two on put the Royals ahead, but not for long. Newark's attack rolled back the threat and the Bears won with a four-run uprising in the fifth.

Pete Reiser pitching by Pete Sivess in the second game had a batting battle more Orioles to win 7-3 after losing the first contest, 10-6. Reiser got his 6-2. Howard Krist shackled the flock in the first game.

Syracuse Chiefs went on a hitting spree to capture the second game from Jersey City, 9-4, and the Giants won the opener 8-2. Bill Posedel, who pitched the Syracuse registered his sixth triumph of the season over the Giants. Ernie Smith started for the Giants but was cuffed for getting four hits, participating in three double plays and stealing two bases.

Syracuse Chiefs rallied to beat Montreal Maple Leafs 5-4 although they got hit the Leafs 18-7. Lloyd (Whitey) Moore was the Chiefs' winning hurler.

Newark's twin victory was the second in two days. They came to Montreal after defeating the Leafs 6-5 and 5-2 in Toronto Saturday. The Royals that day won 5-3 and 7-4 from Syracuse. Other Saturday games saw the Orioles shut out Rochester 3-0 and Buffalo win 3-1 from Jersey City.

GRAHAMS WIN TIP TOP TROPHY

Defeat Airmen 20–6 And Meet Point Anne in Playdowns

Trenton, Aug. 16 (Special)—Nine hits, walks and an Airman's error constituted the nine run outburst in Saturday night's game that gave Graham's softball nine a decisive 20-6 victory over R.C.A.F. and the league crowd of the season jammed Sayabora Park to witness the encounter. The Graham squad took the lead in the opening round, pushing Miller and Gray across the plate. Driving Davis, the Flyers' starting moundsman, off the hill with a terrific bombardment. In the third session, the Garagemen bagged nine runs and clinched the contest. Spano, who replaced Davis on the Fort team's slab allowed the Graham hickory for three innings but he also was the victim of a lucky break in the seventh frame when the leaders turned four hits and two walks into five runs.

The Graham outfit continued slugging in the eighth and ninth counting two runs in each. During the last inning Anderson was recorded. Gray covered all four bags in the seventh for Graham and his mate, Ellis, went on a round trip in the third. Spano struck out 12 batters, a record accent in the sixth. The Garagemen's left fielder, Andy Anderson, had a perfect night at bat with five safeties and a walk in six trips to the plate. Anderson's fingers gave up 20 hits, while Gordon Derry, the Graham pitching ace, turned in over the nine round route.

The win was Graham's consecutive 12-0. Howard Krist shackled the flock in the first game.

Syracuse Chiefs rallied to beat Jersey City, 9-4, and although they got hit the Leafs 18-7. Lloyd (Whitey) Moore was the Chiefs' winning hurler.

Newark's twin victory was the second in two days. They came to Montreal after defeating the Leafs 6-5 and 5-2 in Toronto Saturday. The Royals that day won 5-3 and 7-4 from Syracuse. Other Saturday games saw the Orioles shut out Rochester 3-0 and Buffalo win 3-1 from Jersey City.

Oshawa, Aug 16—Staging a ninth-inning rally that netted them three runs Oshawa Generals defeated Napanee to move into a tie with Peterboro for third place in the O.H.A. standings when they handed Napanee Gibbards a 4 to 3 defeat. The game was the first meeting between the clubs here took a 2 to 2 senior Central Ontario League tilt. Four widely scattered hits during the nine innings, but one was a homer by Hansford, which accounted for two runs. Tommy Pointer went the route for the victors and was touched for seven hits in the first eight frames, but Oshawa ganged him for three hits in the final frame, while the Napanee team fell to pieces defensively to permit Oshawa to score the win. The result left the locals still a half game ahead in the league standings with one game remaining; Kingston, which will conclude the regular schedule and definitely decide first place in the standing.

Canadian Soap Box Champion

Above is shown George Wilson, driver of car No. 27 and Mrs. and Mrs. George E. Wilson of 111 Chatham street. The youngster who won the Canadian Soap Box Championship at Toronto last week finished fourth in the International Derby held yesterday at Akron Ohio, in one of the most sensational finishes in the history of the sport. Entries from the United States, Honolulu, South Africa and Canada thundered in a huddle of cars which necessitated a photographic proof before the winner could be decided. Wilson was heard over the National Broadcasting Company's network in an interview with Graham Manning, famous sports commentator.

By virtue of his splendid victories Ballard will receive a university scholarship valued at two thousand dollars. Two brand new automobiles and other prizes will be presented to the runners-up.

Red Face of Honor

Wilson, the diminutive Canadian was given a place of honor with Danny Wege, South African champion in the colorful parade held previous to the race. The young Canadian and South African led the parade down the Celebrity to inspiring music of a dozen bands. One of the most spectacular arrays of color and pageantry ever witnessed in this city took over one hour to pass the judges' stand, while thousands of cheering spectators lined the course.

Over one hundred thousand people it is estimated viewed the famous classic at the "Derby Downs" speedway, which was especially erected for Soap Box Derbies. Seventeen bands paraded in a riot of pageantry between the packed lines of people, heading the one hundred and twenty-three boy contestants as they marched along the course previous to the race. Many notables of automobile racing circles were present including Harry Hart and Wilbur Shortt, 1937 winner of the 1937 classic held at Indianapolis.

Eleven hundred and seventy-five feet of concrete speedway comprise the course. A sixteen per cent. question.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

To those who so capably came to our assistance and contributed the splendid copy for last week's column, we say "thanks a million." Judging from the comment heard around town the idea of "guest columns" met with the approval of the general run of sport fans, and as much we will have other guest columnists from time to time especially during the advent and exodus of the various phases of the sporting calender. At any rate let Art Cole, George Laughlin, Don Delaney, Bill Todd, Ernie Hubbard and Claude Tice, we repeat, "Thank you kindly and we may call upon you again.

Now let's see where the local sporting situation lies. Understand the Albian Juniors, Point Anne and the Kiwanis juniors are all slated for provincial play-downs this week. This evening the winners of the Trenton Loop journey to Point Anne for the first game of the first round play-offs in the intermediate "B" series of the O.A.S.A. with the return game at Trenton on Wednesday. The Albian juniors journey to Peterboro on Thursday and play the return game here on Friday, rather savvy dates. Then they're off to the Ontario Baseball Association play-downs the Kiwanis kids are scheduling in Peterborough on Wednesday with the return game to be played here on Friday. Four grounds on Saturday afternoon, Belleville is scheduling for Wednesday baseball city, but the Kiwanis' request for a home stand on a Wednesday may put the kibosh on the Loft Lock City interests, owing to Belleville's Exhibition Day being in progress this week. At any rate "Twig" Woodley is plenty busy having his proposed dates switched and says his kids will play the Junior Petes at their actions.

Over in Trenton a press despatch recently announced the Trenton Softball Interests would enter a Junior team into the O.A.S.A. play-downs. Just how the Trenton moguls can expect to enter a team in the provincial junior circles after July 15th is questionable. Incidentally there was a report here circulated around regarding the Trenton interests "switching" players to that ultimate league from ours after July 15th—naughty, naughty boys—that is if the rumour is true and you guys are getting a rep for that trick.

Through the medium of George Wilson racing at the International Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio yesterday the name of BELLEVILLE was broadcast all over the United States. Wilson's driving was interviewed by Tom Manning, veteran ether sports announcer from Cleveland and the local youngster surely put in a big day for the old home town. Through the medium of the two Belleville dailies and George Pepper, Belleville has received more publicity in the past 6 months than any recent medium we can recall. And then some people will tell us that the sponsorship of sports does not pay invaluable premiums to a community.

According to what reagre Inspector Hanson we could receive Wilson if we were forced to change the wheels of his machine, the lure of which is we have carried him to victory in Toronto and Belleville before three inches large in the latter. Wilson finished third in the Toronto event, which included Stan't's from South Africa and Honolulu. A boy named Ballard accidentally knocked a wheel off Wilson's car on the first lap and Mrs. Wilson, in the grand stand at Trenton, was very "thanks a million." From the Doorway

Nancy strithers tried hard to keep up to Mrs. Collister as they walked up the narrow street. She was difficult, as the latter was a brisk walker. Mrs. Collister had two or three steps to every one of Miranda's.

"And that wasn't all, either. Ida thought she was satisfying Ted Marcus all along, but she burned the tables on her by marrying that Simmons girl from the city. Served her right. She needn't have run after him so."

"Really," remarked Mrs. Collister politely. "And how does Ida feel about it?"

"She hasn't stirred out of the house hardly. Once or twice I've come across her, but she goes by as fast you can't even talk to her. Oh, I don't say Ida has a like girl; all her folks are, I guess. But she should've have run after him like she did. A man likes a woman who's indifferent and acts as though he were nothing when he's with her. Course when she's alone she can think what she wants like he let him see she liked him. Any man would resent that."

"Mmm." Mrs. Collister slackened her pace somewhat. "She's not old, it soon. She's so young."

"It won't be as easy as all that. She's so awfully proud, just like her father. He's nothing so wonderful, but he forgets for that Jordan concern. You'd think he was mayor, from the way he acts."

"Why, that reminds me!" Miranda Collister stopped before a store. "She used to go out with Dick Jordan, didn't she?"

"Oh, yes, I suppose so. But of course he just went with her 'cause there wasn't so many girls in town. What could a college fellow like he want of a girl like Ida? She isn't even pretty."

"He was a very good-looking fellow, I thought. He's gone back to the city, I suppose?"

"Yes, of course. He comes up once in a while to see how the business is running, but he never stays very long. Why should he? There's nothing for him in a small place like this."

"They must be quite rich. I hear they've got seven cars, all over this section of the country."

"They're millionaires, all right, and I guess Ida thought she was pretty special prancing around with him. Well, you see how it all ended. I knew it would be like that. Why doesn't she pick out someone of her own class, and not run after him like she did Ted Marcus? Everybody knew she had her net set for him."

"But Dick Jordan acted as though he really liked her," Mrs. Collister ventured.

"Oh, he was fooling her right along; she really thought it was true. You've got to be careful these days. You never know who's sincere and who isn't. Wasn't that just like a girl, to begin going around with Ted just as soon as the other had gone back to the city?"

"Ted and Dick were good friends, weren't they?"

"Yes, I hear they went to school together."

"Why, hello Nancy and Miranda" exclaimed Mrs. Hewson, coming from the store next to them and smiling broadly from among her parcels. Her buxomness intimated a jolly nature. "Have you heard the latest?"

"What's that?" demanded Nancy.

"Ida Norton has run off and married Dick Jordan! They've got a swell place in the city waiting for them when they get back from their honeymoon. She bought her a car, too, all her own. And what do you think? Why, Allen has been appointed manager of the plant in this town!"

Miranda and Nancy stared at the woman in astonishment.

"Ida!" Miranda gasped. It was all a put-up affair about Ted Marcus. She was just leading on little Ernest Perron, quite deliberately, so as to get him back. Ted Marcus didn't pay any attention to her. Then Dick told Ted he should try to make Ida jealous. Ted comes here as an efficiency man to the plant, and Ida starts right in flirting with Ida."

"Well!" exclaimed Mrs. Collister comprehendingly. "Dick told Ida to play up to him!"

"Ida left for the city to meet him."

"Well, of all the queer things I ever heard, I ..."

"Aw, shut your mouth," came a shrieky voice within the archway of the door.

Nancy looked up angrily and faced the innocent-looking parrot hanging in its cage. The owner of the store tried to stifle him, but she rushed off, followed by the other two, Mrs. Collister trying hard to suppress a smile.

MARMORA

Marmora—Something must be done to doubtless the cry of all the members of the rodent world, "we haven't half a chance". So must have been the thought of one mouse depicted in the tragedy, to be now related. On the second shelf in the pantry of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Clifford, on the old highway between Marmora and Deloro, there were two set mouse traps, side by side. An irresponsible young mouse, scampering across the shelf, had the dire misfortune to get himself hopelessly caught in both traps. Mrs. Clifford, busy about the kitchen, heard a terrific racket in the pantry. Not particularly alarmed, she went to investigate and saw to her horror a huge spotted adder, hanging head down in the corner of the shelf, who had seized the mouse's head and was unsuccessfully trying to extract it from the trap. Mrs. Gifford being alone, hurried to her nearest neighbour's to the home of Mr. James Murphy. When they returned to the house the snake had coiled itself around, mouse traps and all and was still vainly endeavouring to dislodge the mouse. Mr. Murphy slid the mouse traps and snake into a pail of water and was later able to kill the reptile. When measured the snake proved to be three feet seven inches long

Well-Drilling Equipment Comes in Contact With High Voltage

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 14 (CP)—Four workmen were electrocuted today at suburban Marsh Bridge, 10 miles from Saint John, when well-drilling equipment they were carrying came in contact with high voltage lines of the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission.

Hiram Parry of nearby Acadia. Guy McCullum of Saint John and Clyde Kennedy of Beaver Harbor, N.B., died instantly as contact with the high voltage sent the current through their bodies.

George Perry, burned terribly when he attempted to rescue his father, died shortly afterwards while doctors, rushed from Saint John on a telephone call from a witness to the accident, fought on the spot to save his life.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 16—The path of least resistance was downward for the general run of leaders in today's stock market.

While a handful of specialties managed to overcome light offerings, declines of fractions to a point or more were well distributed near the final hour.

Dealings were small from the start. The turnover was at the rate of about 700,000 shares. Stocks dipped substantially at the opening, although a few gained their losses before the finish.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE Close

Toronto, Aug. 16.—(CP)—The advance in the gold group was carried further in fairly active trading on the Toronto Exchange today while the western oils developed a firm tone in the afternoon and industrials and base metals closed irregularly lower. Secondary and Junior golds held the day's interest and gains of 5 to 10 cents were showing at the close for a majority of the active issues.

Wright Hargreaves pushed up to 4.79 and was holding a gain of about 10 cents at the close. Gains of 5 to 10 were registered by Sladen Malartic, Preston, Oro Plata, Paramour, Teck Hughes, Bralorne, O'Brien, Canadian Malartic, Omega, Bidgood-Kirkland, Coburn and Howey. Buffalo-Ankerite at 11 was up 1-4 and Hollinger also added 1-4. Dome Lake Shore and McIntyre were off slightly.

MARKET COMMENT

The Canadian market last week was a heartening affair in more ways than one. In addition to a better tone developing in the gold industrial section, where several issues came in for considerable demand and moved forward, the mining list showed signs of coming to life on increased volume trading. The western wheat crop looks a little more hopeful than it did a few weeks ago and business is holding up better than expected.

Although everyone was expecting a strong market immediately after Labor Day, it is entirely likely that it may develop before that date in which event many traders will find their favorites considerably above prevailing quotations by the time Labor Day arrives around. It should be remembered that the usual seasonal trend of rising markets is from June to early September and this should not be entirely disregarded.

Brazilian Traction has been handicapped for some years by the low quotations for the nilreis in relation to the Canadian dollar and during the past year there has been a material change for the better in this direction. From 1926 to 1936 the nilreis averaged in Canadian currency 37.78 cents the value equated at around 6 cents at the end of December of last year. At the end of February the value was approximately 6.30 cents; at the end of April, about 6.40 cents while today it is quoted at about 6.75 cents. In other words, at today's quotations the nilreis is worth 12 per cent more in Canadian currency than the average for last year. In view of the very substantial earnings of Brazilian Traction in milreis this is a factor of major importance in operating results of Brazilian Traction in the current year.

Sullivan Ore Picture Improves

Several new sections of highgrade ore have been encountered underground during recent weeks at Sullivan. On the first level from her 4 zone has been opening up in a more spectacular manner than anyone at the time was expected. It was thought last year that Number 4 zone would continue to improve in the lower horizons, especially in the neighborhood of the 1,000 level but this was developed by sublevel mining.

Good width, sometimes up to 40 feet, have been met on the first level. Ore grade has also been such that the section will provide mine average grade, even in large stopes.

Also of interest at the property was the discovery of two weeks ago of a new zone on the bottom level. Free gold has been located, associated with the quartz and sulphides in the section and it is believed that the ore vein has been traced up to the higher levels, adding further mining possibilities.

The long drive that is being extended west to pick up a contract zone known to be located under the lake on the property, has reached a point about half a mile from the shaft. It is believed that now being sought will soon be reached. A flow of water into the property for a few days but this has been cemented and the advance is being continued at a rapid rate, a mechanical mucker being employed to speed operations. Two veins and a wide dyke of porphyry have already been cut in the new drive and the management feels that Sullivan has excellent possibilities for ore development in the near area.

TABERNACLE'S NEW PASTOR TAKES SERVICES

Rev. D. T. McClintock, formerly of Brantford, and now pastor of the Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, made his first appearance in Belleville pulpits on Sunday when he preached at the union services at the Tabernacle and the Bridge Street congregations. At his morning service at the Tabernacle, he spoke on the text Colossians 2, 14-15, "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to His cross;

And having spoiled principalities and powers, He made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it."

The minister said that Jesus thoroughly versed in Old Testament, did not quote ancient literature without a purpose. Paul, likewise, the student and graduate of the Hebrew schools was educated also at Jerusalem and knew Greek and Roman literature, as he often quotes quotes from literature. He appears to have received his early education in the town of Tarsus. Especially when He opened his mouth as a teacher as the age of thirty years, he spoke with authority. He overthrew Jewish ethics, "Preach," said the minister, "we overemphasize the tenderness of Jesus. I do not find that at any occasion that He admitted defeat except in His death. He was convinced that in some way His death on Calvary glanced through.

What type of man was this? He was always triumphant, resourceful. He won our flesh as the robe of a king. Yet all the victories of His life seemed to disappear in the seeming awful defeat of Calvary.

In the text Paul was attacking the heresy of principalities and powers. He said Jesus dying on the cross of shame, conceding intimate words, "Father Forgive them," as different from heretical view that God was so be understood and approached only through priests. In that prayer it is shown that Jesus is conquering real. Today we do not believe in the rule of demons and principalities and powers. Today we believe that God is very near, Jesus on the cross defeated all principalities and powers.

Mr. McClintock expressed the view that in the words "the handwriting of ordinances that was against us," meant that in Christ there is the assurance that the tendencies of man was nailed to the cross, and that man may realize his sins are forgiven.

During the service Miss Isebelle Godfrey of Brantford played a violin solo. In the evening Mr. McClintock spoke at Bridge Street United Church.

DELORO REGAINS THE LEADERSHIP OF SOCCER LOOP

Marmora, Aug. 16 (Special)—The satisfaction of seeing their team regain the league leadership and to hold a favoured place for the championship was accorded the Deloro football supporters on Saturday afternoon when they saw their team at home defeat the doughty C.G.E. eleven by 4 goals to 1. Chamberlain, Deloro's centre goalie was on absence on his side but McCracken was deprived himself in a good game and had no chance to clear three of the goals registered by Deloro. The finishers started off with their opponents facing the sun.

Brown almost scored with a shot which hit the cross bar. C.G.E. executed a rush and Jack McMaster placed the ball past O'Neill to be ruled offside. Keeping up the attack, the Electrics came near to scoring as Keith headed the ball in for Deloro but after a long scrimmage in the Peterborough team, McMaster got the ball and Brown placed a high one in front of goal for O'Neill to clear. The ball then travelled to the other end and Brown placed it a little too high in attempting to score. Mitchell did the same thing near the Deloro goal. McPhail with a long shot hit the upright end to end rushes featuring the remainder of the first half. After J. Hart had placed the ball through for a rush, a high kick on front of goal for O'Neill to clear, the

ABERHART REJECTS REFERENCE TO COURTS

'Compelled by Mandate To Proceed', He Says; Ottawa Cabinet Meets

Aberhart Challenges Bankers to Take Bills to Courts

GRANTING OF FIATS

Question of Validity to be Dealt With by Opponents

Edmonton, Aug. 17 (CP)— The Social Credit Government of Premier William Aberhart went ahead today with plans for enforcing its Bankers' Licensing Legislation, refusing to facilitate a reference to the Supreme Court of Canada on validity of the Alberta Act.

"We are compelled by the mandate of our people to proceed with the enforcement of our legislation," Mr. Aberhart told Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a telegram despatched last night following a lengthy cabinet meeting here.

Reference Suggested

The Federal Prime Minister wired Mr. Aberhart last Wednesday stating the Ottawa Government to refrain from enforcing the three banking bills passed at a recent special session of the legislature, until their validity had been passed on by the courts. He added if the Provincial Administration would facilitate hearing of such a reference.

In Ottawa the Dominion cabinet prepared to deal this afternoon with Premier Aberhart's reply which stated: "No such reference could be offered to justify delay in implementing the clearly expressed will of the people."

Results Demanded

Mr. Aberhart asserted in his telegram the legislation was designed to "compel financial tyranny to reveal itself so that it dares to oppose" as well as to obtain results "demanded unanimously by the overwhelming majority of our people here."

He challenged the banks to take to the courts the bills which (1) require all bank managers and bank employees in Alberta to take out licenses, (2) close Alberta courts to any bank employee who does not take out a license, and (3) refer to the Judicature Act to prohibit a constitutional test of any Alberta

Disallowance of Laws May Become Possibility

NO PUBLIC COMMENT

Federal Veto Has Not Been Exercised Since 1924

Ottawa, Aug. 17 (CP)—A cabinet session will be held this afternoon to consider Premier Aberhart's refusal to co-operate in sending three Alberta statutes to the Supreme Court to test their constitutionality.

Disallowance of the three laws now becomes a possibility and this drastic power of federal veto over provincial enactments likely will be considered at the meeting. It has not been exercised since 1924.

We are compelled by the mandate of our people to proceed with the enforcement of our legislation," the Alberta premier advised Prime Minister Mackenzie King last night. He referred to three acts passed at a special session of the Legislature ten days ago, the first to compel bankers to take out licenses and subscribe to provincial control of banking policy, the second to close the courts of Alberta to unlicensed bankers and the third to prevent anyone from testing the constitutionality of Alberta statutes in an Alberta court without the permission of the government.

Question of Disallowance

Ministers of the government have made no public comment on the question of disallowance but Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe is on record as of the opinion that no power has lapsed with the years. He so expressed himself during a House of Commons debate last session.

Power provided in the British North America Act to enable the Dominion Government to disallow acts of Provincial legislatures, has not been exercised since 1924 when an act of the Alberta legislature, imposing a tax on mineral lands, was rejected with no public comment.

No Interference

While there have been petitions and requests in recent years for disallowance of provincial acts, the present government has not acted nor, so far as known, entertained any idea of interfering with provincial legislation.

FIVE DAY BATTLE IS STILL RAGING NEAR SHANGHAI

Thousands Killed in Fighting as Warships Take Part

PLANES IN BATTLE

Residents in International Area Evacuate in Thousands

Shanghai, Aug. 17 (AP)—Heavy explosions about the bank of the French concession today as bursting shells from Chinese and Japanese artillery batteries opened their fragments over the International areas.

Uncounted numbers of foreigners and Chinese were fearful today as the thousands already killed and wounded in the five-day battle for this Oriental metropolis of 3,500,000 people.

More than 2,000 British and American women and children played hide and seek with death today, to flee down the Whangpoo River under the blazing guns of the Japanese fleet. But other thousands were trapped in the International Settlement.

Japanese warships were spraying the western portions of the battlement with shell fragments. Authorities of the French concession reported the jagged hunks of metal were taking a similar toll there.

More than 100,000 troops were locked in battle on land and sea around the most modern of commercial cities and in the storm clouds above it.

ARCTIC AIRMAN JOINS IN SEARCH

Bob Randall to Comb District Between Aklavik And Fairbanks

Aklavik, N.W.T., Aug. 17.—(CP)— His plane chartered by the Russian Embassy in Washington, one of Canada's most seasoned Arctic Airmen, 27-year-old Bob Randall is participating today in the widespread search for the Soviet Trans-polar plane, unreported since early Friday.

Accompanied by engineer Jerry Buckan, the young Mackenzie air line pilot took off from Edmonton Saturday and headed north for the following night. Randall planned to follow the Arctic coast to Herschel Island and Point Barrow.

His Fairchild Monoplane is equipped with long wave radio and wireless key, and the pilot will have his signals relayed to Washington from the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals stations via Fort Norman and Simpson.

With effective wireless range limited to 50 miles and a cruising radius of 700 miles, Randall and Jimmy Malitero, noted United States bush pilot, comb the area north and west of Aklavik, at the mouth of the Mackenzie River, 1,750 miles north-west of Edmonton.

TRIPLE DROWNING PLUNGES VILLAGE IN DEEP MOURNING

Three Sisters 11 to 16 Drown in Thessalon River

BODIES RECOVERED

Believed One Girl in Difficulty And Other Two Attempted Rescue

Thessalon, Ont., Aug. 17 (CP) — Three girls aged 11 to 16, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred King, were drowned in the Thessalon River here late yesterday. The bodies were recovered early today after almost all the residents of this Algoma district town had joined in a search for the trio.

It was reported the youngest girl, 11-year-old Gertrude King, had got into difficulties while they were swimming and that her sisters Beulah, 16, and Ruby, 14, had drowned in an attempt to rescue her. Bruise on the forehead of Gertrude indicated she had struck a rock or some other obstruction in the river.

The girls left their home in the afternoon, several hours later when they had not returned, a search got under way. A little boy of clothes lying on the river bank was found late in the evening and dragging operations began. The bodies were found in seven feet of water early this morning.

When the girls failed to return during the afternoon it was thought they had drowned. It was then decided that surrounds this Northern Ontario town 60 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie. Recollection by some of the children that they had noticed the missing trio near the river, carrying bathing suits, led the scattered search to be concentrated.

Within a short time the girls' clothes were found on the bank. Dragging operations were carried out from 10.30 p.m. until 1.30 a.m. before the bodies were recovered. The tragedy was the worst Thessalon has experienced in years.

Three-Man Commission To Be Named by Premier; Chevrier To Be Chairman

Safety of Highway Travel Control of Commercial Vehicles Studied

M'QUESTEN'S VIEW

Highway Transportation System Will be Investigated

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—A three-man Royal Commission to conduct an inquiry into the highway transport situation in Ontario will be appointed by Premier Hepburn within a few days, it was understood in Queen's Park today. Mr. Justice R. S. S. Chevrier of the Supreme Court of Canada was mentioned as the probable chairman of the commission.

The problem of control and regulation of passenger and freight transport on Provincial highways will be studied by the Commission, it was understood. It was reported the appointment would be announced as soon as Mr. Justice Chevrier accepted the Commission chairmanship.

Public Safety

The Ontario Municipal Board now controls highway transport. Public commercial vehicle licenses have been granted only by order of the Board. However, it was said Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, for some time has felt that the Board's machinery has been insufficiently regulated and that the safety of highway travel has been endangered by lack of control of public commercial vehicles.

J. B. STETSON PLANT TO OPEN

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 17.—(CP)— Plant of the John B. Stetson Company (Canada) Limited, closed for seven years, will re-open and employees, opened today. The management announced a "number" of hitherto refused to their jobs.

Strike leaders claimed shortly after the plant opened their ranks were not broken. Notices from the firm to all employees yesterday ordered them the plant would open this morning and men failing to report for duty would lose their jobs.

After a conference yesterday afternoon the strikers sent a delegation to Premier Hepburn who is holding discussions with Canadian officials in their employers in attempt to settle two Ontario textile strikes.

Provincial police were on duty at the plant at opening time today. They reported there was no disturbance.

Priest, physician on vacation, from Cleveland, Ohio, and family, who have spent the past two days in this city visiting points of interest in the district.

"That is the number of very small children selling papers on the streets at all hours of the night. Last evening, for example, we were accosted no less than six times between our hotel and lunchroom by children, none of them not much older than six or seven years, carrying big bundles of papers. They're persistent salesmen, too."

Police conducted an extensive search and succeeded in locating five of the bundles of washing, they had been rolling into parcels and left in the same vicinity from which they had been purloined, presumably to be picked up at a later date. 2 Traps Hold Mouse As Adder Swallows

The official dignity of Mousedom has been ruffled, 'tis bad enough for mice to be caught in our trap of human device but when a small rodent so far forgets itself as to become entangled in the coils of the same time—well that is a little too much.

A small country mouse suffered these indignities, with a worse end to come when it entered the pantry of Mrs. John Gifford of Marmora township, on the Crowe River. Mrs. Gifford discovered the mouse in the act of nibbling a piece of pie, a pair of traps while in the offing was a large garter snake, ready to attend the hand and body of the mouse through the traps.

Mrs. Gifford left the house returned with a neighbor John Murphy, who aided her coiled thief-ridden body with traps and had the head of the snake severed after an effort to procure a meal. Murphy killed the adder which measured forty-three inches in length.

POLICE SEARCH FOR A. DANFORD

Missing From His Home in Coe Hill Since Sunday

Missing from his home near Coe Hill since Sunday noon, considerable anxiety is being held for the whereabouts of Alfred (Tom) Danford, 24-year-old resident of that district today. Despite the fact Provincial Police and peace of mill hands and farmers have been searching an entire neighborhood for two days, no signs of the missing man were found.

After partaking of his noonday meal on Sunday, Mr. Danford left his home to "take a stroll" in the neighbourhood, but has not been seen nor heard from since. On Monday morning Provincial Constables McBrien and Palmatier, of Belleville, conducted a posse and search for the missing man, while two lumber mills and one small mining concern closed their doors and joined in the hunt, some 40 mill employees assisting in the search that lasted all day Monday without results. Constables McBrien and Palmatier abandoned the search late last night, while the large posse retired for the night, there being no advantage of searching in the dak. The posse, under mill supervision, resumed its search today.

"Some of the Coe Hill residents seem to believe Mr. Danford was picked up by a passing motorist and is visiting relatives in other parts of the county, although we could not verify this belief," stated Constable McBrien today.

Rotarian Convention at Nice Described by Delegate Baird

75,000 Registered at World Gathering of Rotarians, Families

CONVENTION FEATURES

Belleville Rotary Club regular meeting Monday in the Hotel Quinte was featured with a report on the Rotary International annual convention at Nice, France, held in June and attended by Rotarian Alf Baird of the local club. A very comprehensive description of the convention and the voyage over and back was given by Rotarian Baird, who described the event as one of great interest and much benefit in that delegates from many nations gathered in good will and friendship, became better acquainted and pledged themselves anew to the Rotary objective of peace on earth and good will to man.

Sailing from the port of New York on the great Cunarder 'Queen Mary', pride of England, Rotary delegates were given every arrangements made for their comfort and entertainment. The Cunard Company placed one of their executives at his disposal of the Rotary delegates and everything possible was done to make the trip pleasant and memorable. One room is permanently set aside on the Queen Mary for Rotary meetings, suitably decorated and very comfortable. The first meeting held there on this voyage brought out 72 Rotarians including Rotarian Baird from Scandinavia, who rendered upon to say a few words about Beautiful Belleville by the Bay.

Britain Welcome

In England Rotary headquarters in London was prepared to extend the warmest of welcomes to all visiting Rotarians and facilities to see the sights in the British Isles.

A special train from Calais brought the Belleville delegates and associates to Nice, a very beautiful city facing the Mediterranean and backed by lofty mountains. Opened by the President of France with an eloquent speech the convention was successful in every way and an elaborate programme of entertainment was put on by the citizens of the French city which was duly back to B.C. and still can show traces of Roman occupation.

One of the highlights of the entertainment was the parade, "Battle of the Flowers" in which French girls sold baskets of flowers at two or three francs each and then properly supplied with ammunition, everybody was pelted with flowers until the streets were strewn knee deep in petals.

15,000 Register

Rotarians and members of their families to the number of 15,000 were registered at the convention, and 56 countries were represented directly with their own delegates while many others were represented by proxies.

Addresses were made in various languages but all were printed and translated in any language required.

Belleville delegate found that his vocation was the only one of the kind represented at the convention, that of entomologist, and the word was almost too much for the skill of the official badge. However the Belleville delegate became acquainted with government officials of various countries and acquired interesting and valuable information.

On the homeward voyage a Rotary meeting was held which was addressed by the Past President of the Hong Kong Rotary club who stressed the value of Rotary in promoting better understanding between nations and abolishing the danger of war.

The speaker was introduced by Past President Ed Bernstein, and Rotary appreciation was expressed by Past President Bob Graham and President Fred Douglas.

Guest of the club was MacGregor Esson, President of Ottawa Rotary Club.

PROMPT ACTION SAVES YOUTH

Jumps in Bay When Clothing Fired by Gasoline

His clothes alight when fired by gasoline which he had used for washing the tank of his outboard motor in the Bay harbor last evening, Thomas Rayner, visiting Oswego youth, chose the best method of extinguishing the flames by promptly jumping from the dock into the bay. No burns were suffered by the quick-thinking youth.

In company with a friend, Rayner, travelling on a lake cruise in his father's outboard motor launch, had stopped over in Belleville harbor for the purpose of purchasing gasoline for the filling tank of his motor, a flare-up of the vapor occurred. Realizing his clothes had been fired in the water, his friend, equally as quick-thinking, threw a motor blaze with a blanket, and tossed the can and remaining blazing gasoline into the water. Damage to engine and boat was nil.

DRIVING PERMIT IS CANCELLED

Motorist is Also Sentenced to Serve Term in Jail

Following a motor accident, that happened near the O.S.D. yesterday afternoon when two motor cars were damaged, and two persons injured, the driver of one car, Joseph Lucy of this city, pleaded guilty to driving a car while his license was under reckless driving, when he appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, in the Belleville County Court House today. He was sentenced to serve thirty days in jail and fined $15.00 and costs for reckless driving, while his driver's permit was permanently cancelled.

Patrolman Ervine investigated the accident and found that Lucy had been proceeding westerly, when the car he was driving collided with another car, motor car, being driven in the opposite direction by Miss Wilma Hahan of 34 Waterloo Ave., and four other young ladies, who were occupants of the car, escaped without injury, although their 1936 model Chrysler car was badly damaged on the side of the vehicle being badly damaged. The car driven by Miss Hahan was also badly damaged about the front fenders, radiator and hood. Mr. Lucy escaped with minor lacerations about the head, the result of the crash.

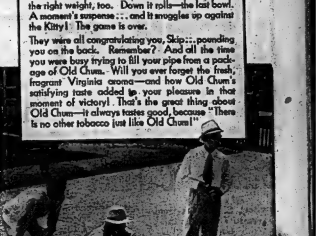
Lucy was arrested at the scene of the accident, while the two wrecked vehicles were towed to a local garage. Lucy appeared in court this morning before Traffic Officer Sam Ferguson Crowe, Attorney L. C. Duncan, K.C. regarding the matter.

POLICE BLOTTER

Complaining he was foot-sore, leg-weary and destitute and in need of assistance, who authorities say is John Leland, no address, hobbled into the County Court House late yesterday afternoon and requested he be given a short jail term in order to rest. Gaoler G. H. Preson obliged. Informed the city police and today Leland appeared before H. B. Wilson, Justice of the Peace, and was remanded in custody on a nominal charge of vagrancy for one week.

"Leland has been in the county jail before and was the cook here at one time. He is a quiet unassuming man, but suffers from foot trouble, doubtless the result of his lengthy travels. After his feet are rested he continues his journeys as though nothing had happened, however," Gaoler French informed the Ontario-Intelligencer today.

Attacked by a large dog when she was attempting to chase the canine away from molesting her pet cat, a lady resident of Moira St. Albans on the 14th was bitten twice on the left leg yesterday.



Traffic Officer Ellis investigated and upon learning the owner's name contacted him to keep his dog in custody in the future. According to police reports the dog was molesting a pet cat and the woman remonstrated with her neighbor. In order to discourage the canine's actions towards the cat and chase it away, when the dog turned on her and inflicted two nasty gashes on her leg as it attacked her.

FIVE DAY BATTLE

Panic Grips Crowd

The full power of the Chinese attack broke against the Japanese positions in the Hongkew District of the International Settlement and the Yangtzepoo wards along the Whangpoo River front.

A mounting panic gripped the crowds along the famous Bund that follows the winding course of the Whangpoo. Fathers watched their wives and children aboard tenders disappear into the shell smoke haze hanging low on the river, mumbled a frantic prayer for their safety and then fled.

All had been forced below and only marines remained on the upper decks of the tenders, guarding the human cargo.

Entire areas around the city were blazing from fires started by the bursting shells that continually fell in the Chinese and Japanese lines.

The wind was fanning the flames of burning buildings along an eight-mile front, including the entire Japanese area from Chapei to the north west eastward to the Whangpoo.

One Chinese raiding plane was shot down in a foray against Japanese headquarters in Hongkew.

Prisoners Killed

Four shells struck the Settlement Wardroad jail containing several thousand prisoners. An unknown number of them were killed. A portion of the wall was blown out and shells crashed into two cell blocks.

Police of the Settlement were working strenuously to maintain communications between the various areas. Headquarters reported the outlying stations had been unable to report all morning.

Two important police stations along the Yangtzepoo Road on the north bank of the Whangpoo behind the Japanese warships were isolated. Twelve British officers were in one and an undetermined number in the other. They were caught under the cross fire of the Chinese and Japanese forces, and fears were expressed they might all be slain.

Nearby, Chinese troops were fighting hand to hand with the Japanese Kishi Brigade.

The Chinese repeatedly charged the Japanese until the latter used bayonets and counter-charged. They stopped the Chinese advance only at the cost of tremendous losses including their commander. Chinese losses also were heavy.

Battle Lines Drawn

Battle lines were drawn from an area north of Shanghai through the fringes of the Hongkew to the Whangpoo and across the river in the Pootung industrial area where some 35,000 Chinese troops were entrenched with artillery.

An estimated 10,000 Japanese Marines and blue jackets, backed by some 20 cruisers, destroyers and gunboats, were going to stave off an overwhelmingly superior force of Chinese estimated at 70,000 to 100,00 regulars.

Fighting was heaviest in Hongkew and in the Pootung Flats were Chinese batteries were able to blast at the Japanese positions in the west bank from the rear.

Bands of Chinese refugees roamed the streets, looting rice shops. They were dispersed by police but quickly reformed.

Food Shortage

Due to the acute shortage of food, the settlements authorities organized an emergency food and fuel committee to insure transportation of foodstuffs from the surrounding countryside.

Unfriendly Chinese in the French Concession mobbed and killed an unidentified person they said was a Korean who threw a bomb that killed three Chinese.

French and British reinforcements were sent into "French Town" to augment the International guard. Four hundred French marines were thrown around the concession waterworks half a mile south of the concession. Their lines were extended to take in the Siccawei French Catholic weather Observatory and Radio station.

PRIDE OF SEASON SHOWN AT FAIR

Outlook For Belleville Fair Brightest in Years

Heralded, from an agricultural executive point of view as one of the finest years in a decade, 1937 will, according to prominent county and city Fall Fair officials, have a corresponding reaction on the quantity and quality of farm and dairy exhibits which form one of the outstanding features of the Autumn exhibitions.

Not only has Nature endowed this particular district with a bountiful abundance of crops of the field but well-nigh perfect weather conditions which have been experienced throughout the majority of the growing months of the year have had a corresponding reaction on the raising of live stock and horses.

Pride in this year's output of grains vegetables and fruits, have impressed many farmer who otherwise showed a reticence at exhibiting their produce at the Autumn Fairs, to show a more than ordinary interest in the quality of their produce with the result that a vastly increased number of entries in practically every phase of agricultural endeavour will be noticed at the many district exhibitions.

Having all this in mind, directors and officials of the Belleville Fair which this year is being held on August 31st and Sept. 1st., 2nd and 3rd, are looking forward with confidence to one of the finest exhibitions in the history of the institution. The expectation of the largest entry lists in a decade has caused activity on all fronts of the Fair and officials are now working overtime in an effort to accommodate the number of entries which will go far in making Belleville's Fair one of the outstanding of its kind in Eastern Ontario.

Working from the base af activities, directors first turned their attention to the grounds. Here extensive work has been done in the beautifying and general improvements of the grounds. Buildings have been repaired and treated to a new coat of paint. Grounds, have been carefully prepared and now add to the general attractiveness of the grounds as a whole. Accommodation for horses and cattle have also received the careful attention of workmen and will be in readiness for what is expected a record number of entries.

QUALIFIES FOR CONVENTION

G. A. Reid of Belleville representative of The Great-West Life Assurance Company has qualified for membership in his Company's President's Club by his business production during the past year. He thus attends the 1937 convention at Digwin Inn, leaving for that resort towards the end of August in company with other Ontario representatives.

THOSE NAMES

"A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," said the greatest poet of all time.

But some persons seemingly do not appeal so much as they might, with their own names and so choose names which resound. Woodstock Sentinel Review writing of stage names, mentions that the Chatham News has an article on a Chatham boy, Kenneth Duncan MacLachlan, who has attained fame in the English films and now has a contract to play in a Hollywood version of "Gone with the Wind". On the screen Mr. Macachlan is known as Ken Duncan. The Woodstock paper goes on: "What is wrong with 'MacLachlan' is not explained, but it is a custom of actors to acquire stage names. At least, it is the practice of a great many. In the case of an awkward or mirth-provoking name, the reason for assuming one more melodious is evident, but in a great many instances there seems to be no occasion, except that the whole stage business deals in unrealities. Curiously enough some of the greatest actors in history have appeared before the public under the names with which they were born, and it was no barriers to fame. In some instances titles were conferred, which could not have been attached to stage names.

"Recently we read that Representative Francis X. Coyne, of Massachusetts, proposes to abolish 'stage-coated' names for stage and screen actors, and has announced that he will introduce a bill compelling public entertainer to use their real names.

"If my bill is passed, we won't have any more of these entertainers who come to us trapped in the name of nobility to hide the fact that they were born in Brooklyn or in sight of the New York elevated," declares the forthright Mr. Coyne.

"Fort Erie Times-Review thinks this proposed reform too far; that audiences pay their money not only to watch the characters on screen or stage, but to let their imaginations run riot, and that to make their self-hypnosis complete requires not only soft music and dim lights but fitting names.

"That, of course, is not the point. An actor appears in many roles in as many plays, under the name of the characters impersonated, and if he is a sufficiently good actor his audience will see those characters live, but all this seems to suggest no reason why, off the stage, that actor bould abandon his true name."

The practice has however established itself by time. Some of the greatest lights of the stage have taken stage names. In France the great comic playwright and actor Moliere is known by the name not his own. To the glory of the British stage, the greatest of its poets and playwrights of the world, Shakespeare is known by his own English name which is found rooted in the soil of Warwickshire and in Stratford-on-Avon's earliest history.

"TWILIGHT OF RELIEF"

A heading to an editorial in the New York Times, "The Twilight of Relief" sets up a train of thoughts in the mind even before one reads the editorial. One thought is of the encouragement in the belief that times are improving better and that the relief system is on the way out. That is a fine hope for those who have had to shoulder the burden of relief. The heading also suggests that those who were unfortunate enough to be on the lists receiving aid in some form or other during the depression are more or less rapidly getting back to work.

Both these thoughts would be encouraging even if they are not yet anywhere quite realized.

Here is how the Times looks to the future: "One of the hopeful trends of the times in the replacement of the concept of relief with that of social security. It would be over-optimistic to say that we have passed the need for relief or that we have achieved social security. In Washington the Social Security Board, operating under a law certainly not without its flaws is setting in motion the machinery for old age insurance and unemployment compensation. Time, experience and cooperation with the States may be counted upon to iron out some of the initial difficulties, and if and when another major depression arrives the shock can at least be partially absorbed by the insurance funds.'

Talking generally and outside of the peculiar American implication in the matter of relief and insurance the Times goes on to say: "We should continue to recognize that 'there is no stigma in asking for help when people are actually unable to provide for themselves through circumstances beyond their control.' But the modern interpretation of social security is as far as possible to prevent these circumstances from arising. The normal man wants to pay his own way. The nearer we come to making it possible for him to do so the nearer we shall be to a secure and stable society."

That is the goal, whatever the means which may be found best to achieve this at which all should aim. Tests will prove whether the plan suggested above by the Times will work out to the best interests of individual and society. The Times says: "Relief as a gift must always be dangerous though it is hard to see how in some situations it can be avoided." The paper then claims that the scope of this relief as a gift can be limited by extension of the principle of insurance under which the recipient pays at least part of the cost and is thus able to preserve his dignity and his self-respect.

WORLD'S END

Some say I'll do it—I will go away,
From all the old, heart-broken tired days;
I'll piece together all my broken heart;
Perhaps I'll laugh and sing in strange, new ways.

Some day you will awaken at the dawn,
And then, despite bright skies and nesting birds,
You all will realize that I have gone,
And it will be too late for kindly words.

I could not leave you all at eventide,
When limpid stars come silent o'er the hill,
For I would have you rest, though I had gone,
And let you think that I was with you still.

Of course, my dear, some day I'll do that thing,
But you must never weep for me that day;
For I'll have gathered up my broken life,
And I'll go laughing, singing, on my way.

ANTI-HALO

But every woman praying or prophesying with her head not covered, disgraceth her head: for it is all one as if she were shaven. For if a woman be not covered, let her be shorn; but if it be a shame to a woman to be shorn or made bold, let her cover her head.—I Corinthians, 11:5-6.

Following St. Paul's admonition to the Corinthians, the Roman Catholic Church enjoins its womenfolk to cover their heads at worship, if only with a shawl or handkerchef. Last week the Vicar General of the Catholic diocese of Louisville, Very Rev. E. Eric Willett, startled the faithful within and without his flock when, presumably acting for Louisville's Bishop John A. Floersh, he declared that the currently fashionable, crownless "halo hats" are inadequate for the purpose. Vicar-Quipped Vicar General Willett: "I am sorry that the ladies here will have to wait until they get to heaven before they can wear their halos."—Time Magazine.

TRENCH / TRAINING FOR LOCAL MILITIA UNITS could very well take place on the grounds of Memorial Park, Station street, where a wide and deep trench awaits their pleasure. This is the ditch started months ago to do something or other which has never been filled in and is mercifully hidden by a rich growth of weeds from being a more ugly gash on the landscape. Parks Board, it seems, can get no co-operation out of the Civic Public Works Department on this scenic atrocity which mars one of the beauty spots of the city and nullifies the efforts of the Parks Board to make Belleville more beautiful in that vicinity.

TIME TO BEGIN THINKING OF BELLEVILLE FAIR which is to be Bigger and Better than ever, really and truly, this year, according to Charles J. Symons, who handled the publicity for the Fair so acceptably for several years. This is our Fair, representative of the banner Bay of Quinte district and we should be proud of the fine exhibits of field, forest, mine and factory gathered here every fall as a token of the industry and ability of the citizens. Verily we have a goodly heritage and should realize it to the full. There may be bigger fall exhibitions but there are none better than Belleville's.

"... I don't see any need of Beverage Rooms"

Overheard at a golf club

1st Member: I enjoy a drink as much as any man, and I certainly would never vote for prohibition. But I still don't see the need for beverage rooms.

2nd Member: Never use them yourself, eh?

1st Member: Well, no. I sometimes have a glass of beer with lunch; but I'd willingly give that up to abolish all the abuses beverage rooms give rise to.

2nd Member: What abuses?

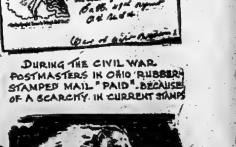
1st Member: Well this business of people drinking too much and—what is it the drys say?—"reeling home"?

2nd Member: Of course, there are always a few people who abuse any privilege. But you saw plenty more in the days of prohibition, didn't you? As a matter of fact you'll find that lots of people who used to overdo it regularly in blind pigs, drink pretty moderately in the present day beverage room :::

1st Member: Maybe you're right there: But I still think they're sort of unnecessary. Why wouldn't just sale by the case do?

2nd Member: Perhaps beverage rooms are unnecessary to you. You can afford to buy anything you want and drink it in comfortable surroundings. But what about the working man? Why have a law only for the rich!

1st Member: How do your mean?



2nd Member: A man engaged in hard manual labour may need a glass of beer after the day's work more than anyone else. Are you going to force him to buy a whole case at a time? Or lug it home with him, before he can have even one glass. Is it sporting, is it democratic to keep all the privileges that appeal to you, while you take away from those less fortunately placed the chance of drinking a wholesome, mildly-stimulating beverage in legal surroundings?

1st Member: It is a bit different put that way—I guess you're right.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

She had forgotten the policeman, his threat of a station bourse. "Oh please, don't let them get me," she begged.

Never was a law-abiding citizen so frightened by a policeman. Tony shrugged his shoulders. "But what about food parents—or a jealous husband turning up? Like

"They won't." Jane spoke impulsively.

"Sure of that?" Tony asked it sharply, severely. West along the edge of the Park.

Realizing her blunder, the blood rushed in Jane's cheeks. "I—I don't can't be sure."

She took off the glove of her left hand, holding up slim, ringless fingers. Craftily she thought of the only thing that ever could be traced through old Mrs. Cotter, her father's housekeeper, and that was Sonde bag.

"All right, Alice in Wonderland." "I'm feeling curiouser and curiouser." Jane couldn't resist quoting.

"You haven't forgotten your classics." Tony looked at her, half in admiration.

If only she could forget everything—young Bertrand Cotter who had tried to make love to her in Fond du Lac. And the blond foreign man who had been a drug in the flavour of adventure. His amused eyes seemed to be looking at her now.

They had crossed the George Washington bridge. Tony was silent, driving with a lounging ease, broken by the occasional dip for a cigarette. He had taken off his hat, and the late June sun struck along his dark head, edging the attractive slant of his nose. Jane noticed now other lines in his young face, lines of humored ennui and bitterness.

She sat absorbing the stir of approaching dusk, the green rush of woods, the flow of lawns from white houses. Light deepened on straight little towns.

It was oddly, deliciously intimate riding through the country in silence with this man she had met only an hour ago. His arm almost lounged low beside her. His hands on remote ease, loosely and narrow moved her to a wish for love. She shifted in her corner away from him. Tony smiled. He was like that, a thin stabbing blade, the feeling of how impossible it all was coming to him this way, tangled in nothing but lies.

"Dundo Park." Tony waved to his left as dozen gates they were passing. Giving Jane another chance to remember backgrounds from which she might have strayed. Then he said as if it had just occurred to him, "Friend of mine, Lorna Howland. She's married to the Cuban kidnapping stunt of mine ever gets in the papers she'll be sore. Let's foot pressed on the accelerator; the car whipped ahead.

Lorna Howland, the sort of girl he would know. Jane's query and sting pain shot through Jane again. His brows were set almost sullenly when he mentioned Lorna.

"Here we are." Tony smoothed through high iron gates, passed a stone lodge and sped up an avenue of towering elms. At a drive-in before a white house of clipped stretches of lawns jewelled with flowering beds. The distant grey sweep of lake.

Keystone loomed on a hill against the flaming sunset, stalwart as an English castle spread with ivy. Jane's heart flew and fell in the sigh she gave.

"Tired?" Tony sounded sympathetic.

"Oh, no!" She leaned forward as they swung up the widened drive way to the entrance. "Her mind entered the door. But through which she had impressions of an old man servant hovering, of beamed chairs, the vast dim hall from which sprang a wide winding oaken staircase. The scent of roses drifted among shapes of dark polished wood, porcelain bowls of flowers. Beyond velvet portiers lay large tranquil rooms softened with dim light.

"You weren't expecting me tonight, Matthew." Anthony Kaye's delightful smile accorded special privileges to the old family retainer. Jane noticed about touching lamps into glow.

Jane stepped softly into the mellow rugs. Why did the very unreality of her being here increase for her the ache of loneliness for Old Tom Carey? Pretending she didn't remember she was there when she was alive now, tingling with sad, tender memories that were part of her identity.

"Never be content with anything but the finest, Janie," her father had often said to her back in Fond du Lac.

Now she was in this stately house of tradition and manners, and Tony Kaye believed that somehow, somewhere she belonged to this world. Simply a lost lady—for a moment! Tony looked down at her from the stone fireplace where she stood like a well behaved, blue eyed child at a party. Dreams in her hands and yellow clustered curls.

"I've left things pretty much as they were before my people died." Without looking at her, he bent, with a touch in great love, the flared over rugs and carved wood.

"A bit chilly." He straightened like his big grey flannels, hands in pockets, black brows raised, as if wondering he regarded his lovely guest. And Jane felt suddenly like a naughty gadget in the window, and didn't quite know what to do with.

"Well—what now?" he asked.

"I—I don't know." Jane turned away, charmingly forlorn in the lamp glow, "I can't stay here, of course."

She wanted so very much to do just that—to stay on and on.

Tony's restless stride brought him close to her. "I brought you here, didn't I?" he said harshly. "But you must admit you're quite a problem—and a—fascinating one," he added with a touch of irony. "I shouldn't have come."

Jane was on the verge of confession. In his voice was a strange moodiness in his dark face.

"I'll have to forgive me for being a bit skeptical, my dear. For a girl who's forgotten so much, you're singularly normal. Not even fully didn't want to be found by your people. Mind so many? Not care if you remain lost." And he came close to her, and she trembled fully. "But if you're in any real jam, you'd better tell me, because Mike and I should are going to start something."

"I'm not in a jam. At least, I don't think I am," Jane lied, near to shaking. He was interested in her because of the sure of mystery she had drawn about her. How sordid would be the truth were she forced to him—as if she were a little gold digger.

"Well, if you're one of those fashionable missing girls, it's going to be a case of 'cherchez l'homme' instead of the femme," Tony said with a twist of a smile. "Is the little joke of it is they'll be fool enough to think I'm the man in the man by the time the story gets to Cincinnati. And that I can't if you don't. But hang it all. I wasn't sure what your game was. I'm not like a sure of you now—until now."

"If you think—" Jane began unhappily.

"I don't intend to think."

"Well, I'm not—" And she stopped about it.

The end of the long glass doors leading into the big hall from the terrace had opened. And Jane saw a friend he had spoken of as they drove past the estate. It was a drive-in of this latest escapade of his reached the papers. Tony Kaye running off with a lovely creature he had snatched from a policeman.

"Lorna! Here's the girl I told you about." Tony's voice had a new quality, a warmth that Jane had never heard before.

Jane lifted her head higher under the insolent stare of green eyes that took in her every detail. Under the gold curls clustered around the widened blue of her face as soft, like the lamp and fire glow of the great hall. She was almost as if this girl knew her instantly for what she was a gold digger, a little cheat whose venturesome spirit had led her beyond her depth.

"I'm so glad a chance, to tell you our date's off for tomorrow night, Tony. Am I interrupting anything?" Lorna stepped in coolly, evidently at home among the overhanging portraits of Kayestons.

"Of course not." Tony's tall figure in grey flannels moved with ease. But as he turned to Jane, his black brows lifted in whimsical question. How did one introduce a girl whom one claimed not to know that way? He settled it. "Miss Howland—Miss Alice in Wonderland."

"Another of your intriguing little mysteries, Tony?" Lorna's laugh was high and clear. Red hair burned in the dusk across her shoulders.

The white jersey she wore showed every line of her alluring young body. "How d'you do," she murmured in Jane's general direction, and ran on deliberately ignoring an intruder. "Sorry about tomorrow night."

The humor had departed from Tony's dark face. "Rather casual of you, I'd say, Lorna."

"I went to no end of trouble to get those tickets, Lorna."

Lorna drifted nearer, the full scarlet of her mouth pouting. "I'd much rather be with you, darling." she tilted her audacious red head. "But I forgot I promised Hazel to Paule to take him to Elsie Forrest's for dinner. He wants to paint her portrait."

Storm gathered in Tony's grey eyes. "I don't know what I think of it, Paule," he said curtly.

"Well, it's hardly your type," Lorna smiled convincingly. "But about tomorrow night, my dear, you can easily find someone else." Little claws seemed to reach out to Jane.

"I can indeed." Tony's slow step went from one girl to the other, remaining on Jane. It was evident to her if he had ever intended to explain how she came to be there, he had changed his mind. He wasn't going to satisfy Lorna's curiosity.

Jane thought resentfully, "He's using me to make that little cat jealous." She was aware of her as the wide bay window with a sense of increasing discomfort. All that claws seemed to reach out to Jane.

"If I hadn't been for her, you would have made love to me," she cried. "She didn't come here to see you by engagement—until she found me. She wanted to make you jealous and you wanted to make her jealous. You're both cruel!" His touch seemed still to press her lips with the sting of humiliation.

"You're not far wrong at that," he said slowly, and he walked over to the fireplace, kicking at a charred log.

Jane paused, undecided. There was a loneliness bitter emotion in his tall, brooding figure. "She'll always want what she can't have." Jane flung with a ring of bitterness that led to her.

"And what she can't have," Tony repeated, his dark profile absorbed against the glowing flames. "By George you're giving me ideas."

"You'll play with each other until one of you is destroyed," Jane said wearily. She picked up her gloves and bag, and turned again for the door, a gallant lift to her head and every country rode, like a her bright head. It would be cool in the night into moonshine after blinding lights.

"With a moment." the ring in Anthony Kaye's voice caught her back. It was less a command than the clutching of a train of thought that led to her.

He was by her side. His eyes would not let her go. They had silvery flecks in them that glanced like the ripple of her hair as if he were seeing her for the first time.

"This jealousy stuff is old as the hills," he said. "That's why it never fails to work. You've given me the whale of an idea, that is—if you're game."

Tony flung his cigarette in the fire. "Hang it all," he burst out. "I'm as decent as most chaps I know. But I'm not marrying any of these gold digger for the fun of it. Being her divorce me. I'm not sure I'm not. No matter what she's after," he added with a wry smile.

"Tempt the devil of it. I'm not sure of anything."

Jane walked over to the bay window, trying to think clearly. Behind her, she felt Tony restless. Even in those few hours he had grown so very desirable, so very dear. With a sense of hopelessness that was almost pain, she knew, if he knew what she had done, that she would be a worse little gold digger than ever Lorna could be.

Women must always have run after him. There were those cynical little lines around his eyes and mouth.

Scents of June-roses and honeysuckle stole in from the gardens. And that her father had wigged for her tragically here for the taking. Why did she have to feel an interloper, an understudy in a role she would have to hand over on request?

Tony was at her elbow. Impatient.

"Decided yet?"

"What happens to me in the end?" Jane was asking that more of herself.

"Don't bother about that." Tony said, the reckless light back in his eyes. "We'll announce our marriage. No ob's—no business where and how. I have no immediate plans. Then we get rid—Europe for you. By then the fireworks will be over, and we can say you divorced me in Paris. And look here —" He bent toward her with a trace of earnestness. "I'm not sure I'm not proposed this if I didn't want you. Perhaps I'll want you not married. Furthermore, this is a business arrangement. I'll see that Lorna keeps off your trail."

Jane felt curiously giddy as if life were whirling about through space.

Slowly she shook her head. Impatiently Tony turned from the hyacinth blue of her eyes.

"Then I'll put this on," he said and drew from his pocket with diamonds from his pocket. He caught forward and pulled off Jane's left hand. "This seals our bargain." He slipped it on her slim finger.

"It's queer—" Jane couldn't keep her voice steady. "Almost as if we—"

She turned away as if he, too, against his will, felt a certain gravity in a gesture started as a game and ended in earnest.

When he spoke again, it was with a new, almost lightness. "We'll have to find you a name, my dear." He glanced at the colored streamers from the cross a path that led to Lorna about Dawn?"

"A beautiful name," Jane whispered. She would never forget this hour. Not if she lived to be with Tony. She wanted to keep it precious, apart. "You called me Alice in Wonderland yesterday," she said with a little smile. "Can't I be Alice?"

"Alice you are." Anthony started the car to its low humming speed, and then with a jolt.

Jane repeated over and over to herself. I am Alice Kaye now. Alice Kaye for six heavenly months!

"We're heading for Philadelphia. I don't want to get back to Kaye-stons until tomorrow." Tony's profile bent over the wheel. Black against again. Probably thinking of Lorna.

They stopped at a milky white farm for breakfast. Alice Kaye. She afterward Jane remembered the cream in bowls and fresh eggs fastened on jonquils. An Airedale streaked around a stone wall scattering chickens. The farmer's wife had strong white hair crisp as Mrs. Cotter's housekeeper's face. She gave them freshly laid eggs, country sausage, and fresh cream that melted in your mouth with cool golden butter from a crock that ran from the cellar. Jane ate and ate. Both she and Jane watched Tony bring the Airedale. How different he was in these simple surroundings, Jane thought, with a tug at her heart.

All her desires for the exciting beauty she could produce vanished as wistfully as the last herself that she would like to live forever in a white farmhouse with Tony. He was so boyish, so at home with the cows and the grass with the rough young dog. Could she ever live up to the attitude he was bringing her into? Knowing that in the end she must fail him.

Then the springs bushes, maple trees and dog dropped away. Miles telescoped into minutes.

When they reached Philadelphia, Tony said briefly, "We'd better get you a few things here." His critical eyes travelled down the crumpled blue silk that only yesterday she had bought with her precious money in capital.

The "few things" he declared she needed grew under his fastidious supervision into an exquisite wardrobe with an ecstasy of shoes to hold a smart yellow sport dress, the soft evening gown, and everything to go over and under. Hotties, lace, powder— Oh, yes, Tony knew what a girl with her eyes and skin should have!

But as they raced nearer and nearer Keystone, Jane grew strangely quiet. She glanced at Tony's long, sexy body, and it seemed to her that certain little lines in his dark, reckless face were deepened.

But even Tony had not realized the effect of this last exploit of his —the sensational aspects of so prominent a young man running off with a girl who didn't know who she was or where she came from.

The reporter of the tabloid, fortunate enough to have witnessed the rescue of Jane from a policeman, hadn't wasted his time. His snapshot of the mystery girl in Anthony Kaye's car adorned front page with an embellished account of the couple's spectacular disappearance.

The story tied in with the telephoned announcement from Keystone—the gates guarding against. So that when they drove through the little town they found the place bristling with reporters and photographers who had wheedled or stolen their way in.

Anthony lost his temper, and then he laughed. After all, he hadn't anything to hide. He turned this way round, and no questions answered—" he said good-humouredly.

"We didn't do this for you, lads."

"But, Mr. Kaye, don't you want to be in the picture, and girl who your wife is—or was?"

"My business is who she is now," Anthony's voice was cold.

"Where were you married?"

"Try to find out." Tony beamed at them. "Come, boys, to see the certificate?"

"Yes," came in a chorus.

"Well, then, show me a law that forces a man to show a marriage certificate to anyone in his own house."

It was an imperious, arrogant Tony Jane had never known.

And to Jane, bewildered, they bettered questions: "Have you no idea how you happened to be in Park Avenue yesterday? Had you ever seen Mr. Kaye before?—Was your father or mother in your bag—How do you know you haven't committed bigamy?"

"That's enough." Tony said sternly. "Take it from me, she hasn't committed anything." At his unexpected support, Matthew led her away from them into a suite of the big floor. Jane was trembling. What if those clever, prying people did find out about her? But there was a command, an assurance in Tony that quieted her fears.

"This was Mrs. Kaye's room, Miss —Mrs. Kaye." From the threshold Matthew bowed her in, stepped aside courtly at Jane's white and gold loveliness. "I've been with the family thirty years, Mrs. Kaye. Mr. Tony when he was a boy. I'm glad to have you here, and you, Madam, great happiness."

"Thank you." Jane said gently, but her heart was beating so horribly ashamed of the role she was playing.

The room held the composed beauty of a lady who had died in the marquetry desk, gazed from three windows on to lawns and tennis courts, received her servants, her son, her husband, at ordered hours. Jane looked at the bed, the rose silk curtains and bed canopy to the ceiling, the great chest of drawers shining with glass shelves. Beyond was a tall beautiful boudoir decorated in Chinese lacquer.

"I'm glad I've done it—I'm glad," she said aloud, and then, afraid, began to unpack her beautiful new things.

Another slow twilight deepened on the hills. In the quiet evening, motors sputtered.

Tony was gone, the press and their cameras. A servant was posted by the telephone to answer "Mr. Kaye has nothing to say." But telegrams from amused friends and scandalized relatives were pouring in. The earlier papers arrived. Evidently Tony, or Anthony stone. Columns on Tony's family and the grand old man whose yacht and stables had been the talk of his day, and Lucia Kaye, who had been a Van Luyden, famous for her pride, her emeralds, and the spikes of social barriers behind which she had reigned.

It wasn't all pleasant reading what a fine girl Anthony had no one claimed!

LEWIS—WILSON

Trenton, Aug. 17.—(Special)—The parsonage of Grace United Church was the scene of a quiet wedding on Saturday afternoon, when Norma Gertie Wilson, daughter of E. A. Wilson and the late Mrs. Wilson was joined in holy matrimony to Oliver Lewis, son of Mrs. Lewis and the late J. V. Lewis. The service was conducted by the Rev. G. D. Campbell, minister of the church.
Charmed in blue chiffon over flowered silk with matching accessories and a corsage of orchids the bride looked lovely. Her maid of honour, Miss Florence Taylor, was dressed in navy and white chiffon with accessories to match and a corsage of American Beauty roses. The best man was Mr. Floyd Halstead of Niagara Falls.
An enjoyable reception was held in the home of the bride's mother, after the ceremony and about twenty-five friends and immediate relatives were present. Receiving the guests were Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Lewis, the former wearing flowered chiffon and the latter, brown crepe. The happy couple left by motor following the reception for Ottawa and points east. On return they will make their home on Dundas street.

Charm is Real Beauty Asset

Mary Livingston
A charming personality is one of her beauty assets

By HELEN FOLLETT

IF A WOMAN wears upon her face an expression of discontent or petulance, her beauty qualities pass unnoticed. She may have lovely figure, beautiful arms and a heavenly complexion, but they don't count. What makes the special is the friendly light in the eyes or the gracious expression of the mouth—the charming manner.

It's not alone how a woman looks, but what she is and how she talks and walks. Beauty is made up of many ingredients, so many that it is impossible to list them.

They include charm, which cannot be defined. They include the inflections of the voice. If you are trying to qualify as a beautiful lady, you've got to think of all these things.

Many a woman who is plain of face gets the spotlight as the most social affair. She has distinction. When she walks into the room, somebody has arrived and everybody knows it.

You will find that women who belong to this class are natural in deportment, as easy to get along with as an old shoe. They don't "put on the dog"; they aren't "snooty". That sort of things spoil beauty.

Now that skirts are shorter, are you aware of the fact that the calves of your legs need slenderizing? Yes, get busy.

Stand on your toes and come down slowly. You will be aware of a tendency to pull up muscles that pull is what you need to strengthen fibres and to shake off fat.

Do squatting exercise, hands on hips. Spend fifteen minutes on this. You'll take a tumble at first, but persevere. Do high stepping, as if you were meant it. Remember that if you are inclined to take on weight, old Pop Time is going to help you. He will be on the side of the fat cells.

Fashion Flashes

The star look down on soft, ethereal chiffon frocks these dances. Sheer chiffon is used in deep blue, green chiffon with scarlet, yellow, light green, royal blue and black chiffon draped in harness effect and falling in long, dramatic panels.

A nice couple is a twosome consisting of hag and glove in black antelope with scalloped edging of gold metal. Gold metal buttons serve as trimming.

Step forth this autumn in a dressy shoe. A charming model is an oxford in black faille; open sides are latticed with black satin strippings.

A sensation was recently created by an evening sweater. Of beige romaine, striped with bands of white and brown beads. It is fastened down the side with small beige crepe buttons. It is worn over a flowing skirt of beige crepe.

Quite an entrance can be made by a girl who wears a sculptured evening frock of supple, gleaming white satin with a jacket of red ostrich feathers to match the red velvet girdle of the frock.

You can shed a pale linen playsuit with plum-colored buttons. It becomes quite a smart frock when the shorts are covered by a skirt of plum-colored linen.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN
(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Conversation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
I have been invited to my boy friend's home for dinner, and I do so want to be a success, or rather I don't want to make any blunders.
—As I have never met his mother, I do not know what I should say when I acknowledge the introduction. I want it to have the note of warmth and sincerity.

2. How should I reopen a conversation if I happen to be with his mother? You see, I'm rather reserved upon the first meeting, but I do so want to be talkative and friendly. I couldn't bear to sit silently and look as if my tongue were tied.

3.—When should I thank his mother for the dinner, after dining, or when I am leaving, and what should I say?

Jane

1.—When you are introduced to your hostess, you, in your most gracious and friendly manner, "How do you do, Mrs. Cambridge. It is such a special pleasure to meet you at last. Bob has told me so many delightful things about you and I have been looking forward knowing you."

Perhaps you won't be able to say this "all at once", for in the meantime the hostess will be welcoming you. But there will be an opportunity to say the first two sentences as you acknowledge the introduction, and then, after your hostess' greeting, you might continue with the expression of your happy anticipation of this meeting. Another pleasant thing to say at the beginning of your conversation is, "How very kind you were to ask me to come tonight. I appreciate it very much."

Your letter indicates that these are the kind of words that you want to say, warm words, sincere words, friendly words, appreciative words. As Theodore Roosevelt used to say, "Make your words work", so say them graciously, convincingly, even if we be under the very distasteful saying these and similar gracious things before going to bed to dinner. This is an excellent way of overcoming self-consciousness.

2. And I'd like to continue this urging of "practice" in this second answer. First, put out of your mind that you must be self-conscious, may be too "reserved", and think how you could best overcome this. People won't often confess this to you, unless you know them exceptionally well, but I know many excellent conversationalists, people famed for their brilliant talk, who, before they got to a party, confer with themselves on interesting topics of conversation, interesting things they may say, exciting anecdotes, amusing stories, or incidents, and interesting ways of saying these or telling those. The art of good conversation doesn't often spring full-bloom. Like any other art, it usually needs learning the technique, attention to the A.B.C.'s, a devoted wish to do it well. If it means memorizing at first, practicing alone—all right, do this. It's worth it, for quickly it will "untie your tongue"!

Everyone talks about plays they have seen, movies they've seen, books they've read, people they know, things that are happening in the news, amusing incidents they've known or heard about, places they've been. Some of these up for conversation-food. But keep in mind always the other person. What will interest her or him, and how it can be made to interest her or him.

And this last advice is exceptionally appropriate, for it is true that it is keep our minds on the other person trying graciously to adapt ourselves and our conversation to the other person we won't have time to think of ourselves as self-conscious, as tongue-tied. If what you are about to say doesn't seem to you especially interesting or original, never mind—say it. It's better than an awkward silence, and you'll probably do better next time.

When you are leaving, say your thanks, not for the dinner, but for the hospitality. For instance, "Good night, Mrs. Woodbridge I've had such a happy time this evening. Thank you so much for asking me."

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Need Books In Child Study?

Personal Observation Way to Understand Him, States Writer

By LISA GRENELLE

MISS S. of Long Island and Mrs. B. of Iowa have written me asking my advice on how to become a child-training expert. Both have been kind enough to say that my column has aroused their interest and their enthusiasm on the subject. They want to study child psychology and want me to furnish a list of books to read and suggest colleges where they can continue their studies.

Now, I don't want to discourage Miss S. or Mrs. B., nor do I want anyone to suppose that I have no respect for learning from books. But because I have spent so large a part of my own life studying and reading, I know how limited is the value of secondhand knowledge—how, unless coupled with some personal, first-hand experience and understanding, it can be almost a handicap.

There are only two ways to learn to understand a child. One is by watching and listening to him and not, at the criticizing or correcting his behavior, but trying humbly to understand the reason for it, trying to put yourself in his place.

Difficult Task

But that is hard—we are so far removed from childhood! Best and wisest, perhaps, is to begin with yourself and your own childhood. It takes courage to examine and analyze yourself.

I suppose that sounds like a far cry from learning to be a child psychologist. But, quite on the contrary, it is the most direct route I know. If you can't understand yourself, how on earth can you expect to understand anyone else, especially a child?

But if you have the courage to look at yourself frankly, if not unflinchingly, in the face, have the courage to go back and examine yourself as a child—not the child you would like to think of as yourself, but the child you were—then you are getting somewhere.

Once you understand yourself you are ready to try to understand your friends, perhaps. Listen to them, study them, try to imagine in each case the child that made the adult. They will tell you about their childhood if you will listen, no doubt.

Not Ready Yet

After having done that, you still are not yet ready to study—out of books. There is more thinking to be done, much more observing—and listening. There are more questions to ask—"Why? Why? Why?"

All psychology is fundamentally the same. The man is the result of the child, the child the result of the man. You make your own children what they are. You, in turn, are the result of your own childhood. Understand the one and you understand the other.

Understand yourself and you will understand your friend. Understand the child in you, and you will soon be able to "put" yourself into your children. Then, and not till then, are you ready to study, to take courses, to work toward a degree. Then and only then are you ready to acquire knowledge from an outside source

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.
(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Parents Who Claim to Be Parents of Victim Accuse Their Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

In his way the Dad is all right. He's a little given proclaiming what a perfect husband and father he has been, but the thing that gets my goat is the way he boosts his generation over mine.

The Dad is 57, which is about two generations ahead of an 18-year-old son who graduated from high school this June, but I'm sick of hearing what he and his fat cronies did that my brother and I don't do. I haven't been able to earn any money so far, because I took all my time to study, to pass my examinations and graduate. But I'm trying to get a job every day.

The Dad tells me how he used to chop wood and mow lawns when he was 18, but as we live in an apartment house in a big city I don't see where I could get wood to chop, unless I started in on the park trees. Also, he didn't smoke. I haven't any money to buy cigarettes, but I take one if it's offered me.

The Dad's brother told me he used to smoke tea and coffee in a clay pipe. He was never sassy; he never dodged going to church. I look at his shoulder-blades sometimes to see if there are any wing stumps there, but I haven't been able to find them.

Disgusted

One of the most tragic things in this world is the passionate desire of parents to be looked up to and admired by their children. That's why father pontificates on his virtues, and mother is given to murmuring "When I was a girl we did not do" this or that. And I will not do the things young people consider right and proper these days.

But mother and dad have done the best they can for you by sending you through high school, and when you really grow up and have children of your own, you'll probably paint yourself as the model boy or girl parents. I agree that your dad's attitude is difficult.

Grown So Tall, Hands and Feet Seem a Long Way Off

Dear Miss Fairfax:
Last winter I had an attack of grippe, and before I recovered from that I had bronchitis. I had to stay in bed for over two months, and couldn't seem to stop growing. I am now 18 years old and am 6 feet 4 inches.
My hands and feet seem strange to me, like Alice in Wonderland's after coming to see me nearly every evening for six months. Is that he has seen too many unhappy marriages, and fears to add to the number of them. He makes $28.00 per week, which is big money around here, and we could live very comfortably on that.

One of Hollywood's loveliest lad ies', Myrna Loy, who plays the heroine in "Parnell" now on the Belle screen.

It isn't that I want to marry right away, but I don't like to continue going with a boy I love as much as I love this one, and have him talk that way about marriage. If a man really loves a girl, it seems to me he'd want to marry her some time, instead of saying the world has too many unfortunate marriages already.

Joyce

It's not considered the square thing to waste a girl's time", as going to see her every evening and making excuses for not popping the question is called. The decision is up to you, my dear, whether you wish to continue in this state of uncertainty about your future, or seek the companionship of some less terrified by the number of mismated couples he sees about him.

If he really loves you, I think he wouldn't harbor these doubts.

GET YOUR TICKET but not before you have looked at the grand new travel coats. A beauty is in navy, red, gold black and white plaided woolen with a huge gray fox fur collar. The casual, boxy cut and big slash pockets make for comfort.

Clarke Gable and Myrna Loy in "Parnell" Spell-Binding Romance

The female human story of a love that affected nations is dramatically in the fictional drama of "Parnell," "Uncrowned King of Ireland," which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offers at the Belle Theatre today, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, matinee daily, with Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in the starring roles.

Directed by John Stahl, from the original stage play by Elizabeth Schaffler, the screen adaption was written by John Van Druten and closely follows the outstanding career of Charles Stewart Parnell who found a great love more powerful than a great love.

Gable and Miss Loy are superb in their respective roles as the fiery Irish leader and the beautiful Kate O'Shea, whom he loves beyond any fame or fortune his political power might bring.

"Parnell," as it is here presented, becomes International although it remains essentially Irish, of course. And always, it is the human love story of a striking individual and a gorgeous woman, presented with superb artistry.

The supporting cast is one of the most impressive ever assembled for a picture. Included are Edna May Oliver, Billie Burke, Alan Marshall, Edmund Gwenn, Donald Crisp, Berton Churchill, Donald Meek and others. In addition there is a spectacular group of nearly 500 who add realistic color to the scenes.

The story describes the historical rise of Parnell, who was the only man to unite the 84 members of the Irish Party in a struggle for Home Rule. His love for Katie O'Shea, a married woman, the scandal which results when her estranged husband, Captain O'Shea, divorces her and the collapse of Parnell's political career, are closely followed with all of their dramatic qualities. One of the most moving episodes of a spectacular romance, are vividly presented in a picture which will go as one of the finest of the year.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Everybody Dance" and "Night of Mystery"

Imagine the consternation, and the fun, one feels, the word, dissolution of a rowdy-bowdy type of night club when Dorothy Lee finds that she has been entrusted with the care of the two orphaned children of Judge Wm. Vaughn! She was a lady farmer.

This is the sentimental tract that starts all the hi-jinx in "Everybody Dance," a romance with music featuring Ernest Truex at the head and Charlie Kay in the cast, commencing Wednesday. It's a Charles (Chuck) Reisner production, with music by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel.

Anxious to keep her nocturnal activities a secret from Tommy and Shirley, Lady Kate buys a farm and takes over the role—not very successfully, at first—of a lady farmering, lady farmer, with the most astonishing ideas about cows, chickens, tractors and planting.

Romance enters the story when Wilbur, the farmer's hand, tries to take them back to New York. Also in the cast is Kathleen Trouble looms large when the authorities command her to give the children a home. Just what she has raised more scandals than a happy ending to the production is found to her problems—and there are many—is knowing, at last, what it's all about.

"Night of Mystery"

Two shootings, one poisoning and several exciting unsuccessful attempts at murder, spell the original "Night of Mystery," shown as hit No. 2 on the same program, the fast-moving Philo Vance picture yet to come.

Once again, the master mystery writer, S. S. Van Dine, has turned out a thriller that only curdle the blood of all but a completely anemic person.

Murder after murder eliminates Vance's suspects, until the original shooting which bought him into the case. Using the mysterious methods of the lovable sleuth, who imagines that her children hate her as his own parents, he cleverly conducted execution campaign.

Director H. C. Potter's aim is paying in telling the story that reaches a high mark in chiller presentations. Warner Baxter as Philo Vance does as well with the role as William Powell did in other Van Dine murder stories. As Sergeant Heath, Ralph Morgan finally gives his opportunity his talents demanded. Others in the cast whose performances are outstanding are Jacqueline Elizabeth Patterson, Purnell Pratt, Helen Vinson, Ruth Coleman, and Colin Tapley.

Ends Tuesday

Shown for the final times Tuesday, the two grand revival hits of yesteryear are "These Three" and "Music is Magic."

FOXBORO NINE 2 UP ON LATTA IN FINAL SERIES

Win Slugfest 8-6 on Monday And Need Only One More

WILKINS HIT HOMER

Judging of Fly Balls Difficult Due to High Wind

Foxboro, Aug. 17 (Special)—Doc Blakely's Foxboro nine are two up on their Latta rivals today as a result of their impressive 8-6 win on their home ice here yesterday, and the boys are all set, to end the series on Wednesday, when they visit Latta for the third tussle of the series. Dr. Welsh's nine must win this game if they hope to prolong the series, while to take the silverware from the champion Foxboro club they must win three straight and that is saying something, especially against a club that is playing heads-up ball like the Foxboro crew.

Hard to Judge Flies

A rather stiff breeze which sprung up during yesterday's tilt can be somewhat blamed for the second slugfest staged here by the winners and while he was nicked for 11 safeties by Latta hurlers, they were scattered except in the sixth and ninth when the visitors scored all their runs. Bill Wilkins got a single bellyacker. Manager Welsh was also in the box for Foxboro earlier, Younge, in an attempt to subdue the heavy hitting Foxboro club but he was not up to form and Welsh had to step in. Foxboro team cold. Joe only allowed one during his three inning sojourn on the mound. Bill Wilkins and Ken Younge was nicked for nine hits according a mammoth clout by Bill Wilkins which was good for a circuit, while he struck out four and walked one.

Steadily Increase Lead

Foxboro scored once in the first and steadily increased their lead until at the ninth they had a 6-0 lead. With this overwhelming lead they could be seen easing off perceptibly and the Latta boys promptly took advantage to serve three runs over the plate in a desperate attempt to pull the game out but the scored three more to make it close.

R. Wilkins' four-base clout was the big feature of the afternoon's tilt. C. Wilkins, Guay and Walt getting safeties while Guay, Ken Wilkins, while Orr hit safely on three occasions and Simpson smacked two for Foxboro. Ken Younge was the losers with C. Hall and Mario also getting a brace of hits apiece.

ORIOLES DRIVING FOR 4TH PLACE

Win Pair From Bisons in Fourth Spot by Half Game

(By The Associated Press)

There was a lot of excitement of a fight for the pennant in the International League this season but there are some hot fights going on for places in the playoffs. The tightest of these fights at present is the battle between Buffalo and Baltimore for fourth place. The Orioles have battled their way through the second division and today find themselves in fourth place as a result of a double win over the Bisons, last night, 6-2, 6-4.

Carl Fischer stopped the fourth place Bisons in the opener with a four hit performance, while Woody Abernathy, with a homer, and Wimpy Wilburn, with two singles and as many runs driven in, paced the attack. The Birds' power took the nightcap from Trusty Sewell, who had beaten them three times this season. Leo Powers got a brace of doubles for the winners.

The Newark Bears split-a double bill with the Montreal Royals, losing the opener 3-1 to Marvin Duke and winning the nightcap, 8-1. It was Duke's 17th victory of the year. Dave Harris hit a home run for the Bears in the game and Bernie Cobb's two-run single finished the shortened contest.

Spurgeon Chandler, recently released to the Bears, by the New York Yankees as their fourth pitcher, Jack Pallon held the Royals hitless until his 7th inning, with Catcher Buddy Rosar collecting four hits in five trips to the plate. Pallon finished the game, although wild, had enough to beat the Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1, for the Syracuse Chiefs. He allowed only five hits, four walks and made a wild pitch. Three double plays helped him at crucial points.

Ken O'Dea, Kingston Frontey City Giants, turned in another top notch pitching performance as he held the Rochester Red Wings to eight blows. The Giants got 14 hits off Jesse Todd and Ray Kaufmanan including three by Hal Lee, Jersey outfielder.

Gridders Gather at Campus For First Session of Year

Billie Hughes to be in Charge of Training Grind

LIKELY PROSPECTS

The sound of leather meeting leather, the sight of the old pigskin soaring through the air and the well recognized thud of sprawling was the order of the night at the Collegiate Campus last evening when the Belleville "Orchids" had their city entry in the intermediate ranks of the O. R. F. U. held their initial practice of the season. The session was of the most impromptu nature, but saw the presence of Orchids' most favoured football coach and trainer, Billie Hughes in person.

Coach Hughes viewed with satisfaction the initial turnout of local players, although the majority were not in uniform, but merely taking in the sights. Billie Hughes, who trained the great Orchid intermediate rugby football squads during the heyday of Bobby Gilmour, Ted Reid, Pep Leadley, Red McKelvey, Johnny Evans, Rube Britton and numerous other gridiron stars, also trained the heralded Whitney "Rough Riders" when they won the Dominion football championship in 1933, is now a resident of Belleville and has been prevailed upon to assist in the coaching and training of the Belleville "Orchids."

A few of the old guard that composed the great team that captured the initial call of the season and tossed the old pigskin around merely to get the feel of the ball. Moore of Toronto University training programme has been laid down yet, but signs of activity will be enforced before the week terminates. Coach Hughes announced to the boys last night, that Samouel, Dave Bradford, Baker, former Collegiate star and Bill Hughes, Orchid backs has great possibilities as a kicker. Al-Lash, Al-Lash and Shorz star of last year, a half a dozen former B. C. senior interscholastic rugby stars and two O. R. A. F. players constituted the players to put in an appearance last evening.

Hilda Schrader is being counted on to do much of the punting for the Orchids this year, while Bill Hughes starred in the Lake Shore two year ago will return to his old love. Reports have Jo-Jo Grabosk, former Cobalt Cobra-Colleger Sherman and noted Quarterback, lining up with the Orchids also. A modern, up-to-date dressing room, shower baths and all conveniences is being planned at the local gridiron at the present, while in the meantime the club is planning an extensive membership drive that will bring interest the sporting fans of this city in the great old classic of rugby football. Coach Hughes has ordered nightly practices for the next full month, at 7 P. M. E. S. T. Practice opens exactly one month from tomorrow.

BILLY THE KID MEETS FIELDING

Fans Clamor For Return Bout Between Clever Wrestlers

So incensed were a large number of the wrestling fans of the city with the tactics used by Ted Fielding, highly heralded "Lion of the North" in his bout with "Billy the Kid" Toronto's gentleman wrestler at the Arena last week, that a number of fans have requested that the "Lion" be given a return bout this week in the hopes of seeing the scowl wiped from his countenance.

Fielding, who really is a clever wrestler, in spite of his scowling countenance and strutting tactics, while in the ring is being brought back on Friday night and will be pitted against George Hambly, smart Orangeville salesman who, it is claimed, will put a kink in the Lion's tail that will be hard to unravel. Hambly will meet Fielding at his own style of wrestling and one of the fastest bouts of the current season should result.

The ever popular Red Garner will be seen in action again against Harold Sandiford, of Cobalt, who comes with a reputation of being a smart, clever matman. Garner won the decision of the fans last week when he appeared twice in one night and won both bouts, will be extended to the limit by the Cobalt-ite, who has in his favor a headline attraction.

Ernie Hughson, a flashy relation, will meet the Ukranian flash, Antonio Timuski in one of the smartest preliminary bouts ever offered to local fans. The whole card fairly radiates wrestling and the best of smart action will result. The show starts at eighty-thirty and no doubt another large crowd will view the various bouts.

JOE LOUIS NEAR FIGHTING WEIGHT WITH 9 DAYS TO GO

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Aug. 17.—(AP)—With nine days still to go before Joe Louis steps into the ring at Yankee Stadium to defend his heavyweight title, the chief concern of the champion's handlers is to see that he doesn't drop below the 200-pound mark until shortly before the fight.

"Joe weighed 201 for the second day in a row and we want to keep him up there for several more days," explained manager Julian Rotborough. "We want him to weight 198 when he climbs into the ring. Any weight above that will be a handicap rather than a help. Joe dropped 19½ pounds for Jim Braddock and was strong and fast. We feel that it would weaken him to go below 198 and it would slow him up to get much heavier."

Joe's handlers dispensed with road work last week on mornings when he did easy boxing and twice they called off the bag punching and rope skipping, which usually follows his workouts. He has been losing weight too rapidly because of the heat.

Braved Ice Pack

(By Scotty Reston

London, Aug. 17.—(AP)—There's a suspicion in Great Britain that maybe it's just as well the future of the Empire doesn't depend on Tommy Farr. Which is to say that, if it did, Britain would have him in their heavyweight championship fight August 26, the Commonwealth will be a bruised for the shock.

But it isn't bruised; it won't be the fault of the British sports writers. They have spent much time and many shillings looking at the polished face of the Joe Louis-Jim Braddock fight, and after wondering thinking have done the British equivalent of climbing out on a limb." They are picking Louis.

"Nice fellow, Tommy, courageous and all that sort of thing, but he really can't attack, can he " they say The fitting don't believe that Farr has good enough to stay 15 rounds with Louis without getting hit too many times.

Brundrit's Enthusiastic

Those fans in a tendency here to regret Tommy's recent eloquence. One of the more constant contributors to the London papers and also one of the few who favor Farr is Ted Brundrit, Farr's manager. Brundrit is enthusiastic about Farr's chances.

In the sports columns there is a definite tendency to minimize the importance of the bout, but even the past record of British heavyweight championships makes obvious the strange British boxing fan.

The British board of boxing control does not recognize Louis as the champion, so that Tommy would be just the North American champion here were he to beat Louis.

There's no doubt, however, he would be the popular champion. Special boats are carrying many British fans to New York for the bout and some London restaurants are carrying cabled stories of Tommy's training activities on the backs of their menus.

POINT ANNE AND GRAHAMS BATTLE TO TEN ALL DRAW

First Game in Playdowns Attracts a Capacity Crowd

PLENTY OF HITTING

Point Anne Lost a Six Run Margin Scored in 1st Frame

Undismayed by a six run outburst in the second frame, Grahams of Trenton battled to a ten all draw with Point Anne at the tournament village last evening in the first game of the intermediate "B" O.A.B.A. playdowns, the game being called at the end of the tenth frame on account of darkness. The second game will be played in Trenton on Tuesday and the replay of the tie will follow this encounter.

Point Anne had a dozen chances to win the pastime in regulation time but strong, if comedian ruining set their chances especially in the eighth frame, when Grahams scored tree runs to go one up, when the side should have been retired without a run. The "Cementers" had displayed far better games in their league accessions than they showed a capacity crowd last night. Grahams showed their plate count and they certainly hit in the pinches, a situation that was sadly lacking in the work of the Point Anne club especially in the late innings.

Gordon Derry, the workhorse of the Trenton outfit, hooked up in the encounter with Grahams outpitching Ted Wood, and Harold Luffman fanned five more steady aces and Derry's mates behind him fans secured 18 hits off Luffman but he whiffed seven and walked but one batter. Wood got five strikeouts and walked three. Derry allowed thirteen hits, six of them coming in the first frame before he had steadied away. He was sparingly strong in the pinches and was aided by smart fielding, Gray and Anderson at third and short being prominent. There were few fielding features, the most prominent being by Dickey, the Point Anne right fielder, when he raced far back to gather in a hoist by Ellis with two mates aboard and two out.

The Grahams drove away at the offerings of Luffman until they had the second frame safely in the last half of the seventh. Point Anne scored one run in each of the winners. In the first of the eighth, after two were down, Harry Smith (he came from Grahams) got the line-up as a pinch hitter and he came through to score one and put two more in a scoring position. Gerwin then replaced Fraser and the latter's mates and Grahams were in the ninth with a chance to win. In their half the Point Anne team by advancing Dickey on second on Cosch Secore sending a man home on a passed ball and he just made it. From then on the game was opened but smart fielding and fine pitching kept them all. It would slow him up to get much heavier."

As of a recent date we have repeatedly heard statements locally regarding the alleged deplorable condition into which local sporting activities have supposed to have dropped in past years, but according to statistics and actual figures we have found nothing for such statements, as a matter of fact conditions are the very opposite. Up until one year ago now Belleville boasted of only two properly baseball diamonds with no Canadian championships and competition in one interscholastic of those two facilities its credit.

During the past year, however, two Belleville sons have brought honor and credit to our fair city in the shape of two Canadian championships. Belleville also had its first provincial softball title and its first hockey title since entering the O.H.A. years ago. And as an added feat, an adopted team, the R.C.A.F. brought the first Allan Cup championship to this city, locally or provincially. Summing it all up we find more championships we have mentioned brought to Belleville during the past year than during the entire sport history of the city before.

Starting with Labor Day 1936 we find George Pepper winning the Canadian championship, defeating over brought to Belleville, when he was the holder of the championship. Shortly afterwards, George went on to complete the International champion's championship recog this spring, it marking the second time a Belleville sportsman has captured such lofty sporting circles, the athletic title of Belleville being the America's cup many years ago, the being an international or world championship. Then we have the Percival Sixers winning the provincial intermediate softball title at Oontario, the first time such honors have been won by Belleville. To follow this up the Belleville Redmen won the championship of the intermediate section of the O.H.A. Belleville's first major hockey championship. Then there was the R.C.A.F. champions, who made Belleville famous as their home stamping grounds. Following along we come to the welcoming back of Belleville's soap box derby championship by George Mercer. Yesterday, last week, giving Belleville her second Canadian title within two years. Then George went on to compete in the International or world's soap box derby classic at Akron where he was defeated by the champion of Germany.

Previous to Labor Day of 1936 Belleville had won two senior provincial championships, the Ontario and had competed in one International or world event, the American cup race, with the two recognized championships boasted of then had been won during the past 12 months by those who say sport is in the doldrums we ask how do you account for the fact Belleville has won two provincial and Dominion titles in the past 12 months, more than in the entire sporting career of the past? Belleville has not lost a title, but has still has five championships, two of them being Dominion of Canada championships. George Pepper won the Canadian motorcycle championship after years of efforts, were rewarded with the reward in the second year. More especially, we hope the same results will not materialize following Tommy Wilson's splendid victory in winning the Canadian soap box derby.

The City of Belleville received more free publicity through the medium of the two Georges, Geo. Pepper and Geo. Wilson, than any other medium we can recall. Pepper's picture in the Belleville and the front pages of numerous Old Country newspapers and several English magazines, we have seen, while Wilson's broadcast over a Canadian network on the air on Sunday brought the name of Belleville to the attention of millions of radio listeners and the kid sweepstakes winner was the guest of honor of the Kinsmen's Club of Belleville. Where are those who scoff at the sponsorship of sport when such deeds outsavers today? The success of such events as these in fostering and sponsoring of clean sport is evidenced by the list of all kinds for its future citizens.

"From what we can learn we have a far better defensive team than last season," declared Weir. "We have four tried and proven pitchers," predicted Coach Woodley of the Kiwanis Juniors today in referring to his entry in the Belleville-Peterborough Junior O.B.A.A. playoffs, that open in the Lift Lock City tomorrow night. Belleville's Belleville Saturday. "For pitchers we have "Letty" Vance, Jack Keller, Bert Noakes and Joe Doherty, all better letthanders except Keller, he added Woodley with confidence.

A goodly turnout of golfers answered the initial football call of the season at the Collegiate Campus last evening when Billie Hughes Canada's well known trainer-coach, was on hand and watched

"Well," Medwick replied with a show of subtle modesty," I play the outfield. I also play the infield.

"I plan I'm a cracker-Jack catcher, and, boy, can I hit."

Had His Alternative

Pop later said he had no alternative. He forgot about Sedwick and Sedwick and got Medwick signature on the bottom of an agreement, that he would try moving a little hay on one of the Cardinal's farms.

He was 17 then.At the end of three years he moved up to the Cardinal lineup—still under 21—and in 1934 he won a permanent berth, much to the embarrassment of several heretofore-good pitchers.

I was talking to Mr. Riley the bookeen ladder driver about different subjects around at the firehouse, and I said, Dont you ever get tired of sitting around waiting for fires when there's none to walk for, Mr. Riley?

Well yes, in a way, but I never got so tired that I welcomed a fire that's been started by somebody on purpose just to see a fire. Those people have always made me mad, except maybe Andy Barlies, he said, and I said, Who was he?

Who was he? I said, and Mr. Riley said, He was one of the kindest hearted men in town. He'd spend hours and hours teaching children to whistle through their fingers. In fact it was his hobby.

Can you do it? Mr. Riley said, and I said, Not yet, not quite.

Then you realize how patient Andy Barlies had to be, Mr. Riley said. But his patience was rewarded, because finally there wasn't a child in town who didn't have the knack. It got to be kind of hard on the ears, but it was a lyrical tribute to Andy Barlies's kind heartedness and everybody respected him for it, the more so because he was a very poor man if he'd been more selfish he could of spent that time looking for work. So you can imagine the genuel surprise when it leekrd out that Andy was the person who'd been stealing a number of tires at this Mr. Riley said, and I said, But why wasn't you mad at him?

Because it came out why he did it, Mr. Riley said. It was me that discovered him, standing behind a tree reading an almanack by the flames he'd started. It seems his eyes were bad and he didn't have enough money for glasses, and that was the only way he could get the print enough to read by. All the kids in town got together and gave a big concert whistling through their fingers, so never heard anything like it. It raised enough money to buy Andy a pair of reading glasses and another pair for an extra pair. Why dont you drop in again some time? Mr. Riley said.

Meaning good by.

Leona Brent leaning back wearily against the cushions of the street car. She had really been too tired to enjoy the evening's visit with her aunt, she was always too tired now to enjoy anything. As the car lurched along she studied the faces of the people near her.

The women's lips are pressed tightly together," she thought idly. "Maybe they have children, too. Well, if they are as full of misery as Berton and John, I don't wonder their mothers look cross and strained." She sighed dirtiredly as she thought of the next day with its multitude of duties.

"I get up early and dress the children, watch them at breakfast to prevent their cereal going down their necks or into someone's eyes, grab them out of the flour barrel, mend the coal hod, settle their constant quarrels, and rescue the cat from their clutches. And the next day is the same, and the next after that! All day a gonestep through the house, trying to avoid stepping on the children or their toys. In the evening I rest by trying to mend the things they have torn or tattered from clothes to cats."

She sighed irresistently as she remembered the cat's outraged demeanor when she had rescued him from among the coals in the kitchen. The boys had explained that he was a wheel. Redd boys, the cat, the bathroom and herself needed repairing after the experiment.

"What's the use of it all?" she wondered wearily. "I just wear myself out, and become a drudge instead of a wife to David, and then the boys will grow up and forget me both!"

She came out of her absorption to notice that the car had stopped. A man was talking earnestly to the conductor, pointing to the door.

The young conductor's face grew red and startled. His rubbed his forehead and looked daazdly out into the darkness. Then he went slowly down the side of the car and stopped in front of some uniformed men.

Ben said he in one of the men, then choked and stopped. The passengers waited tensely wondering what was going to happen.

Then," the young conductor started again, "will you take the car for me? My baby is dying."

The passengers looked up in quick sympathy. The conductor, still with that curious red flush on his face, swung off the car and walked into the shadows of the night.

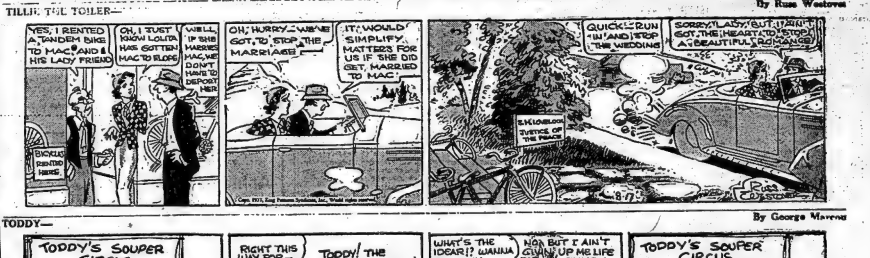
"How terrible! His baby is dying! The poor mother!" whispered the passengers to one another.

"That's what I get for traveling in uniform," grumbled the sexy conductor, but he smiled at the pretty girl opposite him, and rang the bell for the car to proceed.

The pretty girl settled back, the car started, and the tragic moment passed.

Leona felt turned to stone. The wheels of the car re-echoed, "Baby, little baby, is dying." Like a blind wave the sorrows of the world seemed to roll in on her. There were so many things that might happen to little children! She remembered the night Berton had ravaged them with his croupy cough. The terror of the time John had cut his head, flashed before her. There was measles in the next street; but so far, her boys had been safe. A long list of diseases passed before her mental eyes. So many things happened to babies and little boys.

"I wonder if Berton is well covered," she worried. He was a vigorous little two-year-old, and so proud of his strength. John had bumped his head in trying to make the cat turn into a whale. She cut and bring on blood poisoning.



"How slowly this car goes," she thought impatiently. "It seems as if I never shall get home. I'm glad I stopped to get some warm flannels for Berton and a new blouse for John. Won't their eyes sparkle tomorrow when they find the picture books wrapped inside the new clothes!"

In imagination she could hear John's delighted roar and Berton's chuckle. How they would charge upon her and scramble all over her until she lost her teeth from laughing!

"Poor things!" she thought as she glanced at the women near her.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Stocks enjoyed a moderate revival in today's market after an early sinking spell blamed partly on the war at Shanghai.

Early active selling shook down leading Steels and Motors 1 to 2 or more points, but buying reinforcements soon alsmanned the tide of offerings. Dealings turned extremely quiet in the afternoon. Transfers were at the rate of about 650,000 shares. Near the final hour extreme losses were pared or cancelled in many instances.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE
Close

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—The Toronto market made a half-hearted attempt to rally this afternoon after precipitous moderate losses in the early session and at the close practically all groups were down for the day. Base Metals showed the widest recessions, more than two points in the index while losses were mainly narrow in the golds and Industrials. Aggregate turnover showed a considerable drop from that of Monday.

Chibougamau was offered in quantity and the price backed down to 92 for a sale of 16 cents. Lebel good-kindland was another heavy trader in low-priced issues. Losses of 10 cents or more were showing at the close for Bralorne, O'Brien, Privateer, Teck Hughes, Wright Hargreaves, Central Patricia and Read-Authier.

Closing prices were narrowly lower also for Beattie, Macassa, Little Long Lac, Pickle Crow, Kirkland Lake, and Premier. Trade in the big golds was light except for a sizeable trade in Lake Shore at a loss of about three minimum fractions. Buffalo-Ankerite lost about 3¼, Powell Rouyn 2¼ and Hollinger 1¼.

In the base metals Consolidated Smelters weakened nearly two and fractions were lost by Hudson Bay and International Nickel. Ventures declined 30 cents and Pend Oreille, Sherritt, Walle-Amulet and Falconbridge were off 10 cents or more. The silvers moved downward also, losses of 5 to 10 showing at the close for Mining Corporation, Keeley and Castle.

Adds from Walker's common which advanced a point to 80, the big industrials displayed no great strength. The interlisted leaders, C.P.R., Ford A., Brazilian, and a majority of steels worked lower by fractions and losses in other utilities and steels reflected Beauharnois, Power Corporation, United Fuel pfd., Canada Cement, and Dominion Bridge. Cockshutt Plow and Massey Harris, common and preferred, banks were steady and the building list was quiet at fairly steady prices. Gypsum and Dominion Tar finished on the up side.

CAVE WORKERS CLASH

Port Louis, Mauritius, August 17. —(CP-Havas)— Clashes between striking sugar cane workers and troops and police today gave a serious turn to labor unrest in this British Island in the Indian ocean.

Troops and police were obliged to resort to arms to disperse a group of strikers attacked by fire to several plantations and wrecked trolley lines.

British Interest In Provincial Bonds

London, Aug. 17—(CP)—The financial editor of the Daily Express today reported activity in Canadian Provincial bonds following news of the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate the economic and financial basis of Confederation in the light of social and economic developments in the last 70 years.

The findings of the commission, the paper said, "may prove of utmost importance to thousands of British investors in Canadian Provincial and city bonds, such as Alberta, Saskatchewan, Calgary and Vancouver."

Board Room Gossip

MARKET COMMENT

The public is beginning to take an increased interest in the market and not only the industrials, but the mines as well are coming in for attention. We would anticipate one if a good-sized recovery developed as the reaction in the market in the last three months has been quite severe and a rally has been long overdue.

Many people have been looking for a strong market to start "after Labour Day", state "Drury and Thompson in their Market Letter. Movements in stocks seldom come along as advertised; the upward swing now in its early stages should gain momentum, with only meagre reactions until there is a much broader public participation than at present. Intending buyers may find that prices may be considerably higher before the summer is over.

While "summer markets" still prevail, an interesting development in the past week has been a more ready market response to the news, indicating a growing public interest and a disposition to put portfolios in position to benefit from the expected revival of interest in the Fall. There is as yet not much, if any, expansion in volume, but higher prices here and there point to increased interest.

High grades continued to display firmness in advances of the recent Province of Nova Scotia issue was quite marked. This issue was regarded as attractively priced. Budget estimates for the Nova Scotia fiscal year ending November 30, 1937, call for a surplus after sinking fund payments. For the year ended November 30 last ordinary revenue amounted to $10,289,249 an ordinary expenditure after providing $378,171 for sinking fund were $10,127,860. Cost of the new money to Nova Scotia was not published but it is understood that the terms were quite attractive to the province.

Business Sentiment More Optimistic

In the third week of July the production of electric power recorded a new high record above any previous week attained in the history of the industry. The widely anticipated summer slump in business activity is not developing, writes Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Vice-President, The Cleveland Trust Co. Not many new high records are being made, but in nearly all important lines of production and trade the July figures of this year have been well above those of July 1936. This is true even in steel production where output has been increasing rapidly of late, and even in automobiles where work on new models is now getting down the number of assemblies.

DRIVER'S PRECISION FORTUNATE FOR BOY

Presence of mind and the quick application of brakes averted what might have been a tragedy early this morning on Front Street, when an unidentified youth riding a bicycle suddenly swerved in front of a car coming from behind. The driver of the car applied his brakes and the car jerked to a stop.

The cyclist found himself and bicycle reclining against the fender of the car while a basket carried by the youth rolled in the roadway. The boy rode rapidly away before he could be identified.

COMPELLED BY MANDATE

statute in Alberta courts without permission from the Provincial Government.

Submit Banks to Creditors

The banks would be granted a flat "ten licensing was completed and final directorates formed, Mr. Aberhart said, on the following conditions, "if the banks contend that they have the right to monetize the credit of Alberta at their discretion and that their rights are supreme over the people's property and civil rights."

Further they must "refrain from endeavouring to mask their opposition as heretofore by obstruction through obscure nominee appellants." The government was willing to grant flats to individuals or institutions which "genuinely and openly" sought redress from injustices.

'Compelled by Mandate'

"We respectfully submit that we are compelled by the mandate of our people to proceed with the enactment of the legislation and with due deference we suggest that the responsibility of questioning the validity should be assumed by those desiring to render it abortive," the telegram concluded.

The communication to Prime Minister King was completed following a cabinet meeting lasting 4 1-2 hours, which O. L. MacLachlan, Chairman of the Social Credit Board, and C. P. Fowell and L. D. Byrne, Ministers of Major C. H. Douglas, Australian Social Credit authority, also attended.

SUBMIT AGREEMENT TO THE STRIKERS

Toronto, Aug. 17 (CP)—Parties in Premier Hepburn's textile strike conference today submitted a final agreement suitable to the 2,000 Ontario workers who have tied up Cornwall and Peterborough plants for weeks. Tentative agreement was reached last night but remained to be put in shape for submission to the strikers.

What the suggested agreement covers was not disclosed, Premier Hepburn merely stating "satisfactory progress" was made and announcing the parley would resume today. He spent eight hours yesterday conferring with strikers' and company representatives.

JAPANESE CAPTAIN SUICIDES IN CRIEF

Tokyo, Aug. 17 (CP-Havas) — Hiroki Isogai brought an end to is-serve Captain Morito Hiroki's grief over his inability to fight for Japan in its present armed struggle with China.

The Japanese officer committed suicide in the Chinese parade grounds. Before turning his sword upon himself in accordance with the ancient Japanese suicide ritual the officer had informed friends of his decision to take his life was due to the fact he "could not serve his country in its present hour of trial owing to bad health."

Sawmill Strike End is Forecast

Toronto, Aug. 17.—(CP)—Premier Hepburn announced today he believed he had achieved a satisfactory settlement of the sawmill workers strike at the Pitchard Timber Co., in Foleyet, 109 miles north of Sudbury.

In discussions with the mill management, Mr. Hepburn said, the question of wages was solved and sometime today a representative of the government will go north by plane to make a final agreement with the men.

It is essential that the mill should resume operations at once," said the Premier. "Otherwise the other meeting will be lost."

ALBERT DANFORD FOUND IN BUSH

Affected by Heat And Under Nourished When Located

Found wandering and in a weakened condition from the lack of nourishment, Albert Danford, a 84-year-old Coe Hill resident, was discovered late last evening, after a prolonged search for the missing man. He was apparently suffering from exposure and was believed to have been affected by the hot sun and torrid heat of the past two days.

Danford was discovered stumbling through a dense thicket by members of a posse, composed of mill hands recruited from local lumber mills, after a two-day search of the northern section of the county. Mr. Danford had been missing from his home since Sunday noon, at which time he left for "a short stroll", but never returned.

When discovered about two miles from his residence last evening, Mr. Danford's clothes were badly disarranged and torn, undoubtedly by reason of wandering through the bush and thickets for nearly two days and one half. Although he was in a weakened condition Mr. Danford intimated he became lost, but seemingly could not remember just what had occurred, leading friends and authorities to believe he had suffered affected by the hot sun's rays. It is believed the only nourishment afforded the elderly gentleman during his two day wanderings in the bush were berries plucked as he apparently wandered aimlessly about.

Mr. Danford was immediately escorted to his home and medical assistance summoned. Inspector Frank Jackson, Ontario Provincial Police announced today.

SINKING FARM MAY BE MINE

Gold Expert Says There is Prospect Vein Will be Found

Buhl, Idaho, Aug. 18 (AP)—It is an ill wind that blows nobody good.

Farmer H. A. Robertson, stunned recently when his fields of ripening grain suddenly sank into the Idaho's now famed Sinking Canyon was cheered today by the report of a veteran mining expert a rich vein of gold would be discovered when the "sinking" had come to rest.

"The canyon keeps on sinking a little more it won't even be necessary to blast," said L. A. Thiebaud of Gooding, known here as an expert on rocks.

The track, which within two weeks has dropped as much as 200 feet, rests upon "peloseum quartz" which, when exposed and softened by seepage, Tibbs said.

"This quartzite can't sink very far because it rests upon pegmatite," he said, the hardest of rocks," Tibbs added.

"Between the pelesonic quartzite and the pegmatite, you'll find the gold-bearing quartz.

The formation imbedded in pegmatite, there is blue-stone, which gives it value from $5,000 a ton on up.

BURNING STRAW STACK HAULED INTO FIELD AWAY FROM BARNS

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 18 (CP)— Farmers were kept busy to-day at a burning straw stack into a field on the farm of Neil McMillan of Howard Township yesterday, preventing flames from reaching two large barns containing considerable grain and averting a heavy financial loss.

The fire broke out in the straw stack during threshing operations. Farm helpers and threshers went to work with buckets and hold the flames in check while fire equipment from Ridgetown and Blenheim raced to the scene of the blaze.

TORRENTIAL RAIN, CYCLONIC WINDS CAUSE DAMAGE

CROPS FLATTENED

An Elgin County farmer was dead today and two other men were recovering from injuries as result of a series of electrical storms that swept Southern Ontario. Torrential rain, cyclonic wind attacked both eastern and western sections of the Province, causing extensive damage.

He died in a fruitless effort to save his stock from the flaming building. His body was found a short distance from the charred remains of the animals.

'Shoot-to-Sink' Order Given Against Subs Molesting Ships

British Patience at End Over Attacks Near Spain

STRONG STAND TAKEN

London, Aug. 18.—(AP)— Great Britain moved today to protect her "arterial road" through the Mediterranean with what was described as a "shoot-to-sink" order against submarines that molest British merchantmen.

The order from the Admiralty was despatched to units of the Mediterranean fleet and to the naval bases at Gibraltar and Malta. It was interpreted in London as an indication British patience had been sorely tried as a result of an increasing series of air and sea attacks reported in sections of the Mediterranean far from Spanish waters.

"Shipping is not safe on the whole of the Mediterranean," said one admiralty official. "On account of the extension of the danger zone the imperative we should take a strong stand to ensure the safety of British shipping.

"Extra ships may be dispatched to the Mediterranean."

Of eight ships reporting attacks since Aug. 6 only one was of British registry, however. This was the oil tanker British Corporal and it was said to have been the target of a bomb and machine gun attack by planes—not a submarine.

64 - Year Minstrel Partnership Ends with J. McIntyre's Death

News of Death Held From His Lifelong Comrade, Thos. H. Heath

JIGGED IN CAR AISLES

Southampton, N.Y., Aug. 18—(AP) —James McIntyre, 79, died today from eurosmic poisoning, ending the 64-year-old partnership of McIntyre and Heath, famed minstrel men and one of the best known vaudeville teams of the last generation.

News of his death was withheld from his lifelong comrade, Thomas K. Heath, 84, who lay stricken with paralysis and bronchitis at his home in Setauket, only a few miles across Long Island from Southampton.

First a 'Candy Butcher'

McIntyre, beloved "Alexander" of the old vaudeville skit "The Ham Tree," did his first dancing as a candy butcher on the railroad run between Kenosha, Wis., his native state, and his home in Rockford, Ill.

From jigging in the aisles of trains to entertain passengers, he graduated to a regular "spot" in vaudeville with his first partner, Frank Austin.

From jigging in the aisles of cars up, McIntyre met Heath, who had lost his partner, in San Antonio, Tex., and the team they formed lasted until their final appearance together in Philadelphia in October, 1934.

Playing Country Fairs

They began by playing the country fairs of Texas, passing the hat after each performance. In 1877 they went to Chicago after travelling for a time with Sells Brothers' wagon show, and played first at Hamlin's Old Coliseum. The same year they came on to New York to play in the old Madison Square Garden.

They opened in New York with Haverly's Minstrels and Leon, when that show closed in Atlanta, Ga., McIntyre and Heath organized a show of their own, which ran for one season with indifferent success.

"Coon Buck Dance"

It was in 1880 that the McIntyre-Heath team gave New Yorkers their first sight of the "Coon Buck Dance" —in Tony Pastor's old theatre on Broadway and it was such a success that the dancers' salary jumped to $150 a week for a single night.

After playing with Alice Oates in "Babes in Toyland," McIntyre and his partner organized the "Georgia Minstrels" which played throughout the United States, running for 17 years without a single change in routine to $150 a week for a single night.

In 1891 the partners left their own show to join Barnum and Bailey, and four years later they played with the Hyde Comedians, before joining Weber and Fields in 1895.

Veterans of the stage, McIntyre and Heath were headliners at the turn of the century, appearing in 1901 with Beeky's Orpheum Road Show, and in 1905 with Klaw and Erlanger.

WARNING TO SUBS MEANT FOR ITALY, IS LONDON VIEW

Charge d'Affaires For Italy Asks Meaning

HEAVY SHIPPING

100 Merchant Ships of British Flight in Mediterranean

London, Aug. 18—(CP)— Havas news agency said today in a copyright story that decision of the British Government to authorize British warships to fire on any submarine which attacks a British vessel is "interpreted in political circles here as a warning addressed to Italy, although that country was not specifically named in last night's announcement."

Havas said it learned the order was given at a meeting of the cabinet Monday of a Spanish government freighter in the southwest entrance to the Dardanelles, and said that "nobody here, so far as Havas could learn, believed the submarine which sank the Ciudad de Cadiz there was one of the Soviet Republic navy, the few submarines of which have only a very limited field of action."

Meaning of Communique

Guiliano Grubi, Italian charge d'affaires, was reported as calling at the Foreign Office today to ask the meaning of yesterday's communique.

Havas estimated about 100 British merchant ships of about 600,000 to 700,000 tons each are in the Mediterranean every day. Protection for them now provided by the Royal Navy will be strengthened, the agency said, it understood.

Increase in Attacks

London, Aug. 18.—(CP)—Commenting on authorization for retaliation against submarines attacking British ships, the Morning Star said today attacks in the Mediterranean on British shipping have shown an alarming increase and that in the absence of some attack of other nationality the captains have observed that "before they were sunk their craft were trailed by Italian warships."

"Prime Minister Chamberlain will not forget his agreement with this odd coincidence in his next letter to Premier Mussolini," the Star continued. "It is to be hoped that a touch of firmness may convince the Fascists that Great Britain is not wholly supine nor incapable of defending her sailors."

DR. DAFOE PLACES BAN ON VISITORS

Extra Precautions Taken to Safeguard Health of Quints

Callander, Ont., Aug. 18.—(CP)— Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe plans extra precautions to safeguard the health of the Dionne Quintuplets because recent colds have lowered their resistance to disease. Latest word is that even special visitors are banned from the nursery for an indefinite period.

"You know their resistance has been lowered by the attacks of the recent colds they had," said Dr. Dafoe. The ban on all visitors is to prevent infection of any disease, including infantile paralysis, from being carried to the five little sisters. The doctor said, however, no infantile paralysis cases had been reported here.

Cecile played again with the other four little girls today, her period of confinement because of a cold at an end. When Dr. Dafoe declared her well enough to play, she led her sisters in the nursery, but now she can accompany them in the playpen when they go out.

With the last quintuplet restored to health, their twice-daily public appearance before throngs of tourists have been resumed, though until the ban on special visitors is lifted only Oliva Dionne and Mrs. Dionne, the parents, can visit them in the nursery.

ESKIMOS REPORT HEARING ENGINES

First Definite Clue on Lost Soviet Fliers Received

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 18—(AP) —Eskimos who reported hearing engines along the northern Alaska coast "four or five days ago" furnished first definite clues today in the hunt for the missing Soviet transpolar plane.

Natives, gathered at remote Barter Island to trade, told pilot Bob Randall yesterday they heard the roar of engines and when they could sight no boat, decided it must have been an airplane.

Barter Island is on the 144th meridian, 200 miles east of Barrow. The search was shifted from here yesterday by stormy weather.

The spot is 175 miles east of the 146th meridian, along which the six airmen planned to fly enroute here on a 6,000 mile hop across the North Pole from Moscow.

Randall, Canadian airman flying a plane chartered by the Soviet Embassy in Washington, reported from Barrow the note heard by the Eskimos "might have been the Russian plane."

None of the natives told of seeing the plane.

Randall, flying through murky clouds, covered the coast line between Barrow and Point Barrow, Alaska's northernmost tip a distance of over 650 miles.

He said he landed "wherever I could find a native to talk to."

The Soviet plane, piloted by Sigmund Levanefsky, and carrying five others was last heard from shortly after it crossed the pole early Friday.

Jimmy Matern, noted American flyer here awaiting favorable weather to start his part of the search.

THREE STATUTES ARE DISALLOWED BY KING GOV'T

Alberta Government Restrained From Enforcing Banking Laws

WIPED OFF BOOKS

First Time Cabinet Has Used Wide Powers Since 1924

Ottawa, Aug. 18—(CP)— Premier William Aberhart's Social Credit Government in Alberta looked today upon the wreckage of three statutes, main purpose of the special session of the legislature held early this month, and designed to gain control of Provincial branches of Canada's chartered banks.

An order-in-council adopted by the Dominion Government yesterday under authority of the power vested in it by the British North American Act disallowed the three statutes in question and nullified them as completely as if they had never been enacted. From this action there is no appeal.

Move to halt operation of these Acts was taken when Mr. Aberhart declined to co-operate in a reference on their validity to the Supreme Court of Canada, this will involve suspension of their operation until the reference has been determined and Mr. Aberhart yesterday declared he had no intention to put them in force Aug. 27.

Acts Beyond Powers.

In his communication to Mr. Aberhart yesterday Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the Acts dealt "beyond the powers of the Provincial Legislature and constitute an infringement upon the recognized powers of the Dominion." Jurisdiction of the central government over money and banking had never been seriously questioned in the 70 years since confederation, he declared.

Text of the Acts in question required banks to be licensed by the Provincial Government and to submit to the consent of Council which the Government would be dominant. A corporation whose deputies the unlicensed banks of right to initiate or defend an action in the civil courts. The Acts also would prevent any person from testing the validity of any Provincial statute in the Alberta courts without permission from the government.

Under the B.N.A. Act

Under provisions of the British North American Act, Section 90, all Provincial statutes are required to be submitted to the Dominion Government for approval or otherwise. The central authority vested in the Government of Canada by Ottawa has power to disallow any such Act within a year of its coming into force.

Use of this power has greatly diminished in recent years and it has been rarely exercised in the case of an Alberta statute imposing a tax on mineral lands was disallowed.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Invisible rays from the sun! It seems hard to realize that there are sun rays we cannot see, which are similar to those we do see in the daily sails but one. That detail is the wave length, or the frequency of vibration. When we see a sun spectrum or a rainbow, we see colors whose frequency or vibration effect the optic nerve. If one places a thermometer beyond the red, called infra-red, the temperature there is higher than in any other part of the visible spectrum, and thus indicates the heat rays. Beyond the violet, or ultra-violet, a photographic plate is affected and reduces rays have chemical action and are used to sterilize water or water and to cure rickets and other diseases. These rays have the penetrate the ordinary window glass.

FREE FROM SCIATICA FOR 35 YEARS

In Perfect Health at 73— Thanks to Kruschen

Thirty-five years ago this astonishing man was suffering with sciatica. Then he heard of Kruschen. Since that day, he has enjoyed perfect health. Here is his remarkable story:—

Thirty-five years ago, I had a severe attack of sciatica, and could scarcely move for about six weeks. Then I started taking Kruschen—about half a teaspoonful every morning in hot water. In two weeks, I got rid of the awful pain in my hips. I have never had to consult a doctor since, and am still in perfect health at 73 years of age, which I can only attribute to taking Kruschen Salts every morning."—T. A.

Most people grow old long before their time from taking some sluggish, evil poison, which collects one vital need of health—the need of internal cleanliness. Kruschen Salts gently but healthily establishes habit. Then, probably for the first time in their lives, they start getting rid, every day, of all waste matter from the system. The results are renewed health in many cases. Ailments due to clogged systems vanish, youth returns, and life becomes really worth living.

MENTAL TESTS ARE ADVOCATED

Reaction in Emergency Must be Studied Says Driver

"The motor accident business has got to be studied," Jack Burgess, representative of a Detroit Trailer manufacturing concern said this morning. "Every day I read in the papers about the number of people injured and killed, and one can't help thinking of the futility of the whole thing. I've been driving a car for over twelve years and I always try to avoid an accident. Guess I'd better touch some wood!" he added quickly.

"There are drivers and drivers. There are drivers who nowadays should not be allowed to drive a car. Then there are drivers of a, what shall I call it, a mentality test, or something, and I think authorities some idea of what drivers will do when faced with an emergency.

"For instance, last night when driving from Belleville to Toronto, once, I was driving at a speed of forty miles per hour when I saw a car coming at the point of passing, a house stood at the corner. The driver of the car approaching car a chicken darted out in front of the driver of the other car, a lady by the way, saw the hen and swerved her car sharply to the right, to avoid driving directly my path. I jerked the wheel of my car to the left and there was just enough room between our fenders as she roared by me.

"I didn't say a word, my mouth was I pulled my car back on the road. The lady however, drove on, calmly, ified apparently that she had saved the life of a chicken, but with no thought of what might have happened had the road been a foot narrower."

The Smokes Decided It

"Who wants a job", queried the overalled driver of the light car who had stopped to stop to the side of the city hall this morning.

Half a group of men seated on the concrete steps volunteered an answer.

"I'm just wages", brightly informed the would be employer. "Bed and board and $3.00 a day. Got to do the grain in."

Still no takers.

"Well, what I'll do—pay you a dollar and a half, and all you can eat."

Slowly one lanky individual unfolded himself from the group.

"I'll take it mister, if you'll finish the smokes, too".

"That's smoke myself; I chaw. But, it's a bargain. Hop in."

Car and driver moved off in the general direction of the city, owners.

OUTBOARDMOTORS STOLEN AT LAKE

Four Taken From Boats Anchored at Rice Lake

Stolen under the cover of darkness from the residents of cottages bordering on Rice Lake during Monday, four two cylinder Johnston outboard motors were purchased by Ontario Intelligencer today.

"A large gang of motor truck bearing Quebec license plates was seen in the vicinity of Bewdley last night while the two occupants were observed loitering about, but no suspicious attempts were made by them at that time," said Inspector Hall, in charge of the investigation of the thefts from Constable A.A. Mennie of Cobourg this morning.

The serial numbers of the four motors stolen from cottages have been given as follows: 36690; 16730; 228-37 and 22697. Provincial Police have urged the assistance of especially motorists, who might observe a suspicious looking outboard motorboat in assisting in the recovery of these valuable articles. The motors had been left in their accustomed positions astern boats, the property of vacationists, who are holidaying in the vicinity of Rice Lake. As is the custom at the cottages the outboard motors are left in their boats when not in use for pleasure or fishing.

The motors were stolen during the dead of night and from cottagers who reside within close proximity of each other.

No search will be necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, while only one local resident completed the cell block at the police station.

ACTIVITIES LIB. GOV'T REVIEWED

Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner Addresses Belleville Liberals

In a resume of activities of the Liberal administration, and a review of achievements of the past four years the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, and member for the county of West Hastings in his address before two hundred Liberal supporters at the Liberal clubrooms in the city last evening pointed to the progress recorded in relation to electors of the Province as the result of "Safe and sane" government of the people's affairs.

From Sydro to Amusement Tax the Hon. Dr. Faulkner extended his address, citing savings made in every department since inception of office.

How the municipalities of the Province, and particularly in Hastings County had benefited was revealed by the speaker, citing the removal of the tax on Ontario provincial roads in this county as one instance where the people had been returned to residents. Not only have savings been made, but provincial revenues returned through the "more careful management and supervision of the people's affairs."

Touching briefly upon his own department, the Hon. Dr. Faulkner cited the economies that had been effected since his appointment to the office of Minister of Health. In place of two assistants, the office is now capably manned by only one. But through the Province similar economies had been effected in which considerable of numbers of inspectors of the department had been made and qualified medical men in each district, alert to the needs of their particular territory.

Dr. Faulkner's address followed the business session of the meeting, called for the purpose of naming delegates to the Marmora convention to be held in that village tomorrow, for the purpose of selecting a delegate to contest the riding at the general provincial elections.

DEVELOPMENT OF RADIO DISCUSSED

Mr. Bassingthwaite of Stewart-Warner in Special Speaker

The infant industry in Canada, radio, was minutely explained by E. M. Bassingthwaite, sales manager for the Stewart Warner Alemite Company of Canada at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the Queens Hotel and members were given an insight into the development and research that provides such interesting evenings for the radio fans. The speaker was introduced by president Eddie Logan and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Eddie Shapiro.

The club was told of the efforts of the Kiwanis juniors in the baseball world and hoped a large turnout would be on hand on Saturday to witness the O.A.B.A. playoff with Peterboro Rotary. The team plays in Peterboro today. Members graciously bought tickets for the game on Saturday and a good sum was realized to help the kids along. An interesting meeting with the Trenton Rotary will be held at Oak Lake in the near future. This will be a Ladies night and definite information will be supplied at next week's meeting. The meeting on Tuesday next will be devoted to new members with Gordon Bray in charge. It is understood four new members will be introduced to the club and initiated into the workings of the organization. Deleagates to the district convention are ready for Hamilton and it is expected the Belleville Club will provide the next Lieutenant Governor for this district, a high honor to be given any club.

Early Development

Mr. Bassingthwaite told of the early development of radio and the rapid strides made during the war and the founding of KDKA Pittsburg in 1921 and rapid rise of radio stations through the Internet to the public to radio reception. He told of the efforts of various companies to keep pace with the demand for receiving sets, claiming that factories were swamped with orders in the early day and it was not a case of selling but of production. In 1930 so many companies had sprung up, that in one month the complete supply for a year could be manufactured and in the years of depression, the radio business suffered quite heavily but at the present time the industry was again on a solid foundation.

The speaker told his listeners, that in 1927 the radio business would amount to about $415,000,000 which Canada will supply about 18 millions, which makes the radio business in Canada of prime importance. Mr. Bassingthwaite was with the De Forest Crosley firm for a number of years and told of his experience as sales manager for that firm in the Maritimes. "In the early days," he stated, "there was little daylight reception in that district, fans having to depend on American stations but soon Canadian stations came into being and fans became more numerous and now in the Maritimes reception is as good as any part of Canada. Dealing with the building of a set, the speaker stated that every operation is thoroughly tested before the chassis is sent on to another department and they are as near perfection, when completed as possible. He showed how there were 200 soldered connections and the machine of today is greater value than ever before, because when a purchaser gets a set, with a three band reception he is buying three sets in one.

Mr. Bassingthwaite was enthusiastic over short wave reception exclaiming the best time for this reception being between six and nine o'clock in the evening. Television was discussed and he showed that it would not become extensive until engineers were able to hook up television on the various chains. Belleville should be proud to have one of five radio manufacturing plants in Canada, the others being at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Kitchener, said Mr. Bassingthwaite and in closing told of the fine advancement in Stewart Warner radios with the latest development, magic tuning.

TWO WAYS

It would be sad evidence if men and women would not sacrifice for others. What would the world have thought of itself if no attempts had been made to find the missing Earhart plane and its occupants in the lone Pacific wastes? What would man have thought of himself if no one went to search for the missing fliers from Moscow?

Sign that humanity is sound is shown by the response of fliers to the call they feel to seek for the lost sextette. James Mattern, a famous American pilot and others are scouring the tundra country in and about the Arctic Circle in the hope of finding them.

If this is the sign of humanity then it is the sternest rebuke to the view some still hold that war cannot be overcome. One way of preventing war it seems, is by protection through heavy armaments. It does seem that a just preponderant nation can prevent war. British rearmament is in that class and it is said that one of the factors preserving peace today is the British rearmament step. War may be the result of fears of a lack of security, which ought not to exist and probably many nations which might go to war would do so only because they think they see no other way.

But in the long run it will probably be that nations will take the sacrificial attitude, like that of those who seek the missing fliers. Instead of killing men, women and children as in the strange struggle now broken out between China and Japan when lives do not seem to count, it will be the saving of life and of nations which will be the dominant world attitude.

A DEBUNKER'S VIEW OF GHOSTS

The news columns contain at times interesting stories about the old things which have been the theme of conversation around primeval fires and hearths all through the ages. Tales that are told which thrill the imagination of childhood and age—such as ghost stories.

Modern science has taken up the challenge of these stories of ghosts and hauntings endeavoring to debunk them of fraud or self deception. In the name of mystery many frauds have been committed, everyone will agree and must praise scientists for their work.

But now comes an interesting piece of news. Hereward Carrington, director of the American Psychial Institute, and known as a debunker, has a notion, according to a United Press despatch that there may be something to ghost stories after all. This does not mean he believes there actually are ghosts but he argues that there is something to it when a person says he heard funny noises last night, "sort of like the clanking of chains and a body being dragged downstairs."

The despatch says that Carrington admitted, "I believe in haunted houses. People don't just imagine they see and hear strange sights and sounds in old dwellings. These experiences seem to come in waves, and I must say this is a great season for them."

He has a theory "that a place can get so charged with magnetic influences of forceful people that the walls soak up mental and emotional disturbances and that these influences can be reflected back so that they affect people now living there."

He says "most people talk about ghosts as if they were uncanny elves—something to be afraid of. My belief is that they are people just the same as we are, and that there's no reason to be afraid of them. I don't believe that the entities that haunt old houses are consciously there. What we see or hear are vague memories of long-ago activities that they project into our world like swift dreams.

"There are two factors in all these stories of haunted houses. You have to consider the old house and the people now living in it. The house is the 'charged battery. If inharmonious 'hard-boiled' people live in it they get nothing. But put sensitive people there and they catch all the delicate or boisterous tones."

Carrington said he wished some rich person would finance the task of running down haunted-house stories. He calls them "manifestations of the invisible mental world" and regretted that the subject of psychic phenomena is less respectable here than in England, where, he explained, it gets along well under the leadership of Cambridge and Oxford men.

Still many persons will believe that stories of haunted houses are more likely to be imagination. There are not many houses with a reputation for being haunted and how few people have seen what they call ghosts! Has anyone in a sane moment seen a ghost? they ask.

A psychic society can do much to expose frauds or delusions, to explain sounds and to gather data about strange mysterious occurrences. While the society is dealing with these, there are millions of persons who will still love a ghost story thriller whether they believe in haunted houses or not.

SOME ANXIETY HAVING BEEN EXPRESSED REGARDING THE WELL BEING of a Toronto man who recently flew to China his friends were pleased to receive cable assurance that he was all right. His presence in China is best described by the following article in Time Magazine:

Back in San Francisco after frolicking at the famed annual tycoon bust of San Francisco's Bohemian Club, John P. Bickell, mining speculator and director of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; and Bernard E. (Sell 'Em Ben) Smith, celebrated Wall Street bear, backer of the Merrill-Lambie Coronation flight, were walking down Post street toward Union Square. Said Speculator Smith: "I feel like taking a trip." Replied Banker Bickell: "That's a great idea. I'll go anywhere you want..." At that moment they were opposite the St. Francis Hotel which houses the offices of the Pan American Airways Gleefully they stepped inside ordered two tickets to China on next day's China Clipper. Bickell had to phone to Toronto to have his passport forwarded by special plane to Buffalo where it was transferred to a regular mail plane. Not having a special delivery stamp on the passport letter fifty bags of mail had to be ransacked at San Francisco before the passport was found. Wall Street Smith scribbled a check for $2,000 for one-way tickets, when offered round-trip accommodation. "How do we know we're coming back?" said he.

MANY SURPRISES WILL FEATURE BELLEVILLE FAIR THIS YEAR. One of the feature attractions will be a concert by the Ottawa Boys' Band on Wednesday afternoon. This fine aggregation of juvenile musicians has been heard with delight over the radio in concerts extending over many weeks on a nation-wide hook-up. The Ottawa Boys' band is a high class musical combination which can be classed with any of the best bands on the continent and they do not need to ask any allowance for age for each member of the band, although young, is an artist on his own instrument. The Fair management was able to get this band for one afternoon only on account of other engagements, and from Belleville the band will proceed to Toronto to fulfill an extended engagement.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

50 YEARS AGO

August 18th., 1887.

The excellent fishing in the waters adjacent to Belleville attracts many tourists to this city, but the difficulty of obtaining minnows here for bait in the season is driving many to other places where live bait may be obtained easily. Local fishermen are importing minnows, but this is an expensive proceeding, each minnow costing three cents laid down here. The local difficulty seems to be that a civic license is necessary and no dealer seems inclined to take out one. The license should be abolished and visiting fishermen encouraged to make Belleville their outing headquarters.

FIRE ORIGINATES WHILE THRESHING

Livestock And Grain Lost When Barn of Mark Shortt Destroyed

Rawdon, Aug. 18 (Special)—Fire originating during threshing operations, completely destroyed the large frame barn the property of Councillor Mark Shortt, tenth concession of Rawdon at two-thirty on Tuesday afternoon. Part of the contents, hay, half the crop of oats, sixteen small pigs, were lost in the fire, but the threshing machine, owned by Mr. Charles Stewart, a colt and a number of pigs were brought to safety by the large number of men assisting with the threshing.

The fact that the wind was blowing away from the house and other buildings prevented further loss. The barn was a modern frame structure with cement basement. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

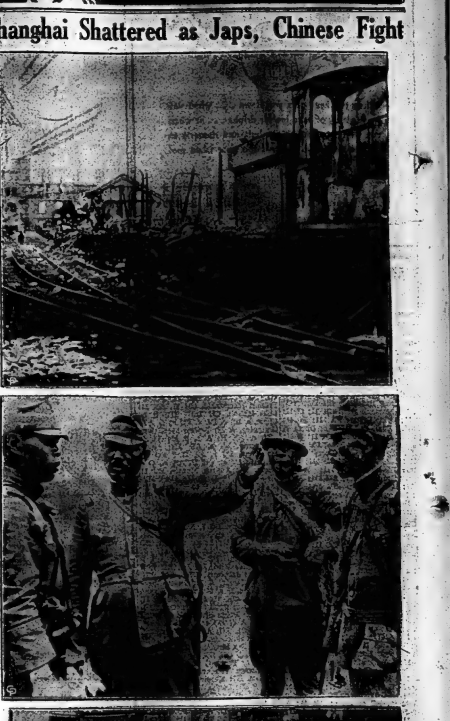
Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private char and ma was walking around looking for suthin'. Capital and labor, capital and labor, that's all there seems to be in the air these days, Willyum.



I've noticed it, pop said. Even the editors are properly tired of it by this time and I for one would be glad to see a little less of it and a few more advertisements, he said, and ma said judging by what I read in the Daily Speaker there's nothing can take the place of capital when it comes to a good influence, but it's a story of a different color according to the Daily Advance labor is the first and last thing on earth and nothing can be mentioned in the same breath.

They're both wrong pop said, I mean there's a good cel to be said for both sides. For instants labor realizes all capital has done for it and there's nothing labor wouldn't do in return as long as it didn't interfere with fewer and shorter hours and more and fuller pay envelopes and perhaps the closed shop. And as for capital, capital knows very well it wouldn't be where it is today if it wasn't for labor, not to seak of where it will be tomorrow, so capital wishes labor all the luck in the world, except maybe the good luck, he said, and ma said. Well in that case what's all the fuss and misunderstanding about?

Shanghai Shattered as Japs, Chinese Fight

Mass evacuation of foreigners residing in shell-torn Shanghai, is reported underway by British and United States authorities as fighting between Chinese and Japanese became general along a 15-mile front encircling the city of 3,500,000 persons. The death toll which leaped to 1,000 in the first day of actual fighting is steadily mounting as Japanese warships pour shells into the city and Japanese soldiers and marines invade the metropolis. An idea of the power of a modern high explosive shell may be gathered from the upper photograph when one struck a Chinese train as it left the north station in Shanghai during the 1932 fracas. One shell did the damage shown. Japanese forces are pouring shells into the city in all-day bombardments. Leader of the Chinese troops in Northern China where the Japanese invasion preceded the fighting at Shanghai is Colonel Renjo Mutaguchi shown in the centre photograph with members of his staff as he directed operations near Peiping. The scene shown in the lower photograph was a common one during the Japanese invasion of Shanghai in 1932 and is being re-enacted in a hundred spots about the native district of the cosmopolitan city today. Japanese marines are shown behind their barricade in the Chapei section where fighting is again taking place.

Furrows Between Eyes? It's Time You Got Busy

(By Helen Follett)

When Furrows appear between the eyes, it's time something should be done. How did they get there? She put them there herself, the bad girl.

Now that bangs have returned, she can use them to shield the wrinkles. Even so, the most get after the little "ditches" and do everything possible to tone tissues that have suffered. Much can be accomplished by applying a heavy cream diligently every night. If the cream jar is empty, use lanoline. It is nourishing and disappears in short order.

Apply with a rotary motion of the first finger. Place the finger at the lower end of the line, first finger at upper end, and iron upward with the thumb while the finger stays stationary. This treatment lifts up the flesh and tends to obliterate the grooves.

An ice rub should follow. While at the job, one might as well make a clean sweep, creaming the face and neck and doing a general refrigerating afterward. There's nothing like cold water to keep tissues firm and circulation on the run. The time for this beauty rite is before tumbling into bed. Cream or lanoline should remain on all night.

Don't be a "stay-at-home". That's the best way in the world to get mildewed mentality, to drop into a rut. Get out-of-doors for two hours each day. Play golf or tennis or take big, natural breaths to breathe deeply. That practice will pass on your liver and digestion and make your complexion of finer texture and better coloring. When wrapping your tresses on artificial curlers, watch your parting. If the hair is measured off evenly, curls will be uniform.

Do a light wind. Ringlets will stay in curl longer, and you will also have a pretty marcel pattern to work with. One might as well know how to do the job properly. There are times when one can't pick up one's heels and dash to the beautyterium.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Salad

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please inform me if it is good form, when eating a fruit salad consisting of lettuce, fruit, and dressing, to eat the lettuce.

By all means eat the lettuce if you wish. Why not, indeed? Lettuce is a splendid food, healthful and delicious. There isn't any reason to treat it like a stepchild!

Dinner Arrangements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

—Are the water goblets filled just before or just after the guests are summoned to dinner?

—At a small dinner who should be served first, the hostess or the guest of honor?

2.—If the dinner is a larger one, say of ten or twelve guests and there are to be two waitresses serving, what is then the sequence of serving?

4.—What is the strictly proper way for the waitress to pass a dish to a guest?

5.—When wine is served, who is served first?

6.—When are cigarettes passed?

7.—What is the correct way of 'crumbing' the table?

8.—If individual nut dishes are put on the table, where should they be placed?

9.—When the guests enter the dining room must they remain fluid?

10.—How should the waitress announce dinner?

11.—What is the correct position for glasses?

Wants-To-Be-Correct.

1.—The water goblets are filled just before dinner is announced.

2.—The woman guest of honor, who is seated at the right of the host, should be served first.

3.—One waitress serves the woman guest of honor, and the other waitress starts with the woman one away from the right of the hostess.

4.—The waitress passes the dish at the left of the guest. Her left hand is held under the dish, and if the dish is a heated one, she holds a napkin under the dish. As she passes the dish she should bend slightly, and she should hold her right hand back and below the waist.

5.—Wine is passed first to the host, his glass being about half filled. Then she will proceed to the woman on his right, and so clockwise around the table, as all the serving should be done. When everyone has been served to wine the waitress fills up the host's glass.

6.—Often cigarettes are found on the table all during the meal. There may be individual cigarette dishes, with ash trays and matches. If this is not done, usually cigarettes are passed after the salad course.

7.—The waitress uses a napkin and a small plate or tray to crumb the table.

8.—Individual nut dishes are placed directly above the places.

9.—The host comes first with the guest of honor at his right.

10.—The waitress comes to the hostess and says, in a low voice, "Dinner is served, Madam".

11.—Glasses are placed at the right of the plate. They are usually arranged in a triangle. The water glass is placed just above the tip of the knife. The champagne glass forms the upper angle of the triangle and the sherry or wine glass forms the lower angle.

Birthday Cake

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At an informal birthday dinner is the cake placed on the table before the dinner is brought into the dining-room, lighted. Then the one whose birthday it is blows out the candles, making a wish as she or he does so. Serving the cake in this way gives a much more festive air to the ceremony than if the cake has been on the table during the dinner. . . . don't you think so? And with the cake usually ice cream is served, those two make a fine dessert course.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners (submitted by readers.)

YOU CAN THROW CARDS IN HIS FACE ONCE TOO OFTEN

WHEN you have those awful "I" cramps when you feel you are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love.

Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man.

A three-quarter vim may be on with an all if the magic husband saves days out of every month.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders that make women nervous, irritable, "cranky" and "blue". Tuesday from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

The regular August meeting of Gilead W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Wilfred Clare. Despite the rainy day there was a good attendance. Mrs. Rubel opened the meeting by the call to worship, followed by prayer by several members and a hymn. Mrs. Fred Yorke read the Scripture lesson, a chapter from the study book was given by Mrs. F. W. Salmon.

The donations for the supply bale were collected and a box valued at $18.00 including a quilt was packed and sent to the supply secretary at Napanee. Roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture.

The results of the copper contest were announced. The losing side is to entertain the winners to a picnic at Park's Creek during next week. The younger members of the community entertained the members to the following program—Readings were given by Wilhelmien Huffman, Olive Terwilon, Olive Ross, Reenda Baines, Mary Lawrenson, Isobel Hoffman. A trio by Reenda Walker, Olive Ross and Norma Clare entitled "Little Sunbeams" was nicely sung. Annie Clare played a solo with variations very sweetly. The girls closed by all singing a hymn.

Meeting closed with prayer by the president and the watchword. Mrs. Clare served cake and ice cream. Attendance 19 members and 13 children. Collection $2.38.

At the Movies

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

"Everybody Dance" and "Night of Mystery"

Distinguished by a story of love and romance, and abounding in lilting songs and snappy dance numbers, "Everybody Dance," serving as a starring vehicle for the talents of Cicely Courtneidge and Ernest Truex, opens today at the Capitol as smash hit No. 1 and continuing until Friday nite.

The scenario deals with the story of a popular Night Club prima donna who has everything in the world—fame, wealth, position — except love, for the thing a woman really hungers for. How she suddenly starts trading a double life, becomes a lady farmer and the guardian of two children, how she finally gets her man on a marriage license and still keeps it in electric lights is all excitingly worked out in a gay and romantic fashion.

Miss Courtneidge's performance as the queen of the entertainment world who starts raising cows and chickens on the sly is, of course, something to fetch several laurel wreaths. Ernest Truex, as the young American who eventually leads her to the altar, supplies engaging assistance in the role of the hero who fails madly in love without losing his delightful sense of humor. Excellent characterizations are turned in by Billie de la Volta, Dean Reisner, Joan Ponsford and Janet Annesley.

In addition to the spirited direction of Clive Brook, Cicely Courtneidge, the lavish sets, the laugh-getting dialogue, the picture is garnished with the song-hits by that inimitable Hollywood team of tunesters, Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin—"My What a Different Night," "What Does It Get Her" and "Everybody Dance."

"Night of Mystery"

A new Philo Vance blood-chilling murder story, "Night of Mystery," as exciting as all the other S. S. Van Dine screen attractions, opens today as smash hit No. 2 on this grand double bill, and successfully introduces a new Philo Vance and Sergeant Heath in the persons of Grant Richards and Roscoe Karns.

Thrown into the midst of a series of murders that threatens to exterminate the Cowley family, the latter are forced to live in a mysterious mansion, Vance unearths clue after clue that leads up to a killer, but finds police against his coldly scientific methods of crime detection. Logical strength that eludes each trap.

Richard, as the scarcely polished Philo Vance adds something to the role that gave William Powell a reputation. Karns makes the new older Van Dine mystery films. As a leaner, more wiry Heath, than that portrayed by Eugene Pallette. Roscoe Karns contributes a comparable different characterization of a favorite movie character. Ruth Coleman, Harry Stephens, Helen Pratt and Elizabeth Patterson give excellent performances.

AT THE BELLE

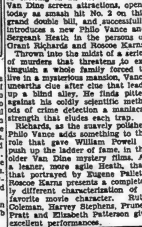
"Parnell" Spell-Binding Romance

"Parnell" which opened last night at the Bells Theatre, is, of course, a story of the Irish people primarily, but actually it is a narration of great love and sacrifice that transcends all racial boundaries.

It takes the man, Charles Stewart Parnell, as a symbol of all the honorable, reckless men of history, to whom love was a greater thing than fortune, fame or power. It gendows him with many of the human frailties and some of the human virtues that endear a man to his fellowmen.

The role of Parnell is played by Clarke Gable. In the opinion of this reviewer, it provides Hollywood's leading male star with a part unlike any he has had before and one in which he proves his real artistry.

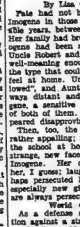
Parnell, the Irishman, speaks with a decidedly American accent, but it must be remembered that he lived in this country and learned not only the language, but the customs and mannerisms; moreover his mother was American.



Myrna Loy portrays the glamorous Miss Dishes, the woman Parnell loves to the exclusion of all else. It is a difficult role and she plays it with a remarkable depth of understanding. The supporting cast, with 75 speaking roles, is one of the most ever assembled for a picture.

Edna May Oliver is the testy, but beloved Aunt Ben; Billie Burke is the scatter-brained Mrs. Parnell; Robert Young, Alan Marshall the ambitious Willie O'Shea, the husband of his imaginary love; in the company are Edmund Gwenn, Donald Crisp, Berton Churchill, Donald Meek, Neil Fitzgerald, Russell Hobbs, J. Farrell MacDonald and Montague Love, all of whom are excellent.

In addition there is a spectacular ensemble group of beautiful women for atmosphere.



The story describes the historical rise of Parnell, who was the only man ever to unite the 86 members of the Irish Party in a struggle for home Rule. His love of Katie O'Shea, a married woman, the scandal which ensued when her estranged husband, Willie O'Shea, divorced her, and the collapse of Parnell's political career are closely followed with all of their dramatic quickness.

"Parnell" stirred the audience at the Belle Theatre to a high pitch of enthusiastic approval and the opinion of this reviewer this picture will rank among the outstanding films of 1937.

Study Child Who Fears Reality

By Lisa Grenelle

Pals had not been too kind to Imogene in those first impressionable years, between five and ten. Her family had grown up, and Imogene had been sent to live with Uncle Robert and Aunt Hattie, well-meaning enough pair, but not the type that could make any child feel at home. Uncle Robert "believed", and Aunt Harriet was always distant and dignified. Imogene, a sensitive child, was afraid of both of them. They always appeared disapproving.

Then, too, the new school was rather appalling; much bigger than the school at home, and full of strange, new faces. It frightened Imogene. Her classmates teased her, I guess; laughed at her, perhaps persecuted her. Her girls, especially new girls like Imogene, are always persecuted.

World of Own

As a defense and a compensation against a strange, fearful and unfriendly world, Imogene built herself a world of her own. No one shared it with her, except a group of delightful imaginary folk, whom Imogene "ruled" with an iron scepter.

Most imaginative children create worlds of their own to which they can retire when the real adult world, to which they do not yet really belong, becomes too overwhelming, too confusing, too fearful or too tiresome. It is natural and normal and to be expected, as long as the child does not show indications of taking up a permanent residence there; as long as he does not, through retreat, wall himself in and lose all interest and curiosity about it.

Castle Disorder It

A well-adjusted child eventually discards his imaginary world for the real one. Slowly, year by year, he acquires more interests in the world and fewer fantasies. His growing need for friendship, responsibility and manual creation is better satisfied by the real world, and by 19 usually, his fancies play only a small part in his life. Without aid or guidance he has made the adjustment.

But if a child has been frightened by reality, as Imogene had been, he will not go back by himself. A hard-pressed child, a child who has long been ill, one who has had a severe emotional shock, a youngster who has been forced by circumstances to spend too much time alone, one who has been persecuted by other children, or who is too sensitive to "take it", does not find the change from unreality to reality easy.

WEST HILL TEAMS WIN TWO TITLES

Junior And Midget Series in Baseball Loop Decided

West Belleville baseball squad won two city play-proper championships yesterday, when the West Hill midget ballclub defeated their East Hill rivals 9-5, while in the junior series the West Belleville kids eked out a 6-5 win. Both games were the result of the sudden death nature and to the victors went the city championship.

In the junior group the West Hill kids came from behind to score two runs in the last inning and win 7-6. The winners scored four runs in the initial frame and led the parade until the ninth when the Easterners pushed a trio of counters across the plate to bring their total to six forcing the West Belleville boys to stage a last inning rally.

York, hurling for the victorious West Hill team, struck out eleven in seven innings while Fox, pitching for the losers, fanned the Easterners whiffed nine. Symons, Rouse, Barnum and Bowers p, Reid and Welsh 2b, Theobold and Dawrick swung the most potent bats for the East Hill nine.

The line-ups:

West Belleville—Symons lb, Rouse 2b, Hall c, York p, Young 3b, Barnum cf, Hay rf, Langford cf, Rutter rf, and Fitzgibbon. East Belleville—Goyer c, McCabe cf, Walker lb, Bowers p, Reid and Welsh 2b, Theobold lf, Morgan ss, Clarke rf and Dawrick lb.

Score by innings

East ..... 1 0 1 0 2 0 3—7 runs
West ..... 0 0 1 2 0 3 0—6 "

West Midgets Win

In the midget series the W. Belleville boys annexed another city baseball championship as they triumphed over the East Hill nine to the tune of 9-5. The winners scored four runs in the first inning and duplicated this feat in the next frame to take a commanding lead, that proved to be too much for the Easterners. Hay, pitching for the West Hill nine, kept the opposition down with ease every inning, except the first and fifth. Bunton, hurling for the losers, was touched for a run in the early stages, but settled away to pitch steady ball as the game progressed.

Woodley, Reeves and Hall hit well inning single drove in deciding run in front of the net and continually missed scoring chances, they have resulted in goals. Clarke in the Oshawa nets was little short of sensational at times and once brought the crowd to its feet when he got the ball, left his nets and dashed through the entire Rover squad to score.

Feelings began to creep into the game after the first period and the boys began to lay on the hickory. Hudson and Cook tangled near the end of the frame and got a ten minute rest. Near the end of the game, Lalonde threw his glove and exchanged a few right hooks with Gray and both were banished for the rest of the game. Hunter was the bad man of the Rovers, incurring no less than five penalties. Oshawa scred five times.

'Shiner' Boyle and Cook were easily the shining lights for the Oshawans, the latter ramming home six markers and Boyle five and three assists, collected two. While put up a sturdy defence that shattered many a Rover goal-getting foray.

Drake, Rover home, gave a fine exhibition of lacrosse and was one of the best men on the field, accounting for two markers and goals. "Honey" Tompkins was too steady cheese by the visiting defence to be of scoring value although his individual rushes caught the fancy of the crowd and his lone marker culminated a fine individual effort. Sims, Oshawa, turned in a fine exhibition and finally flashed the red light in the dying moments of the game.

Dit Clapper, famous Boston Bruin hockey star, scheduled to act as referee failed to put in an appearance so George Laughlin, Belleville, officiated.

The Stockdale Pipe Band entertained the crowd between halves.

The teams:

Oshawa: Goal, Clark; defence, De Gray, Armour; centre, Cook; homes, Barron, Oke; rover, Bennett; subs, Campbell, Bovin. Rovers, Belleville Rovers—Goal, defence, Battison, Burden; centre, Drake; homes, Lalonde, Clay rover, Hunter, Gray; subs, Tompkins, Val. Tache, Robinson, Anderson. Trepannier.

STONEYLONESOME THROWN FOR LOSS

Trent Cottons Win First Game For Mercantile Loop Title 9-6

Trenton, August 18.—(Special)—Crowds that attend the mushball matches at Bayshore Diamond regularly were given the type of ball they like last night, when Trent Cottons and Stoney Lonesome ballsmen faced off and a half rounds in a Mercantile league game. The contest was one of those close affairs with a story book finish. Cottons won 9 to 6 after riding behind for five straight innings the men from the mill came to the front by beating veteran Ernie Bowler's offerings for four safeties and a stroll that netted four runs and clinched the game. Up until the sixth the Lonely outfit outhit and outclassed their rivals but the Cottons stirring climax caused sports writers to change their copy and write the William as the pack to take the league silverware. A pair of home runs were recorded in the tilt.

In the first session L. Rindall clouted the ball out of bounds and touched all runs for the Lonesome nine. Holding the sphere into the air, left fielder Davis, sharp Cottons initial sacker covered the circuit. Bruce Burtt handled the winner's flinging duties and did a fine job. He gave up 10 hits and passed four, while Ernie Bowler performing on the visitor's mound allowed 12 hits and also walked four. Bowler whirled three for Monday, Morin, Davis, Reid, V. Burt, Drake, Richards, B. Burtt, Stoney Lonesome — J. Sharrard, E. Bowler, M. Kennedy, W. Vanlassell, H. Lott, L. Rindall, A. Dausch, W. Blight, J. Conkwright.

Thursday night will see both organizations competing in the second clash of the series.

Stick Wizardry Oshawa Squad Wins Boxla Game from Rovers

Game Played at Wellington Before a Capacity Crowd

SCORE IS 17-6

Paced by the slick wizardry and scoring ability of Cook and 'Shiner' Bovin, who scored eleven of their team's goals, the Oshawa Green Gaels had little difficulty in handing the Belleville Rovers a 17-6 setback in a scheduled Central Ontario Lacrosse League fixture last night which inaugurated a proposed series of games to be played in the two centres of Wellington and Ontario. Six hundred residents of the village and district got their initial taste of lacrosse in a game which carried all the thrills of stickhandling, argument and whatnot which go to make this game one of the most popular in the sports calendar.

Minus the services of two of their regulars, Gould and Cook Rovers put up a spirited game against the highly powered Oshawa squad and held the Motor City speedsters to a 3-1 count in the first period after ten minutes of fast clean lacrosse. A consistent offensive which was featured by the smoothly working passing plays of the Oshawans was productive of four counters in the second period with a single return from the Oshawa-coached crew. The visitors increased their lead in the third chukker ramming home one counter as Cook ran wild with the locals coming back with two. In the final game, the Rover defence split wide open and the Oshawans shot through for six markers to a brace of markers which flashed from the sticks of Slim Burtt and Drake.

Thirteen Penalties

Their offensive power minimized by no less than thirteen penalties, the Rovers encountered a stiff strength defensively against the fine passing plays of the Oshawa nine. The visitors clashed with enemy territory usually clicked and some fine work on the part of Fox kept the score down to its final figure.

On the other hand the Rovers' offensive efforts usually died around the crease. They were weak

Defeated by Pirates While Giants Win Over Boston

(By HILL BONI)

Professional people have a motto. It's one that is often abused, but behind it there is solid tradition, well-established precedent, inscribed in the canons of the theatre and, to a less-publicized extent, of the professional sports field.

"The show must go on."

Those words, hackneyed perhaps, joked about frequently, must have flitted through the mind of a slim young Californian as he strode a mile-wide crowd of some 30,000, he warmed up early yesterday afternoon at Yankee Stadium.

For Lefty Gomez, highbrow star of the Champion Yankees, had just been told that, in Rodeo, Calif., his mother had died. Less than a week ago Lefty had returned from a flying trip to her bedside, had left in the belief, that she was recovering.

His Wish to Pitch

It was his turn to pitch, in the opener of a doubleheader against the Washington Senators, a team come to town riding high on an eight-game winning streak. Manager Joe McCarthy, already hard-pressed for pitchers gladly would have excused Gomez from duty.

But Lefty trudged to the mound, and at the end of nine innings had gained a three-hit, 8-0 shutout, helped himself to two singles—sensational batting for the needy southpaw—and hung up his fourteenth victory of the year after failing in four earlier attempts to reach that mark.

Only once before had he bettered that performance, when he pitched a one-hit game against the Athletics on June 30. Once before too, he had equalled it, against the Tigers on May 4. But neither of those games was lasted in under the circumices, that surrounded him yesterday.

Cubs Unfortunate

After Lefty had subdued the Senators, the Yanks came back to win the nightcap on the strength of a five-run scoring spree in the eighth inning, as Joe Sewell's key second place safe by bolstering the White Sox into 11-7 submission. The championship race thus narrowed to 10 1-2 games.

Less fortunate were the Chicago Cubs. Held in check by Ed Brandt and Mace Brown of Boston, they saw their margin over the Giants shrink to three games as Carl Hubbell pitched a three-hitter that took the sting out of the Bees by a 4-1 count. Meanwhile, only two pitches behind on the Giant staff, thus gained his and the team's third victory over the Phils in Boston.

Philadelphia retained one and lost another stellar performance. Athletics, with Son Earl Mack, replacing Father Connie at the helm, pre-season favorites in the rumble sext by absorbing a 6-1 defeat from the Red Sox while the Tribe moved out for the first time since July 11 with an 11-1 thumping of the Dodgers, who replaced them.

In a night game at Cincinnati, the Cardinals shaded the Reds, 4-3 before 20,302 fans. The Clubs play-ed the last two innings in the dark. The victory kept the Cards in third place, half a game ahead of the Pittsburgh 1 raiders.

YANKEE DEFEATS RANGER BY 5 MINS.

Endeavour II Trails Whole Field by About Ten Minutes

Newport, R. I., Aug. 18.—(AP)—The Astor cup was today offered as a bone of contention for the big class J. sloops which recently brought a season's racing for the famous America's cup to a climax when Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger defeated Endeavour II, T. O. M. Sopwith's second British challenger.

Ranger yesterday met the second defeat of her career, trailing Gerard S. Lambert's Yankee by approximately five minutes at the end of a 21½ mile squadron run of the New York Yacht Club from New London, Conn., to Newport.

Yankee also showed her heels to Chandler's Howays Rainbow, 1934 defender, and the two invading Britishers. Endeavour first and second, in that order.

Also eligible to contest the Astor cup with the J. Sloops were numerous members of the smaller classes which are making the New York Yacht club cruise. The big boats, however, just concede the smaller ones with time allowances so interest centered in the performance of the former, rather than in who would get the trophy.

Spectators were particularly impressed by the old Endeavour now owned by Frederick Sigrist, Sopwith's partner, and sailed by Sherman Hoyt, an American. Hoyt was a member of Vanderbilt's afterguard, when he sailed Rainbow defender Shamrock V, last of the late Sir Thomas Lipton's challengers.

Yesterday Hoyt brought the old Endeavour across the line and topped in the new. Previously Hoyt won the distinction of administering Ranger's first defeat by sailing Yankee over to victory in a race preliminary to the International contest.

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP NEARLY TO PERFECTION FOR BOUT WITH FARR

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Aug 18.—(AP)—Joe Louis has reached the stage in training for his title defence against Tommy Farr a week from tomorrow, where he isn't allowed a hard workout every day. However, the champion doesn't have much time to sit around and worry about the bout—even if he were the type to do much worrying.

Joe has a daily program runs something like this: eating, when he's allowed to; playing catch with a medicine ball two or three times a day; pocket billiards and other games occasionally; plenty of time to contemplate his upcoming second.

Joe will listen for hours to his colored records which he brought out of them along and his own phonograph. Once in a while he sits in front of the radio and listens to the galloping cubes begin rattling out in the gymnasium he sometimes tries his hand.

Joe had a hard session yesterday, insofar as training sessions go, when Pal Silvers, Tiger Hariston and George Nicholson, bag punching, Sparring partners, were kept busy exercising before movie cameras So today was another day off.

Youngsters Picked

Long Branch, N. J., Aug. 18—(AP)—Tommy Farr, British Empire Heavyweight Champion, and his sparring partners will work overtime rather than experience in picking sparring partners for Tommy in preparing for next week's title bout with World-Champion Joe Louis.

"We find youngsters better to work with than the cagey veterans," Brondrikh explained. "The young fellas are faster, more aggressive and they make Tommy more lively every second. That's what we want. We think we have the best bet to defeat Louis is speed, and the boys we're practicing here are just the type we need."

Joe Wagner and Bashey Dean are the youngsters who are helping Farr sharpen his speed. Both are earning fame as knockout artists. Nonnie Mannina of Butley, N.J., who just joined the Farr troupe, and Abe Feldman are an experienced pair to balance them.

Farr is scheduled to train every day this week, although he will not box Friday. He had an unusually busy session yesterday, including seven rounds of boxing. He now weighs 209 pounds and says he won't work off more than one or two before the bout Aug. 26th.

BELL-SARGENTS DEFEAT CORBINS TO EVEN SERIES

Tharen Sager Hurls Steady Ball to Win by 3-2 Count

CORBINS OUTHIT

Behind the steady hurling of Tharen Sager the Belleville-Sargents turned the tables on the Corbin Locks and made it "one each" in their sax-off series to determine the team that will represent Belleville in the intermediate O.A.S.A. play-downs as the Bell-Sargents surprised the local softball populace with a well-earned 3-2 victory over Corbins at Coleman Flats last evening.

The Sargents bagged two runs on a walk, error and timely hit in the initial frame and were never headed as Sager scattered six Corbins hits well and was never in danger after the second frame, Corbins scoring one in the initial and their remaining tally in the second stanza. Con Harris assumed the mound for Corbins and although he limited the Sargents to seven safeties, his team mates could not give him the much-needed hits in the clutches.

The game was marked with splendid pitching and more spectacular fielding as the teams put on a thunderdamn fine support. A fast double play in the fourth cleared the bases fully populated and none away, saved the Corbins from a much worse trouncing. Otherwise the game was not void of excitement as Ernest Hanna drove out in the ninth after St. Denis, Corbin centre-fielder allegedly charged Cole, first baseman, with a fly ball was ruled for a ten yard toss for his efforts. Players being banished after the dust of battle had settled.

Ether Hits Homer

A walk, error and Hughes' hit gave the Sargents two in the first while Jimmie Barriage tripled and scored on an outfield out in the third to conclude the victors' scoring. Although the Locksmiths filled the bases in the sixth a fast, double play of Cook to Wisner to Hughes abruptly stopped that rally. Ether's home run gave Corbins a tally in the first, while Hanna and Whalen nit to score their only other run in the third.

Tommy Hughes with two hits in three tires, Barriage with a triple and Ether Hughes with a long brace of safeties led the Bell-Sargents while Ether had a circuit blow and single, Whalen a double and single, Hanna a triple and Rigby a one base blow to compute the hits garnered by Corbins with Gray hitting a single for the winners. Harris struck out nine and walked three, while Sager whiffed five, but failed to land a single free passage and the Bellevillesmiths went on to play errorless ball behind winning pitching. The next two games of a three in five series will be played at Coleman Flats on Thursday and Saturday. The lineups:

Bell-Sargents—Barriage 3b; Lupenette lf; Kiser and Phelps cf; Cole and Robinson rf; Hughes ss; Hughes 2b; Sager, Isall 2b; Gray c and Sager p. Corbin Locks—St. Denis and Bawden cf; Henn 3b; Ehler 3b; Reid 1b; Cook as; Rigby if; Hanna if; Whalen c and Harris p.

CALLING 'EM

While pointing out the various Provincial and Dominion athletic and sporting honors won by Belleville during the past year in an effort to vindicate our views regarding sports not being in the doldrums yesterday, we purposely left out one phase of the question. However, in the recent date the sponsoring of sporting events in Belleville has been left entirely in the hands of a willing few. The general public does not seem interested in the sponsorship of sports in general, as a matter of fact they have come to the stage whereby they sit back and wait until the cream of the play is available for play-off tilting to recognize the fact that it is during regular league play be it football, baseball, softball or hockey, that the heavy expense favor the club executives. If the general public would realize the heavy expense that confronts the sponsors of sport throughout the regular season and assist in the meeting of this burden with occasional paid attendance the sport fans of Belleville would soon be afforded even better sports entertainment than ever before. A little co-operation on the part of the paying public will assure a banner football season we feel assured . . . .

This evening "Pelgi" Woodley's Kiwanis kids open their first run in the O.B.A.A. play-downs, meeting for the Peterboro Rotary team in the Lift Lock City. Skipper Woodley has selected Ernie Neely shortstop of the Foxboro Club away back last June, while Stan Hall second baseman centrefielder of the K's has returned to the playing field after a long layoff and tonight in Peterboro, "Defensively the Kiwanis are the class of the first junior club in Ontario, what remains to be seen, however, is how the kids will hit up against good junior pitching, as we understand Charlie Cox, Peterboro hurler was highly rated in the Peterboro league." Coach Woodley before the kids left as noon, Either Joe Kelley or "Lefty" Weese will get today's pitching assignment, with Bert Noakes as relief hurler. If the Peterboro kids are vulnerable to batting practice, the Kiwanis team has no less than four portsiders. The second game of the series will be played at the Fair grounds Saturday afternoon and is the first O.A.A. game ever to be seen locally this season.

It's Peterboro versus Belleville all week as the Ontario baseball series pits second Peterboro junior tilt-ists with the first game of the series being played in the Lift Lock City Thursday evening and the second game of the series slated for Belleville offs slated for the Coleman Flats on Friday evening. The third game Peterboro three tired and provincial moundsmen in Harold Dracup, Jim Bullock and Ken Wright. Bullock of the game will be forwarded to the Peterboro Rotary team by courtesy of Bill Todd, President of the local Softball Association.

Jerry Taylor, who pitches baseball for the East Belleville playgrounds squad, had the distinction of striking out 23 batters in the final game when the East Hill nine won the city baseball playground championship recently. Taylor possesses plenty of speed and has good control, a fact hard to overcome by any minor baseball opposition. Yes, Belleville has still produced outstanding pitchers, as the Kiwanis Juniors have proven all season.

The members of the Belleville Kinsmen's Club to visit the International Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, returned home yesterday high in praises of the well-run and entertainment afforded them during their stay in Akron Ohio city. The Soap Box Derby as staged by the Akron sponsors is one of the greatest spectacles we ever had the privilege of witnessing and we brought home many new ideas for our race next year. Although our Belleville entry, George Wilson did not win any of the major prizes we are still proud of him and he came in for much comment for his efforts" stated Kinsmen "Kid Lee" Colling and Griff Lloyd today. The final contingent belleville Kinsmen left this last, winner of the International event, was "Buddy" in the final heat with Ballard the champ, however, After the race the Sean Akwan and found about a yard of stringy cloth wound around the axle near the wheel. They say, Kinsmen Don Rose and Jim Lafferty were also in the party, that visited the Great Lakes Exposition at Cleveland on their return trip.

Chuck Barnecutt, hitting Bellegrenia second baseman "one each" in the play-downs when they stopped the slugging Kiwanis by their own verbal tracks to win 3-2 last evening, Ernie Neely, Kiwanis lefty shortstop of the Foxboro Club away back last June, while Stan Hall second baseman centrefielder of the K's has returned to the playing field after a long layoff and tonight in Peterboro, "Defensively the Kiwanis are the class of the first junior club in Ontario, what remains to be seen, however, is how the kids will hit up against good junior pitching, as we understand Charlie Cox, Peterboro hurler was highly rated in the Peterboro league." HAVE CHANCE TO SHATTER RECORD

Newark Bears Now in Front in Loop by 24 1-2 Games

By The Associated Press

There are many who doubt their claim to greatness yet the Newark Bears of today may shatter the records of super-teams of the past before the current International League season is over.

The greatest margin an International League pennant-winning team ever held was the 20 games the great Baltimore Orioles of 1921 had over Rochester. That was the third year of Jack Dunn's famous team, which won seven straight pennants through 1919 to 1925.

The largest margin made in "big-league" baseball was rung up by the St. Paul Saints of the American Association in 1920. The Saints beat a good Louisville club by 28½ games. The Pittsburgh Pirates won the National League hunting with a 27½ game lead in 1903.

Yet, though the skeptics say they are just a good team in an unusually weak league, the Bears of today are leading Sid's gang in front of the Montreal Royals and still have 30 games to go which is on track for Paul's mark.

The Bears lost a good opportunity to further their record-smashing chances last night when they dropped the second game of a double header, 7-1, after winning the opener, 10-1.

Though they were outhit 13-11 in the first game, the Bruins concentrated their attack in the fourth and fifth frames, when they scored nine runs, to clinch the game.

The Royals weren't to be denied in the second fray, however, as they pounded out 16 safeties for twelve hits, half of them for extra bases. Cris Carpenter, ex-Phillie, held the Bears to nine hits.

In the only other game of the night, the Baltimore-Buffalo and Syracuse-Toronto contests being postponed because of wet grounds the Jersey City Giants scored a 3-2 victory over Rochester. Phil Weintraub blasted a homer over the right-centre field wall at the 354-foot mark to provide Giants with their winning margin and give Mike Ryba on the pitching decision over Nubs Kleinke.

4 BIG Days and Nights!

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Jane, slender and pale in the white evening gown, read with increasing horror the stories in the big hall while Tony, perfect in his dinner clothes, mixed cocktails.

"I can't go through them!" she said.

"They'll calm down," he said, with a wry little smile. "I'm pulling a few strings." And he bent over the tray bright with bottles and glasses. "Don't worry, Tony'll soon lay off, indeed he will. I'll just have her with a slight frown—'somebody does turn up asking for you—and tipsie. We'll have to risk that."

There was a lot she would have to risk, Jane was beginning to think. And she stared up at the Kaye portraits on the long panelled wall.

The silver shaker, chucked with ice as Tony shook it. There was an underlying tenseness in his manner. He turned suddenly to Jane. Jane over—her straight young body in flowing lines of white topped by the petalled gold of curls.

"Our little conspiracy is working already," he said, briskly. "Lorna's been telephoning all afternoon. I talked to her myself an hour ago." He walked to the window and back. "She's coming over after dinner with some of her Toledo friends."

CHAPTER VI.

EVENING AT HOME

So Lorna was after Tony already! Jane stood very still, her head held lifted to meet Tony's grey eyes. Devils in them that only the thought of Lorna Kaye could put there! Tony conspiracy, as he called it, wasn't going to be so easy.

She took the cocktail he offered, glancing at his dark, reckless face, arrogance riding his black brows, his pointed humored lines along the slant of his nose, his wilful chin. Changing him out of his dinner clothes.

The beautiful white gown she wore, that he had bought for her, blended her into the pattern of his world of music. Obscure Jane Carey of Pond du Lac only a few days ago, who had danced through one summer. Now as perfectly groomed as he—gold curls sculptured to her head, wide set eyes of early spring hyacinth, quickly very blue. And as beating to her shoulders meant to breast high waves. Yet really nothing but a little experimenting and rapidly to gather all the beauty, the thrills of life.

"Do you regret our arrangement?" Tony asked harshly.

"No," Jane answered, her defiance. Not even Lorna could stop her from being Tony's partner—for six months. None of the spectacular publicity she had dawn upon herself could spoil this chance she meant to take at any cost.

"I'm not sure I'm proud of myself," Tony said slowly. "What's Jane's name for modern experiment," and he lifted his glass. The great hall of Kaywood seemed to blend with voices from portraits on the panelled walls.

They dined on the terrace, a disc of moon pale over ivy and stone. The small round table was gay with pink candle shades and silver on ice. Pink roses and pink nasturtia in a silver bowl, glasses light as soap bubbles.

Jane looked across at Tony. The storms had passed from him. His world was his again. He gay and beautiful always when she was with him. Unreasoning happiness filled her heart. She wasn't think of Lorna—not now.

Tony leaned forward her. "You're an exquisite person." His voice caught her in its vibrancy. "You haven't forgotten your new name, have you? Alice—Still in Wonderland?"

"Very much so." Jane's left hand fluttered nervously over the lace on the table. The ring Tony had slipped on her finger glimmered in the candle light. Why couldn't it be true? A ring like this could hurt when it meant only hell to another girl—to Lorna!

Flesh-colored medicine that tasted of gardenia, iced consomme. Broiled salmon flecked with herbs. And Tony's laughter, gay voice that rang on about nothing and everything.

"Mercaut, 1911," Matthew murmured in her ear, and bent to pour more chilled wine into her glass.

"My father had quite a decent cellar." Tony sounded the safe tone of commonplace. "I can give you some rare treats in vintage." And again it was as if he were waiting for her to respond—certain in a sip of wine that was good—something of the past he had obliterated with her.

"I'm afraid I don't know—" Jane began and checked herself. She had been about to admit a consciousness of ignorance in the graceful practice of living she had studied so avidly through the books and magazines that had drifted to the little garage in Pond du Lac.

Tony's charming smile interpreted her hesitation. "Forget that you've been forgotten, little Jane," he said, and lifted his glass.

"I feel I've found." Jane's lips were enchanting when they curled quickly.

Baby broilers nesting in parsley with tiny gold potatoes, and garden beans, brightly green and thin.

"Chamberlin, 1904." Matthew, whose privilege it was to serve this delicacy, to the head of the Kaye house and his bride, poured the ruby red burgundy.

"Thank you." Jane murmured. Something her father had once said to her came back as she sipped: "Each moment in life is a link in a living symphony." And Tom Carey had said, "What you are is the motif to be developed from what you make of yourself."

"What am I—" Jane said quickly, and stopped.

"Very sweet, my dear." And Tony began to talk of interesting places he knew, of people and things he liked: polo, tennis, flying.

Jane listened, her lovely lips parted, her eyes brightly on his. Places she had dreamed of. Things she grasped now that he spoke of casually. The wonder of it! The wonder of her being here, no matter how.

Crisp hearts of lettuce were followed by strawberry ice. Tony's lean brown fingers played with the stem of his wine glass, which Matthew filled more than once.

"Black coffee by egg-shelled cups. The moon moved along the lawn. Jane thought, "I haven't said anything all dinner and he's used to being amused."

"Let's stroll down to the lake, he finally suggested. Restless.

The small lake shone like a silver bowl through the pattern of ivy leaves. Within a half circle of young firs, a marble bench, cool under star shine, rested. Jane sloped to the sheen of water.

"It's all so beautiful." Jane stood poised in her white and gold with a feeling of perfection brimming over until she could hardly bear either the reality or the intensity of it.

Tony stepped closer. "What are you thinking of?" His voice was not quite steady.

"Nothing—everything." Jane started to tell the lake and the moon, faintly embroidered with lilies and stars.

"Come now, you're thinking of wanting—what?" Tony was unfamiliar, strained.

Jane felt him tall and dark over her, looking down. A chain of tiny night sounds flowered with scents drew around them. She tried to laugh, breaking the chain that were too much enchainment.

"You—aren't." Tony said.

The sudden rush of his hunger for her gold, her eyes, the parted line of her lips had grown vicious hate in the night. There were voices singing in her head that answered. They seemed so far away here from everything except scents, water lilies and starlight.

"You are so sweet," Tony said, and his lips went hard, his eyes in shadow. His hand passed over her shoulder where the line of the white gown seemed so lightly clasped.

His tough tilled Jane's head upward.

Then the laughter broke from the house, capering over the slope of lawns. Laughter and voices, as if the lights from distant windows were shaking down on them.

Tony's muttered exclamation broke them apart. Abruptly he turned to light a cigarette. "There they are!" he said. The music there was Lorna, whom he had forgotten for a second. He touched the wing of his tie. "We'd better be getting back." His voice sounded strained.

The blood stung in Jane's cheeks. Another moment and she would have dampened herself irrevocably, accepting the June madness, the brief passion of a man in love with another girl.

"Tony, where are you? TO-NY." Lorna's call clear, the peremptory sweetness of a call.

"Coming—we are," Tony called back. His glance summoned Jane to move beside him to the direction of the laughter and the voices spilling through the quiet night air.

Lorna hadn't waited. She came running across the lawn, her long red dress fluttering, her small face a splash of white and scarlet as she drew near.

A whirlwind of red and white, she threw herself upon Tony, kissing at Jane, "You don't mind if I kiss his bridegroom? How could you play such a trick on us, Tony darling! All those horrible newspaper items! Tony had told me yesterday what you were up to. Where were you married? All in one breath.

Tony laughed, glancing at Jane over the brilliant red casque of Lorna's hair. "We're not telling. Congratulate me, and let it go at that."

Lorna pouted, thrusting her arm under his with a gay, intimate gesture. "I'm not sure that I want to congratulate you," she said, and her green eyes measured Jane. "I'm frightfully jealous you know," she confessed with disarming frankness. "Imagine your being the mystery girl all the scandals are full of. And Tony introducing you yester-day as Miss—Alice In Wonderland. How could you, Tonyy?"

"I hope to stay in Wonderland," Jane said quietly. But her heart beat faster as she looked back at this girl who had every reason to hate her as an intruder.

Lorna and I had better be great friends," Lorna chattered, her arm still linked in Tony's, as they started back for the house. "You'll have to see a lot of me, because now that Tony is—Sharpened, I may decide to have an affair with him."

"What an unscrupulous wench you are, Lorn!" Tony sounded amused.

"You should have thought of that before. My days of affairs are over. Aren't they, dear?" His grey eyes played over Jane, moving tall and white.

"I hope so." Jane tried to say lightly. But this was only the beginning of torture for her unless she could harden her heart.

Through open windows of one of the salons, the radio quickened the night with dance rhythms. They hadn't waited for their host or hostess. Couriers glowed now upon the terrace, where Jane, her nerves tightening, saw pale blobs of color drifting about.

"Everyone's dying to meet you," Lorna was saying. "We're all thrilled, of course."

Tony broke from her persistent hold as, sighting them, the group on the terrace streamed forward.

Lorna's high, clear voice was like a spotlight focussed on Jane. "Here she is! Now the fun begins! Tony," he said, as if she were exhibiting an oddity.

There was a light and airy quality to these people who seemed to take any admiration for granted. Men in flannels, in dinner coats, sun-lanned girls in summery prints looked her over, shook her hand and turned to Tony with their neither cordial nor rude.

A long table was set with sandwiches, bottles, pales of ice. "How can I ever get on with them!" Jane thought, and her lovely smile grew a little mechanical as she thanked someone for offering her a drink, and agreed with another that Kayestone was quite a place. No one referred to the fact that they have considered her peculiar, malady—not knowing who she was.

A white-haired woman in pink whispered in Tony's ear. Through the open French doors Jane peered into the salon the radio carried nostalgic notes of a tango.

Lorna's red head seemed to burn a path to Tony. The woman in pink disappeared. Tony set down his glass. Followed Lorna.

Jane watched them go. Then she looked through the mirrors and tapestried chairs.

The willowy lady in pink drifted up with a gentle rummaging look. "I don't think you caught my name," she said. "It's Elsie Forrest. I've been Tony for ages—as long as Lorna has."

Her thin pink face drew nearer. "Lorna's had her share of the honey right out of your moon if she can." With a friendly little nod, she drifted away.

They all seemed to take honeymoons very casually, Jane thought, with a gathering of anger. She shouldn't stand here like an only alder, watching Tony and Lorna dance, but they fascinated her. Lorna's head bent over Tony's flame that was Lorna. The slow, Parisian fashion of cadenced feet through them as they stitched a pattern of grace around the room.

Jane was conscious of eyes smoothly taking her in—this strange, unclassified girl, whom bored, self-willed Tony had summoned, married. She must seem a total blank in her paralyzed silences. She was afraid to talk lest she betray something, her slip of her tongue could easily betray her as a girl whose memory was as intact as theirs.

Suddenly Lorna, glancing over her shoulder at the doorway, past Jane's slim whiteness, broke from Tony, darting back across the room.

"There have you been, Henri? . . . You haven't met Tony's wife yet." Imperiously she beckoned to the newcomer, with the last bow.

"Comte la Paule—Mrs. Anthony Kaye." Her gesture turned Jane around. Lorna's voice seemed to come from far away. Henri's good looks is beautiful married, whom. He'll want to paint your portrait, I warn you. And if he does, he'll make love to you."

The man who stood faintly smiling down at Jane was the blond, amber stranger with whom she had collided on Park Avenue her first afternoon, in New York. The man who had seen her in the dull blacks of Jane Carey, staring at all the exciting life that was passing her by.

CHAPTER VII.

COUNT HENRI LA PAULE

Jane stood motionless as the Comte la Paule's glance flashed upon her profile. Once more the boisself photographed by the oddly light eyes of the stranger on Park Avenue who had spoken to her when she was still Jane Carey, wearing the only things the only girl had to offer.

Under the Lorna-lit terraces of Kayestone, backed by the great house of stone and ivy, seemed to surrender her, tall and fair in her white gown—the new mistress of Kayestone—Tony Kaye's engagement folly. The girl no one knew anything about.

But la Paule's clipped foreign bow, there was no suggestion of recognition. He merely glanced back to Jane's checks. She was glad that Lorna Rowlands high, light chatter while Tony had her the essential moment to recover poise.

"I don't think Tony will let you paint her portrait," Lorna was saying on, her vivid red head tilted. "He's planning to be a jealous husband, aren't you, Tony?" And the scarlet lips challenged both men. Bringing Jane the thought had been the snap of her whip, the punishment Tony deserved. It was a rotten, cheap thing to do, to flaunt her with this hasty romantic marriage. Tony's dark brows drew down in provoking laugh. When, with a sly look, Lorna turned back to the house, he stalked after her into the salon of damask and tapestries through which Jane had passed. In the loose melancholy of a "radio Hymn, they danced, Tony's head stormy dark over Lorna's poppy red.

Jane watched them. With a start she realized that la Paule stood close to her, looking out of the open window, his gaze insistent as if he were waiting, expecting her to break the silence.

"Shall we dance, Madame?" he murmured with his bow.

"D'you mind if I don't? I'm a little tired." Her smile was a faint coral apology. Eternities ago the girl who had been Jane Carey of Pond du Lac, Tony's wife, would have second, looked up to his handsome, unclassified face, and asked for life in the slurred blue of her eyes, their expectant candor, they met his once again.

"You remind me of Spring, Madame," he said. "And Spring has no conscious memories. Only the longing to come moves in 'Things of Spring'."

His hands barely gestured from the narrow straightness of his body. They were finely bred, sensitive hands.

"The future is all that counts, isn't it?" Jane's voice was indifferent as she had meant to sound. But was this his way of telling her that he had seen her, fresh and bright in the sunlight? Her face grew small and sick as she looked toward the room where Lorna danced with Tony. Lorna who wanted Tony now that he was an experiment that was working.

Other couples dipped on to the polished floor, all of them casual and intimate.

"The future, chere petite Madame, is only more pasts we make for ourselves." La Paule was saying and there was a melancholy in his voice that turned Jane impulsively back to him. Weariness printed charm on his narrow blond face. "Life is more complicated than you think," he went on in his exquisite English. "I shall paint your portrait—before you have learned and suffered too much. La vie a des griffes," he added. "Claws, my dear—yes, life has claws."

"But I don't want—" Jane began and stopped short. She should be afraid of this man, and she wasn't. She had almost blurted out the measure of her ignorance of that life he knew so well.

"I shall paint you waiting everything." His voice was low.

Jane glanced at him quickly. One moment she was sure he hadn't recognized her, the next, somehow her nerves rang danger signals.

"My husband will give me everything." She tried him out. "I seem to have been very fortunate," she added. It was her first direct reference to the manner in which Tony had found her.

La Paule's shrug and smile were disarming. His answering glance was slightly and obviously. "Was it not Monsieur Kaye who was fortunate?"

Jane looked away, suddenly conscious that in the drift behind her on the terrace, Lorna and Tony were like whispers, brushed over them both. Friends of Tony's, people who had known him before he had seen her, fresh and bright in the sunlight? Her heart brief bright head against Jane's, slip lazy as the drone of distant bees. If she and Tony hadn't been interrupted by the lake only an hour ago, how much might have been changed!

For a brief, thirsty, "perhaps, Madame?" La Paule's tone was suddenly formal.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Aug. 18 (AP)— Stock market prices suffered mild erosion after an uneven rally today.

Demand for steels, coppers and specialties helped inject energy into the list during the middle of the session, but failure of other groups to respond seemingly discouraged traders and equities were allowed to drift irregularly lower.

Transactions at the rate of about 600,000 shares.

Preston sold down in volume to 1.2T and recovered part of the loss while other issues off 1 to 10 cents or more at the close included Pickle Crow, Teck Hughes, Central Patricia, Premier, Powell-Rouyn, Northern Canada and Oro Plata.

Consolidated Smelting recovered 1 1-2 points and minor reductions were added by Nickel and Hudson Bay, Waite Amulet, Pend Oreille and Reeves-MacDonald added 5 to 10 cents and Sherritt was steady. Coast Copper closed down about 50 cents.

Foods, utilities, steels and banks posted more gains than losses.

TORONTO STOCKS
Toronto, Aug. 18 (CP)—The gold share market turned ragged today under spotty selling but the industrials, the base metals and the western oils maintained an upward trend. Volume, however, bulked in the yellow metal issues with substantial selling in the juniors. Consolidated Chibougamau was an outstanding loser with a drop to 97 cents against its closing price of 92 on Tuesday. The close was narrowly above the day's low. A report that the mine had closed down operations inspired the panicky selling.

MARKET COMMENT

Nervousness over the situation in the Far East was perceptible in yesterday's stock market, when the majority of international stocks, particularly International Nickel and Brazilian Traction, opened weak. London is viewing the situation in China with some alarm, and investors in that centre have been important sellers of securities.

A good setback in the local market as a result of another war scare will present numerous opportunities for traders and investors to acquire equities at attractive levels. In view of the promising business outlook, investors need have little fear when they acquire the better grade stocks on a satisfactory yield basis.

In the United States, supported by the very encouraging business situation, stock prices have continued their slow advance in the face of increasing legislative uncertainties. All the important trade indexes are showing impressive gains over the levels of a year ago, and indications are that the rate of improvement will be accelerated upon entrance into the autumn season. But in the meantime, Congress has wasted itself into such a position that its actions prior to adjournment are unpredictable, and unexpected developments may well be temporarily reflected in the price movements. Elsewhere, however, the situation is such as would warrant utilization of any price dips that might result from legislative surprises for the purpose of acquisitions of favorably situated equities.

Production of radio receiving sets in Canada during the first quarter of 1937 numbered 140,434 valued at $1,418,438 at factory selling prices, an increase of 41 per cent in number and 8 per cent in value over the corresponding period of last year. This would appear to explain the demand and firmness for such stocks as Rogers-Majestic of late.

Canada's domestic exports increased $80,000,000 in the first six months of 1937 compared with the corresponding period of 1936. The total was $577,819,000 compared with $419,808,491. Trade figures are an excellent barometer of the business trend.

Two securities that are well regarded by both investors and traders are Canada Northern and Shawinigan Water and Power. In both instances, earnings are mounting steadily and in the case of the former, it is the general consensus that the directors will declare another 50-cent dividend payment at the next meeting. The total disbursements for the year to $1.00 a share. Current earnings amply cover such a dividend. In the case of Shawinigan, the Street is firmly of the opinion that an increase in the dividend rate to $1.60 a share will be put into effect before the end of the current year, as earnings are running at better than $1.60 a share. The purchase of these two securities is being recommended by investment quarters.

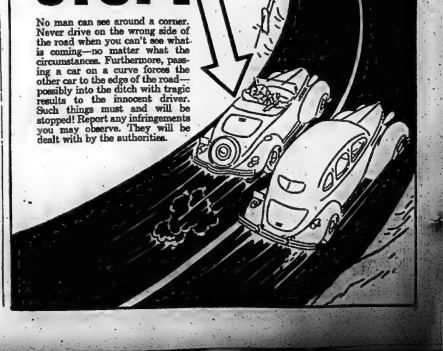
NOTED BOYS' BAND TO PLAY HERE

Ottawa Band Will Entertain on First Day of Fair

Not only will the Belleville Fair which is fast gaining a reputation as being one of the outstanding fall attractions in the province, have on display one of the finest exhibits of farm and dairy produce, livestock and horses but it will also provide for its thousands of patrons one of the finest entertainments ever seen in this part of Canada. While it has always been the aim of the directors to provide for the public the finest exhibition of things agricultural procurable this year, they are leaving no stones unturned in catering to the artistic and amusement tastes of the people.

Perhaps one of the outstanding musical treats ever provided for a Belleville audience will be in evidence on Wednesday, Sept. 1st, the opening day of the Fair. For on this day the Ottawa Boys' Band, one of the most prominent youths' musical aggregations in Canada will stop enroute to the band competitions at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, and give a concert that should long be remembered by music lovers of the city and district.



Composed of boys residing in Ottawa and district, the band has earned a reputation of being one of the best balanced organizations of its kind in Canada. Playing over a prominent network of Canadian radio stations during the past few months the band has already earned for itself an enviable name in musical circles.

On Sept. 1st, this famous band will be met by Lieut. Fred Johnson and members of the Belleville Municipal Band and be escorted from the corner of Victoria Avenue and Front Street to the Fair Grounds where they will play a varied program in the bandstand. Immediately following the concert the Ottawa Band will leave for Toronto and the Exhibition where on Thursday they will compete with other bands for Dominion honors.

Seventy-five instruments played by youthful artists nearly all of whom are now soloists in their own right will blend and harmonize in a musical picture woven together through the magical medium of their conductor's baton. Versatile to the nth degree, the band will offer selections and excerpts from the masters in a manner worthy of the outstanding bands of the continent. It will be a musical feat that lovers of melody of the city and district cannot afford to miss.

FIFTEEN TOADS STRUNG ON WIRE

Evidence of the work, it is believed of sadistically minded youths, fifteen large toads strung through the middle on a heavy length of wire were found hanging from a telephone pole at the lower end of the city this morning. No reason for the killing of the creatures by this novel means was apparent.

No man can see around a corner. Never drive on the wrong side of the road when you can't see what is coming—no matter what the circumstances. Furthermore, passing a car on a curve forces the other car to the edge of the road—possibly into the ditch with tragic results to the innocent driver. Such things must and will be stopped! Report any infringements you may observe. They will be dealt with by the authorities.

Uncle Joe's Opportunity

By Ada Burton Stevens

MacClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU Service.

"Well—good-by, Clara."

"Good by, Uncle Joe. There—Bernice stop that crying! Uncle Joe will come back to see you, Miss Junior. Uncle Joe's been real good to help me with the children so much. Now you are going to live with that rich Colonel, you'll forget how to mind things, I expect."

Clara Whelpley, with a strange pull at the heart under her blue morning frock, watched Uncle Joe tremulously fumble with his cab pulling it well over his snow-white head. She talked away to hide her feelings, for instead of the satisfaction she had found she was going to miss her husband's uncle, who had shared their first struggling years.

It wouldn't do for him to realize it just as he had this grand opportunity to companion an old army friend, lonely in his old age. He was going to live with Colonel Weil and she was glad.

"Keep your throat covered up. You don't want to celebrate with a cough the first thing. You must save up and come to see us—often."

She choked over the words, divided by conflicting emotions—joy at the thought of the little apartment to herself, and sorrow at the loss of one of its permanent fixtures—Uncle Joe Whelpley.

Clara kept up the play that this was to be only a visit, but in her heart she knew he would never come back. Benton was a long way from Scottsboro, and Uncle Joe never saved a cent. After he had gone, she tiptoed around the rooms, planning new uses for them. The apartment was so tiny! But if she put both children in Uncle Joe's room she could get in her own bedroom. Without Uncle Joe's clutter in the kitchen, that room would seem twice its size. He had been always under her feet, she thought.

At noon the clatter of the elevator sounded louder than usual, and Clara Whelpley burst into the room with a "Hello, family!" that nearly raised the roof. He had said good-by to his uncle in the morning. Such a good opportunity for him—companionship with Colonel Weil. And Uncle Joe could be a lively companion. He was always the life of a party and remembered all the anniversaries.

"Hello, Clara!" He caught his capable little wife with a big kiss and kneaded her bobbed and golden hair with his big hands. "Guess what—they got my name this morning, and I slopped in and made a first payment on the Garden Green cottage we were looking at the other day. Lots of room for the children to grow, and for Uncle Joe's tools!—golly!—he won't need that now."

Tom's smiling face fell, but he recovered himself at once. He sat down to the steaming meat pie. "Yes, dear, you've got the place all to yourself at last. But I bet he'll be as homesick as the dickens for a while."

"Oh, Tom!" Clara found the news overwhelming on top of a hard morning. Between laughter and tears, she decided to weep. "I am glad, honey, but—but—I don't think we'd miss him so much, and it is all Bernice has talked about all the morning," she sobbed.

"And now the new house, and everything—oh—"

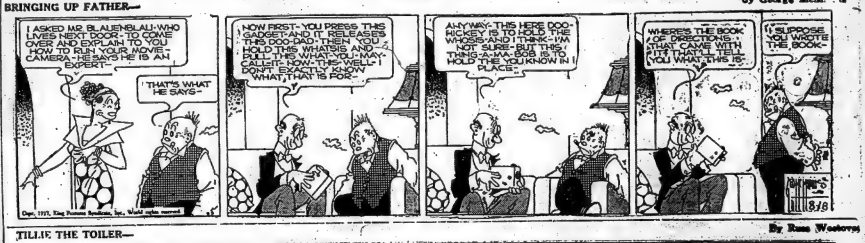
She sat under in his high chair with a vigor which puckered his baby lips. But Junior had grit. He didn't cry. Only his brown eyes rolled to her blue ones, and he seemed to know that she didn't mean it at all.

"Wait. I'll be liggered!" Tom watched her changing moods with surprise and chagrin. "You wanted to be alone—"

"Ahem."

Neither of them had heard the clatter of the elevator, but there on the doorsill stood a white-haired man, cap in hand, a sheepish smile on his kind, ruddy face. The young people turned. There, arm enough stood Uncle Joe—bag and baggage, watching them a little restlessly.

"I guess you did want to be alone," he apologized. "I guess your rather, but seeabuow 3 just couldn't leave—not right now. I got to thinking at the station about Junior's elephant. I didn't have time to mend it yesterday, packing up, so I sent along a telegram to the colonel, saying I was delayed. Maybe I can get a cot into that back hall closet, smdwise, and keep my stuff under the bed so I won't be any more in the way than I can help."



"Uncle Joe!" Clara's arms were around his neck. "Did I ever say you were in the way, dear Uncle Joe? I've been wishing and wishing you'd come back ever since you stepped out of this house—I did truly. We simply can't get on without you. Bernice has been under my feet all morning—"

A knowing smile ran around Uncle Joe's bearded lips as he caught Bernice, who was struggling in her chair, and heard all about the good luck that had come to Tom that day.

"Well," he commented, taking the chair at the table which was pushed eagerly forward, "all a man wants in this world is an opportunity to be useful. I guess I'll stay. Maybe you need one more than the colonel does, anyway."

"You bet!" Tom agreed heartily, and passed a plate of the steaming pie across the table. "Don't talk about going away again—ever."

AGED NAPANEE WOMAN ATTACKED AND ROBBED

Woman Alone in House Asleep as Thieves Enter And Two Dollars Stolen

79-Year-Old Mrs. Emily Leary Receives Throat Wound

WEAK FROM SHOCK

Slowly Makes Way to a Neighbor's and Gives Alarm

Napanee, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Two young men were sought by police today after Mrs. Emily Leary, 79-year-old old-age pensioner, had been attacked and robbed in her cottage near here. Among the aged woman's injuries was a 1¼-inch knife wound that legally missed the jugular vein.

The attack occurred last night as Mrs. Leary, alone in the house, was sleeping. The men forced their way in through the front door and threatened to shoot the woman if she did not hand over her money. They escaped with the contents of a small-change purse that contained $2.

Beaten About Head and Body

Before leaving, the thugs beat the woman about the head and body and cut her neck. A wound behind the left ear received attention by the police. Mrs. Leary was unable to give a coherent account of the attack and the police, through investigation, showed a stiletto kept in the house had been taken. It was not known whether it had been used in the assault.

Neighbor Finds Aged Victim

Weakened by loss of blood and suffering from shock, Mrs. Leary was unable to relate an immediate alarm after the thieves left her. More than half-an-hour after the attack, she made her way to her nearest neighbor, 150 yards on Palace Road.

Mrs. Leary, widow of Brook Leary, a United States civil war veteran, was taken back to her home today where her condition was reported as improved.

International Law As Self-Evident

(By Frank Flaherty)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Aug. 19.—(CP)—That international law should be made just as self-evident as the law relating to the rights of ownership, is the opinion of Norman Birkett, K.C., of London, England, who addressed the Canadian Bar Association at its annual meeting here.

Mr. Birkett was acted for Mrs. Wallis Simpson in the divorce action which preceded her marriage to the former King Edward VIII before the lawyers must adapt themselves to modern conditions. He cited the recent changes in English Divorce as an illustration of the adaptation which was proceeding in many fields of jurisprudence.

Elevate International Law

Murder was a crime and was recognized immediately as such wherever it happened, he said. It was the task of lawyers to elevate international law to the same high level of recognition so that where ever war occurred it would be immediately recognized as a crime.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

A future will ripple! We depend upon the sun for light and heat. But that close and friendly star of ours is changed hardly at all since the earth became an entity. The earth, however, has changed. It has cooled about as much as it has warmed in natal day about 2,000 million years ago. But a million million years hence the sun will probably change. It will then have less pull on the earth which will then be about 2 million miles farther away from the sun. The sun will also lose its power to radiate by about 30 per cent. Therefore, the earth being farther away from the sun and that body sending out less heat, our earth will be about 30 degrees cooler in that far off day.

France Accepts British Plan for Neutralizing the Shanghai Area

Shanghai, Aug. 19.—(CP-Havas)—Japanese airplanes began a bombardment of Nanking at 5 p.m. today it was reported here.

Shanghai, Aug. 19.—(CP-Reuters)—Chinese forces tonight were surrounding the Ward Road jail in Shanghai, according to a telephone message from the jail. Warders at the institution include 60 Britons. The jail, situated in the eastern part of the international settlement, houses some 5,000 prisoners.

France is Favorable

Paris, Aug. 19.—(CP-Havas)—The French government today accepted the British plan for neutralizing the Shanghai area.

The plan calls for evacuation of Chinese and Japanese troops and the safeguarding of their respective interests by the United States, Great Britain and France.

The Foreign Ministry, upon receipt of the British suggestion, cabled the adaptation which was proceeding in many fields of jurisprudence.

Elevate International Law

Murder was a crime and was recognized immediately as such wherever it happened, he said. It was the task of lawyers to elevate international law to the same high level of recognition so that where ever war occurred it would be immediately recognized as a crime.

NO DICTATORSHIP TOWARDS LABOR ROWE'S PROMISE

Black Flag of Repudiation Raised in Ontario, Declares Rowe

DEALS WITH UNIONS

Surplus Achieved by High Taxes Another Charge Levelled

Sarnia, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative Leader, speaking here last night, challenged Premier Hepburn "to deny he is not planning to negotiate new Hydro contracts because he finds himself faced with a Hydro shortage."

Mr. Rowe said it was presumptuous of the administration to seek support because it was a breach of law and order.

"We have never had a more lawless government than is at present sitting at Queen's Park," he said, declaring the "black flag of repudiation" had been raised by Ontario when contracts for power were negotiated.

Labor has the right of free collective bargaining, Mr. Rowe continued, but he said Mr. Rowe, and "I favor the right of free secret ballot by which the worker may state his views within the unions.

No Dictatorship

"There will be no dictatorial attitude towards labor so far as I am concerned," he said. "I propose to say I trust the man who looks at me. I expect him to trust me. No other policy can godrun in the system of this Province. I say 'to the laborer it is his business to join what labor organization he thinks fit. It is not my responsibility to maintain and properly enforce law and order in the province."

The Hepburn government's surplus was achieved because taxation was raised to new heights, Mr. Rowe said. In 1936 Ontario tax revenues reached $32,000,000, higher by $32,000,000 than Conservative collections in 1933.

"He curtailed expenditure under the guise of economy," he said, charging Premier Hepburn had reduced essential services that the budget might be balanced.

"What sort of economy allows insane asylums to be overcrowded, as patients sleep in corridors?" asked Mr. Rowe.

The Conservative leader said the Liberals had created new boards and commissions, but had reduced them, and that there were now more civil servants than at any time in Ontario's history.

STRIKE CONFERENCE AT BROCKVILLE

HOTEL IS ROBBED AT SHANNONVILLE

$80 Taken By Stranger From Bureau Drawer in Private Room

Shannonville, Aug. 19 (Special)—Walking boldly into McDonald's Hotel here, at the height of business hours last night, a lone robber stole Mrs. McDonald's purse, containing approximately $80.00. It was discovered when the McDonald family retired, for the night at midnight last night.

A strange man, wearing a light colored suit, was seen in the upper corridor of the hotel at 10.45 p.m. and Provincial Police today are searching for this person. Mrs. McDonald's personal belongings were locked in a bureau drawer in her private room on the second floor of the hotel. The drawer was jimmied open, the robber using a screwdriver to force it open. Inside was Mrs. McDonald's purse containing the missing money. Provincial Constable Wm. McErlen, who investigated the robbery, revealed today the missing purse was found in the ditch alongside highway No. 2 near Millltown early today. The money was missing however.

The robber nonchalantly walked into the hotel here and brazenly continued upstairs, where he was seen by a Mr. Wrightmeyer, a guest of the hotel. The robber gained entrance to several rooms before entering Mrs. McDonald's personal room. In each room the same procedure was carried out, the bureau drawers were forced open and rifled.

Following subsequent investigations Provincial Police later announced the robbery had been carried out in the identical same manner as the hotel robbery at the Marysville Hotel some six weeks ago, when robbers stole a larger sum of money from the room of the proprietors. Provincial Constable McErlen added that a splendid description of the man seen loitering about the hotel here had been afforded the police.

ALBERTA TO DEFY 'DISALLOWANCE'

Aberhart Says Province Will "Go Ahead" With" Legislation

Colinton, Alta., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Regardless of the action of the Dominion, the Alberta government is "going ahead" with legislation aimed at banks and banking within the province, Premier William Aberhart yesterday said at a Social Credit picnic here, 88 miles north of Edmonton.

The Premier was referring to the bankers' licensing legislation the Dominion—Government disallowed recently because it infringed upon "the recognized powers of the Dominion." He did not explain how the Alberta government would attempt to "go ahead."

"All we need is more money tickets—just some more purchasing power," he said. "And Ottawa says we can't do it, a little thing like that."

Premier Aberhart said: "We haven't prepared our answer to that thing yet but it all seems a strange thing." He was referring to the telegram he received from Prime Minister Mackenzie King "hereby advising that the government-in-council had disallowed the Alberta Acts.

Says Banks Usurpers

He repeated his contention that the banking legislation was within the Province's jurisdiction over property and civil rights.

"The banks have usurped those rights . . . we are right and we are going to fight to that end," he said.

"We have got to break the control of the financial monopoly over our credit," said the Premier.

Edmonton, Aug. 19.—(CP)—Premier Aberhart of Alberta claims the Dominion Government is by the Governor General of the Royal Commission on taxation and by its terms of reference, is assuring recommendations for constitutional revision "shall be strictly within the framework of the present anti-social financial system."

In a statement issued here yesterday, Mr. Aberhart said the Royal Commission's report "which has brought disgrace to every country in the world."

Taxi Driver Rewarded For Information Given

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Oswald H. Earl, Brockville taxi driver who gave police information that led to the arrest and conviction of Cecil Shelburn, alias George A. Chalmers, who held up the Mallorytown Branch of the Royal Bank on May 29 and escaped with $1,100, today received a cheque for $400 from the Canadian Bankers' Association.

Shelburn was arrested in Kingston the day following the robbery after Earl had driven him from Brockville to Kingston.

He was sentenced to ten years in Penitentiary and ten strokes of the lash.

Portugal Severs Relations With Czechoslovaks over Guns

Machine Gun Order Unfilled is Cause of Action

DISPUTE 2 YEARS OLD

Lisbon, Aug. 19.—(AP)—The Authoritarian Portuguese Government announced formally today it had severed diplomatic relations with the Republic of Czechoslovakia over an unfilled order for machine guns.

At the same time Portugal accused Czechoslovakia of yielding to the "influences and pressure" of an unidentified "third party" in blocking fulfillment of the arms order.

Sees Russian Influence

The newspaper Diario de Noticias promptly declared, in interpretation of the move, that Czechoslovakia had received instructions from an eastern power not to supply arms to a country which was sure guarantee against a Communist Iberian peninsula.

In the same comment, the newspaper declared "Czechoslovakia is the Russian stronghold in central Europe and perhaps the Soviets largest air base."

The official Portuguese communique attributed the Praha Government's reluctance to permit a Czechoslovakian armament firm to supply a larger order of machine guns to Portugal to Portugal's attitude on the civil war raging within her neighbor state, Spain.

Two Year Dispute

Portugal, governed by a Fascist, inspired Dictator, Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, lies at the backdoor of the Spanish territory controlled by the Loyalist leader, Francisco Franco, and several weeks ago wiped out the international patrol of the frontier against arms and soldiers bound for Spain.

Portugal's statement today disclosed that the Portuguese Minister to Czechoslovakia left Praha for Vienna yesterday, with the legation staff, leaving the task of looking after Portuguese interests in the middle European Republic to the Italian Minister.

The dispute had its origin two years ago, the communique continued, when Portugal placed a large order for machine guns with the Czechoslovakia Zebrojovka factory in pursuance of her rearmament program.

Over Spanish Situation

But the factory informed the Portuguese Minister at Praha July 22 that the Czechoslovakian government had refused permission to supply the armament because of the civilist Portugal has assumed with regard to non-intervention in the 12-months-old Spanish civil war.

CHEAPER POWER, CUT IN CAR FEES HEPBURN CLAIMS

Premier Makes Swing Through Eastern Ontario

NO APOLOGIES

Says Stand Against C. I. O. Will Not Be Altered

Perth, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—Electric power in abundance and so cheap it would be available to every resident in the province, coupled with a "sweeping reduction" in automobile license fees are some of the prospects held out by Premier Hepburn if his government is returned in the forthcoming Ontario election.

Yesterday Mr. Hepburn made a swing through Eastern Ontario, making his political speeches in Richmond, Carleton County, and Perth, Lanark County, both traditional Conservative strongholds. He said the people to forget party allegiance and support him in his aspirations to complete the work they had started. He gave no indication of the election date but it would be "not before the near future."

In the handling of the Oshawa strike and activities of the C. I. O., Mr. Hepburn said he had no apologies to offer. He has been faced with a heavy responsibility and had adopted a stand which he would not alter so long as he remained in office.

Sympathy With Labor

All his sympathies were with the working people in their efforts to get a fair share of increased prosperity and he would not challenge the right of labor to organize and strike for its rights.

"But neither do I challenge the right of a man to work if he wants to or to return to join a certain union," he said. The "Herrin Massacre" in Illinois many years ago was referred to by Mr. Hepburn, who said it was "perpetrated by John L. Lewis' men (C.I.O.)."

"It is the same Mr. Lewis who is head of the C.I.O." he said. "I always maintain a leopard cannot change his spots." Ontario had the lowest taxation level and per province in the Dominion or any State in the United States. He provided what had been made to guard the rights of organized labor and there was no room in the service of outside agitators, he declared.

Loss of Industrial Record

Mr. Hepburn presented the financial record of his government and declared it had balanced the budget, reduced the debt and for the first time had accumulated a surplus. He promised further reductions in automobile license fees.

Attacking Col. W. H. Price, former Ontario Attorney-General, and Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for their opposition to government investigations, Mr. Hepburn said these men were friends of Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative leader.

If Mr. Rowe was victorious in the coming election he would appoint Price, 000 in overdue succession duties still outstanding would not be collected, Mr. Hepburn said. The Alberta Acts, Rowe's hands will be tied by his friends." He charged the last session with "graft, inefficiency and fraud" in the non-payment of succession duties.

He repeated his contention that the banking legislation was within the Province's jurisdiction over property and civil rights.

"The banks have usurped those rights . . . we are right and we are going to fight to that end," he said.

Meeting in Building is Devoted to Choice of Candidate

(By Staff Reporter)

Marmora, Aug. 19—In spite of the fact that one of the heaviest electrical storms of the season struck with sudden force here this afternoon a large crowd estimated in the thousands gathered here at the West Hastings Liberal Convention to elect a candidate to contest the riding of West Hastings in the forthcoming provincial elections.

At an early hour this afternoon it was predicted by prominent Liberals that the nomination be confined to the unanimous candidacy of the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health and present representative of the riding.

In the handling of the Oshawa strike and activities of the C. I. O., Mr. Hepburn said he had no apologies to offer. He has been faced with a heavy responsibility and had adopted a stand which he would not alter so long as he remained in office.

Cholera Epidemic Grips British Colony at Hong Kong

Serum Has to be Secured From Other Places Than Warring Shanghai

82 DIE IN WEEK

Hong Kong, Aug. 19.—(AP)— A cholera epidemic marched across the narrow waters of Hong Kong harbor and the southern end of the South China coast today, including Macao, on a mainland peninsula, and Canton, China.

Shipping officials here expressed fear it would be necessary to cancel all calls at this port and to quarantine ships which already have arrived.

Evacuation May be Halted

This created the danger that evacuation of British nationals from China might have to be suspended.

Of 136 reported cases of cholera last week, 82 already have been fatal. The epidemic caused 19 deaths this week before.

Because of the Sino-Japanese war raging at Shanghai authorities were unable to obtain fresh supplies of anti-cholera vaccine here.

Serum Transported

China Medical Advisory Corporation places transported 600 pounds of the serum to Hong Kong from Shanghai at the height of the Japanese bombing a week ago.

Other hospitals were made to other far eastern ports to rush more serum here.

(A Singapore dispatch said medical authorities there were preparing a shipment of serum from Java. Reports received there from Hong Kong said there were 136 cases of cholera last week. 82 of which proved fatal. There were 19 deaths the week before.

(One hundred litres of vaccine were to arrive at Singapore tonight from Bandoeng to be shipped Sunday on an Imperial Airways plane to Hong Kong.

(The Far East Health Bureau at Singapore announced that other shipments of serum would be sent by steamship.)

DAUGHTER OF CAROLINA HOOKS 26 IB. LUNGE IN STOCO LAKE WATERS

Jean Kirkpatrick, 14-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. F. K. Kirkpatrick, Columbia, South Carolina, and niece of Miss Ella Bleecker of this city, is the envy of her girl companions and family at Stoco Lake, delightful summer resort as well. Last evening in company with her father, the party shortly arriving from the southern state and having their first fishing trip with Jean holding the trill snagged into something that she thought was the bottom of the lake. She was soon to learn that she did not have the bottom of the lake, but an active, fighting "lunge." The battle was on in dips and dives by the big fellow but with expert handling the splendid specimen was hauled into the boat and, once taken where became the treasure of all "lunge" weighed 26 pounds and was three feet seven inches in length. Dr. Kirkpatrick stated the fish was well nurtured and very game. The trophy will be mounted and the fish taken home to show his Carolinian friends, also what kind of fishing there is in Canadian waters. Stoco Lake is a favorite grounds for "lunge" fishing at this particular time of year and some fine specimens landed. Photo taken from the lake within the last week.

SPANISH STEAMER IS TORPEDOED

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 19.—(CP)—The Spanish steamship Almirante Antonio was torpedoed the Spanish steamer Armuru, enroute to Spain from a Russian port, in the eastern Mediterranean of the Island of Tenedos, in the Aegean Sea, the newspaper Vus reported today.

(Lloyds register lists the Armuru as a 2,783-ton ship owned by the Spanish Vaszongada shipping company, with Bilbao as its home port.)

The ship was attacked yesterday according to dispatches which did not sink and succeeded in reaching Tenedos, where it ran aground, the advices said.

There was no loss of life, the reports added, and the Turkish steamer Kemal went to the aid of the stranded vessel, which carried a cargo of wheat.

Second Attack

It was the second attack on a Spanish vessel in these waters within the last four days. On the Spanish freighter Ciudad de Cadiz was sunk near Cavalla by a submarine flying the Spanish insurgent flag. The captain and crew of the vessel were picked up by Soviet steamship Vatslan Avansoff.

Tenedos lies off the southwestern mouth of the Dardanelles, a few miles west of the Turkish mainland.

KRESGE'S STAFF ENJOY PICNIC

The soft strumming of guitars and the lilt of voices lifted in community song were the accompaniment featured the picnic held by the staff of the Kresge Store at the Outlet Beach yesterday afternoon. Under the Canadian fishing shadows caused by a huge bonfire on the beach culminated a perfect day's outing.

Over twenty-five members of the staff were transported by speedboat early yesterday afternoon to the popular summer resort. Sports, swimming and all forms of enjoyment formed the afternoon's entertainment. Quite an hilarity and a musical entertainment on the beach by a quartette of stringed instruments concluded a highly enjoyable holiday.

Japanese Forces Threatened

Shanghai, Aug. 19—(AP)—Japan's heavily reinforced army was in imminent danger of being split in two and driven back into the Whangpoo River tonight by a surging Chinese drive.

After fighting off a full day and repeated Japanese stab attacks the Chinese thrust a powerful wedge into the Japanese lines, smashing their foe to within 500 yards of the Whangpoo.

In Shanghai, the international settlement, French concession and Chinese city were faced with a serious food shortage. The Chinese masses were rioting for food and water and mob violence was increasing.

The Russian-owned Daily Herald was suppressed by settlement police on a charge of disseminating false reports and inciting riots.

'Chronicles of Eventful Year' Read to the Canadian Bar

Annual Report of Col. W. N. Ponton, Registrar, Presented at Toronto Meeting—Year of Anniversaries.

"The chronicles of an eventful year dynamic, not static or stagnant" as recorded in the Registrar, Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., were read in his absence to the presidents and members of the Canadian Bar Association meeting at Toronto on Wednesday. Present at the meet an embarras de richesse" he noted.

"This is anniversary year said Col. Ponton referring to the anniversary of the accession of the British to one hundred years ago and to the accretion, amidst wonder, Confederation "no longer an experiment but a consummated and established fact, and the anniversary of a great, ang in the main, continuing success. Our legal system is growing but planned for a population three times the population of today. Each province has a flavour and fragrance of its own. Each province is an orbit, not independent, but interdependent, united by a common bond, inspired by a common loyalty to the Commonwealth of Nations, unity and strength signified in an alchemy of good will, of mutual understanding, strengthened by the administration of justice."

The third great anniversary this month is "that of the call to arms of twenty-three years ago, when the bravest and best of our race, nation and of our citizenship offered themselves for living service or death life and limb, many of many cases meant sacrifice. The Altar of Sacrifice, the Stone of Remembrance! What memories of both within ang trial our call call here and now would revive."

Royal Leadership

The registrar referred to the recent abdication. "This year, too, statesmen and jurists have dealt with kings but have not lost the common touch. Remembering the abdication and all its consequences, so full of significance and blight, ing our cherished hopes, we are not ungratefully forget the almost a miracle of a constitutional and apolitical service which Edward VIII as Prince of Wales and King rendered wholeheartedly to the Empire. The British Empire has a royal family which stands, has stood through the throne. In this spirit we look back on the past year with pride and pledged and hereby pledge, our loyal fealty to him. In his new reigns over a happy and contented people, who seek cohesion rather than expansion, we pray that all things peace with honour, participations. Let us plant our roots in the plains of peace and the hope of plenty, and in so doing let us lengthen our cords and strengthen our stakes. In this hope and trust we have assurance."

"A man's a man
But when you're a king, you see the work of many thousand men."
Sovereign law is after all, upon the state selected with the crowning good repressing ill.

"The law is a great drama and many members of the junior bar especially those recently called who have not partnerships, have been experiencing its hardships and perhaps even its heartaches.

"Permit me, as an octogenarian, to say to those who at times sometimes feel the 'black gulf of solitude and desolation' to take to heart the old Scottish maxim 'Preservers' when clients are few and far between and time seems interminable.

Calling Greatly Pursued

"Every calling is great when greatly pursued, 'Pursuit implies equal to our still learned and cultured profession. Let us never permit it to be commercialized or to degenerate into a sorry trade. Let us maintain rather its tapestry of romance, its just, hold strong, press through, keep the faith, keep the touch—contacts are invaluable.

"Apart from the trade trends of the profession, the world moves on more dangerous, are the various movements, not, perhaps, tempting into conflict the Judiciary and the legislature but rather the apparent endeavor to rise above law by restrictive statutory enactments thereby obstructing the course of the administration of justice. Any attempt to render nugatory the judgments of the courts by law established, or to prevent the full and free access to the King's courts of Justice, should, in the personal mind of the writer, be not merely watched but fought with the utmost vigilance and with all our united strength.

Judgments of the Courts

The registrar said: "In relation to the law militant in the Province," we may well be proud of the prompt administration of criminal justice as well as of civil justice..... Reading the judgments of those who preside in our courts constitutes a liberal education in legal education."

The registrar commented: "We have never heard any lawyer or intelligent layman or honest farmer, say a good word for the mysteries of the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act which has prevented and dried up the source of the very relief which it was materially intended to provide.

In reference to the passing of many members of the Canadian bar, Col. Ponton remarked ; "It is during that average of 70 to maintained year after year." He especially mentioned Sir Robert Borden, "whose personality has been equable in temperament, a leader of men, a ripe scholar, a true friend earnest, courageous and a great leader in the evolution of the Empire as it exists today."

Col. Ponton closed his report with the following reference to Milton: "May He who hath raised this British Empire higher and more glorious and enviable a height, with all her faults, look about her, stay us in this felicity!"

The late Mrs. Fargey was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph English, and had resided in this community for over twenty-four years. In that time she had won herself a large circle of friends, and this was fully exemplified on Sunday by the presence of a large number of relatives and sympathizing friends. Clinic for Blind Of District Held

Representatives of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind were in the city yesterday afternoon meeting persons suffering from a condition of blindness, who reside in the area. In all about twenty persons were present with others who called at their guides.

The purpose of the clinic was a survey of the conditions of those so afflicted. Examination was made of the state of the sight of those who answered the notice of the meeting which was held in the offices of the local Board of Health.

Dr. Sparks was in charge of the clinic.

LOCAL CHINESE ARE EXUBERANT

All that was needed in the city's chinese colony this morning was the explosion of firecrackers to mark externally the exuberance felt by the outwardly calm, but inwardly rejoicing Celestials over the victory won by their brothers at Shanghai yesterday as they pushed their hereditary foes, the Japs up the muddy flats of the Whangpoo River.

Eagerly latest reports of the battle on the eastern front were read and interpreted by the local chinese, whose slumberous eyes glinted with the receipt of each new bit of information concerning the advance of the Chinese troops entered.

To the policeman on the beat the same exuberance was voiced, marked by one incident early this morning. Lee Yuen Sing, laundryman and a wildly waved Toronto morning paper, called out "you think."

Deserting his laundry for a brief period, the local Celestial hurried to Constable Wm. Braan on downtown point duty, paper flapping in his hands. Eagerly the local constable was invited to scan the headlines of the daily which told the Japanese are battling under the heavy guns of the Chinese Ching army forces.

"Very good, don't you think," prodded the Chinaman as each paragraph was pointed out. "Chinese fight good, Japs no good, Chinese soldiers very good soldiers, fight hard, Japs no." Then with a wave "very good", the officer was enlightened.

Though the majority of Chinese in the city are natives of this district, many miles removed from the present scene of battle, interest in the war nevertheless has grown keen and been fostered by them. Some, indeed, have left to enlist, according to the statement of police adopted and have been succeeding given by donations from them in the Chinese war chest. During the past few days each collector reported to have been in Belleville making his rounds of the various donors.

POLICE BLOTTER

Found asleep in an automobile parked on Front Street at the upper end of Front Street early this morning by P. C. Arnott, two men charged with drunkenness and as Fred Polzasa and Johnson Hillier, were taken into custody and detained at the police station until 8.00 a.m. when they were released on a reduced to vacate the city as quickly as possible.

Police revealed today this practice of sleeping in automobiles left in used car parking lots has become too frequent and will be discouraged even if jail sentences have to be imposed in the future.

Sergeant Thos. Reid in charge of the Brockville detachment of the R.C.M.P., was in the city this morning on his official annual inspection of the local R.C.M.P. quarters.

Kenneth Clarke, Belleville, was apprehended driving a motor vehicle on Front Street yesterday and failed to produce his operator's permit and sold quickly at $5 and costs per box.

Blueberries appeared to be as plentiful as they were two weeks ago and showed but little change in price. They were offered today at twenty cents per box. Blackberries also proved fairly popular with buyers paying fifteen cents for this fruit. Imported peaches were plentiful and were offered at varying prices according to size and quality. Selects were offered at fifty cents per basket.

Sweet corn showed no let-down in quantity with the freshly-cut corn selling generally at fifteen cents although some vendors offered their stock at ten cents.

Field-grown tomatoes appeared to be plentiful with vendors asking twenty-five cents for eleven quart baskets and hamper loads at fifty cents. Potatoes showed but little change in price from the Tuesday quotations with new potatoes being quoted at seventy-five and eighty cents. Peaks were offered at twenty and twenty-five cents. A good quality cabbage and cauliflower proved plentiful and sold readily at prices ranging from five cents upward. A variable display of vegetables sold at prevailing prices.

COE HILL

The Red Cross Field Day on August 11th was acclaimed a decided success. The ideal weather and a large crowd keenly interested in Red Cross work carried the day through in a gallant manner.

The chief amusement was a softball game between Bancroft and Coe Hill girls. Bancroft carried off the laurels but both teams deserved credit for their good work both at bat and in the field. The Rah Rah band was a great attraction to the youth and many treasures were carried home by these youthful fishermen. The booth under the able management of the staff at the Rolling Store did a flourishing business in ice cream and soft drinks.

Supper was served to a goodly number who did full justice to the dainties provided. Mr. Gilroy's staff of workers skilfully handled the serving.

The numerous cakes, pies, salads, etc., were donated by the good cooks at Coe Hill and surrounding country to help the good work of the Red Cross. A dance in the evening concluded the day's sport.

A goodly crowd assembled and with the good music of the Troubadours everyone enjoyed themselves. Receipts of the day were as follows: gate receipts $36; supper $36; booth $35; fish pond $14; dance $34.90 clear; total $150.90. Total $150.90.

EXPECT RISE IN USED METAL PRICES

Used metal dealers of the city are at present marking time in hopes and expectations that general prices in the market may advance following rising prices for metal scrap now being experienced in the United States.

Whether the advance will occur in Canada, however, is a subject of speculation, it was explained by one dealer today. "It may," was the general opinion held.

"But in Canada, the Steel Company of Canada pretty well regulates the price of the metal. It is the chief and controlling market. We have to be satisfied with their prices. And whether there will be any advance depends entirely upon the demand felt by this company," it was stated.

RAINS QUENCH FOREST FIRES

Glace Bay, N.S., Aug. 18—(CP)—Drenching rain brought relief to miners, farmers and fishermen today after a day-long battle to save their homes from forest fires which swept across eastern Cape Breton County.

The rain drenched woods grown tinder-dry during the six weeks' dry spell and extinguished fires that yesterday levelled six homes, a general store, cut off power lines and waste miles of wood-land.

DEATH STALKS OUR HIGHWAYS!

If every human life in a village of 800 people in the Province of Ontario were snuffed out in one day, newspapers throughout the entire world would carry the story of the ghastly tragedy.

If one of your loved ones—or even a friend—were a victim, it would become quite a grievous, horrible, personal loss!

That is precisely what is going on in Ontario this year. Nearly 800 people will be killed on our highways. Nearly 14,000 will be injured—many of them crippled; many of them suffering almost unbearable pain. Death and untold suffering stalk our highways and this must stop!

RECKLESS DRIVERS BEWARE!

Motorists have been requested to be courteous on the road but the death toll mounts at an appalling rate. This Department, with the aid of our internationally famous police force and public-spirited citizens, intends to put reckless drivers off the road! You must stop cutting in, passing on hills and curves, crowding, racing, taking chances. Unless you have regard for the safety and convenience of other users of our highways you will soon find yourself in serious trouble.

MOTORISTS: WE ASK YOUR HELP!

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders!

SEATS IN PARKS

Sir Philip Sassoon, First Mommissioner of Works in the British Government, is dissatisfied with the appearance, and comfort, of the free seats in the Royal parks; and he has invited the public to send donations toward providing seats of a new and better design, which he has had drawn up.

There is no denying that his judgment in the matter is sound; the seats at present do their duty in a stiff, uncompromising fashion with but little respect for the person. Acquaintance with them is never likely to prolong itself into the kind of affection that made Eliza Cook exclaim:

I love it—I love it, and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old arm-chair!

There are not enough free seats to go round in the rush hours, and the designer, inflicted possibly by consideration akin to Shakespeare's statement that:

.....weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth

Finds the down pillow hard,

may have endeavored to make the seats selective of themselves. This, however, was to ignore one of their chief functions: they are not occupied only to counteract fatigue, but often as an aid to exercising the mind.

They are, furthermore, coigns of vantage; and though to make them so rigorous as to enact that none but the brave deserves to start is a sort of poetic justice—since it demands an insensitiveness in the onlooker to match that which is forced upon the human object of his contemplation—it is unfair in this case. For, alas, the rule is abrogated for the wealthy; privilege in enthroned—twopence secures a luxurious deck chair!

The new seats, of unstained oak, can hardly fail to be more attractive than the old; and they will, we hope, be comfortable enough to fulfill all their functions. In any event, if they cannot hope to rival the ease of deck chairs, they can be depended on to confer greater dignity on their occupants.—Christian Science Monitor.

When saluted with a salutation, salute the person with a better salutation, or at least return the same for God taketh account of all things.—The Koran

True courage is cool and calm. The bravest of men have the least of a brutal bullying insolence and in the very time of danger are found the most serene and free.—Lord Shaftsbury.

Courage is, on all hands, considered as an essential of high character.—Froude.

We easily forget crimes that are known only to ourselves.—Burke.

A LINK OF FIRST AID STATIONS ALONG NO. 2 HIGHWAY is the objective of the Ontario Motor League, and a very worthy one. In accordance with this policy a first aid station has been set up at Deseronto under the supervision of Wm. Butt, Superintendent of the Ontario Highway First Aid Stations. First aid stations will be located in garages or other suitable places where first aid will be available at all times. Training by experts will be given in methods of stopping bleeding, splinting fractures and in the careful handling of all accident cases.

x x x

First aid stations can save many lives by knowing just what to do in case of accident when improper handling might make things worse.

x x x

The matter of first aid for fire, highway and other accidents in Belleville is being considered by Alderman Jesse Barlow, Chairman of the Fire and Light Committee, City Council, who has been investigating the matter in collaboration with Fire Chief Lynch, as to the feasibility of first aid stations in connection with the fire department. Fire Chief Lynch has studied first aid methods which he has put to excellent use on several occasions, and favors the establishment of classes for the firemen to become proficient in first aid methods, in fact he is of the opinion that every fireman should have a working knowledge of first aid in case of injury through fire or other disaster in their line of duty, or highway accidents, etc., the firemen and police being always available in case of emergency.

x x x

First aid instruction for policemen would als obe valuable.

x x

At one time there was a pulmotor in Belleville, used on occasion. Pulmotors have been supplanted, it is said, by a very efficient life-saving instrument or machine called an inhalator, which is worth its weight in gold on occasions when it is needed to save lives.

x

In the United States the Red Cross has taken this question of first aid up seriously and has established 1,300 first-aid posts on through routes from coast to coast. Additional highway stations to the number of 3,500 will soon be supplemented by a mechanical army of trained firstaiders regularly plying the highway on motorcycle, in police radio car and light truck, who can get to the scene of an accident in a hurry. Since then 600 persons have already received the required training to serve at the highway first-aid posts. At least two of the attendants at each post must be certified, but in addition nearby residents have taken advantage of Red Cross technical training, and this has resulted in a community reserve qualified to act in emergency. These men and women serve without pay as Red Cross volunteers. They are America's "Samaritans, Incorporated." In the United States, firemen, state and local police, public utility and other groups are co-operating with the American Red Cross in the first-aid movement and there is no doubt that many lives will be saved and much suffering averted as a result.

x x

In Belleville at the present time there is one of the finest first-aid units in Canada, in connection with the Canadian Northern Railway, with competent instructors, and with this as a nucleus Belleville could soon become a first-aid centre worthy of being copied by other municipalities.

TOO MUCH FOR THEM

The manager of a vaudeville theatre was testing the abilities of candidates for stage honors one day last week. To one would-be comedian he said:

"Your songs won't do for me. can't allow any profanity in my theatre."

"But I don't use profanity," was the reply.

"No,' said the manager; "but the audience would".

I get notions for tunes at all sorts of odd moments. I remember I was hanging some pictures one day when one struck me.—From an Interview.

One or two song-writers seem to have been hit by something a bit heavier than a mere picture.

CHINESE CAPTURE AND SCUTTLE SIX JAPANESE MERCHANT SHIPS.

Dare-devil Chinese forgetful of the danger they ran made a second swift and surprise attack against Japanese shipping and warships in the Whangpoo River, when they seized and scuttled six Japanese merchant ships which had been anchored at the Japanese Nisshin Kisen Kaisha wharf. Several days before Chinese naval cadets had torpedoed the Japanese flagship Idzumo (right), causing damage which forced the moving of the cruiser down the Whangpoo to join the battle fleet anchored off the Japanese concession. The seizing of Japanese merchant ships was accomplished when picked companies of Chinese rushed the ships, rallied them into emergency boom and scuttled them just above Pootung, making the upper reaches of the Whangpoo impenetrable. At the LEFT, above, is Shanghai's famous bund on the Whangpoo River which has been under fire from Japanese warships and artillery.

WORKER ESCAPES DEATH

Astorville, Ont., Aug. 18—(CP)—Alfred Ethier escaped death here yesterday when hundreds of pounds of cement, stone and machinery collapsed during construction work on a school building. He was covered with debris and pulled from underneath by other workmen. He suffered only bruises.

A temporary floor carrying a cement mixer, bags of cement, stone and several workmen, collapsed over Ethier. Aime Houle, O. Desgagne, Thomas Dela and Henri Belec were among the workers who fell with the platform. They were not hurt. Astorville is 10 miles south of North Bay.

FIGHTING AUTHOR

Resentment over an alleged reflection on his ability, supposed to have been solidified in an article written by Max Eastman, lett-wing essayist, caused Ernest Hemingway (above) modernist novelist, to tangle with Eastman in their public office in New York. Hemingway was reported to have socked Eastman with a copy of the latter's book containing the disputed statement.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Still bewildering innocence, Mrs. Anna Hahn, 31-year-old former German school teacher is pictured as she is arraigned in police court at Cincinnati, Ohio, on a murder charge growing out of the poison death of George Gaellmat, 61. Outcalt.

The marriage will be performed with another woman taking Mrs. Holden's place, it was explained, as soon as the papers reach Barcelona.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Four A. M. Too Late for Sweet Sixteen

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For a number of years I have been a reader of your column, and would like to have you tell me if I am hopelessly old-fashioned when I say that a well-brought up girl of 16 should be in her home and in bed before four o'clock in the morning. Where do young people go until that hour? Please tell me.

And is it customary for young people from good homes to keep such hours? And shouldn't a parent be able to say when a girl of 16 should be at home and in bed?

A Worried Grandmother

Four A. M. seems a pretty emancipated hour for a girl of 16 to return home. If there were any reason for this early-bird appearance on the parental roof, such as attending a dance at some distance and much trouble on the car line, it might be overlooked, but coming in often at such an hour from the morning milk is delivered seems to me unfortunate hour for sweet sixteen.

Has No Life Apart from Her Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My name was the brilliant one in our family of four. After we were through high school she was sent to one of the best women's colleges in the country, and made good in her profession. When she was 28 years old she married a man none of us thought very much of. He had been a good deal of a failure in two positions, and was starting on a third when sister married him. He hasn't done well in that either, and the rest of us are distinctly tired of helping them out.

Sister has tried to get employment, but has never been successful, which we think is due to the fact that she's terribly superior, not to say "snooty", about taking a job that she doesn't consider worthy of her education. But she's not too proud to be helped by her family, all of whom are working.

The Dumb One

If the facts are as related in your letter, and Sister declines to take you because she feels they're not in keeping with her education, it might not be a bad idea to let her go without the family loans for a while. Her husband, to whom she is so devoted, seems to rate as a luxury, and one has to work to support luxuries, unless they're inherited, which is not true of husbands.

Pushes Herself on People and Never Gets Invitations

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Everyone says how attractive I am, with good features, and I am very miserable seeing homelier girls walk off with all the dates. Even if I should manage a date with a boy, he never asks for another.

I belong to a group with my girl friend, when she has a date with a boy. Do you think this is proper? I go to her home every evening, and naturally, when she has a date, she asks me if I want to go along, and I always accept. Should I stay at her house when I know she has a date, or leave when her company comes?

Sometimes I think I push myself on people, and that may be the reason why I never get anywhere. I go to high school, and even there, the other girls snub me.

J. J.

No matter how pretty a girl is she barges in on a date as a third party, she isn't popular. When a girl isn't popular with one set, the most sensible thing for her to do is to cultivate an entirely new group of friends, even if she has to turn to a new neighborhood. And please stop thinking about not being popular. If you harbor these thoughts, you're beaten before you start.

If it can be managed, entertain a little in your own home. Try your hand at some homemade sherbet or ice-cream, and invite that kindly girl friend, who includes you in her dates, to be helped by her family, all of whom are working.

Have Own Wash Cloth, Towel and Puff for Health

By HELEN FOLLETT

CLEANLINESS IS the first rule of beautifying and several more besides. It is the foundation upon which the temple of beauty is built. Before going on we wish to sound a warning siren against the use of soiled wash cloths and dubious - looking powder puffs. They are abominable.

The worst offender of all is the rouge pad. It goes on doing its blushing duty until the compound wears out. It picks up dust and grinds it into the pores, causing black points to form. It picks up bacteria and spreads infections. Those beauty roosters who are afflicted with pimples should use absorbent cotton when applying powder or rosy glow.

Share wash clothes and towels with no other member of the household; have your own. The rule holds good for cosmetics, powder, combs and brushes. One cannot be too fussy or too fastidious about these matters. Dandruff is caused by a fungus growth, and is contagious. Why take a chance of importing those horrid flakes that appear on the hair shafts and fall upon the bodice?

Skin, hair and finger nails depend upon the blood stream for a healthful appearance. The blood depends upon nourishing groceries and a balanced diet. So eat vegetables. Cut down on rich pastries, load up on fruits, vegetables and green salads. Have fish once a day and fish occasionally. Drink plenty of water.

Oily skins will bear sunburn better than dry ones. The natural lubricant sent forth by sebaceous glands acts as a protective agent. No girl with a dry skin should flirt with old Mister Sun.

The arid complexion rebels against soap. There are ways of tricking it. Give it a cleansing cream and let the cream remain on. Dip the wash cloth in suds and apply to the skin as if it were a compress. Don't friction. Rinse with warm water, dry and give it another lubricating with a liquid cleanser.

Do you know that if you touch the lobes of your ears with rouge puffs you look a bit of fright? Is the rims as well? Ears go rosy when the natural blush is present, and there are the days when natural effects are fashionable. If we must be the painters, let's do the job according to rule.

A bit of rosy coloring on the eyelids is a charming trick, especially if one is preparing for the merry evening and doesn't care to go for eye shadows. It freshens the countenance and brightens the eyes.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE ELLIS

"PARNELL"

Myrna Loy and Clark Gable Score In Refreshing Romance

Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, striking new heights of artistry together in "Parnell", a drama supported by the cast of Charles Stewart Parnell, "Uncrowned King of Ireland", now in its third successful day at the Bells Theatre and which closes its local engagement Friday night.

Although it is primarily a narrative of Ireland's "Fight for Liberty" internationally, the scope, for it is the account of a courageous man who sacrificed love and fortune and power for the woman he loved, John Stahl, producer of "Imitation of Life" "Back Street" and "Magnificent Obsession", followed history with a careful eye and reproduced the color and the beauty of the period in their times with rare skill and power.

Gable, as Parnell, unquestionably plays the most impressive role of his career and Myrna Loy, as Kitty O'Shea, reveals her remarkable talent as an emotional actress in contrast to her recent comedy roles.

Edna May Oliver, Billie Burke, Alan Marshall, Edmund Gwenn, Donald Crisp, Charles Coburn, Donald Meek and others have prominent roles and in addition there is a large group of Irish players, men and women who provide realistic atmosphere.

The story describes the historical rise of Parnell, who was the only man ever to unite the factions of the Irish Party in a struggle for Home Rule. In love with Mrs. Kitty O'Shea, a married woman, the romance ends in tragedy when the estranged husband, Willie O'Shea, divorces her, and the collapse of Parnell's political power and death followed with all of their dramatic quickness.

"Parnell" is a picture not to be missed. It is a picture upon which congratulations may be showered upon its producer, director, its stars and supporting players, its scenic and costume designers and everyone who had a hand in making it the outstanding photoplay that it is.

"Bars and Stripes", a miniature musical comedy precedes the feature attraction.

For your perfect enjoyment of "Parnell", it is suggested that you please see it from the beginning at 2.40, 7.10 and 9.25. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Everybody Dance" and "Night of Mystery"

From night club entertainment to the span of backgrounds against which Cicely Courtneidge, Ernest Truex and Mark Sandrich, young people romp from one hilarious situation to another in "Everybody Dance", the picture making everybody laugh as the Capitol Theatre, where it remains until Friday night as smash hit No. 1 on this grand double bill.

This comedy drama is embellished with music by those never ending hit composers, Mack Gordon and Harry Revel. Their title song, "Everybody Dance," not only introduces some dance numbers, but also introduces a pilot that keeps everybody stepping fast and merrily.

Cicely Courtneidge sings the number with the pep and personality and brings out the peculiar and famous Cicely is Lady Kate, a night club entertainer who, if you can believe the papers, is Public Scandal Raiser No. 1. But, you can't believe the papers, for all the scandals are concocted by the night club's publicity agent, and he tells everyone breaks in the headlines Kate kicks up a frightful row and threatens to walk out.

After one such emotional outburst, Kate receives a story that she has been bequeathed her sister's two children. This is all to Kate's taste except that the children think she is quiet and respectable Lady Hall and Stanley and Shirley arrive and take Kate by her dual role—her secret life by night among gangsters and dance and girls and those crazy days on the farm with the children, while pretending to know all about cows, chickens, pigs and tractors.

Then comes Wilbur on complicate matters. Wilbur, played in Ernest Truex's shyest and dead pan manner, is the children's uncle, sent by his crotchety old father, who has had a change of heart and decided to adopt Tommy and Shirley. Wilbur and Kate fall in love with Kate so that when the children are small she is pretending that the highly respectable Wilbur is her husband. Pretending the children is also the highly pretending that Kate is a famous farmer, everyone's heart gets sadly torn before everything comes out all right. Lady Kate's reputation is proven whiter than plain and she and Wilbur plan their wedding while everybody dances!

"Night of Mystery"

Give any movie mystery writer a family whose members hate each other, place them in a lonely mansion from which there is no escape and you get a presentable murder melodrama. Give this to Edgar Wallace and you get "The Case of Stephen Hall", a mystery that accents suspense, moves rapidly to its conclusion and is so logically worked out that it is fun to one shot on your guessing who commits the murders.

Such is the case in Van Dine's latest Philo Vance picture, "Night of Mystery," which opened at the Capitol as smash hit No. 2 last night.

Van Dine's reputation for characterization, so important in his novel, is actually added to by this movie.

Grant Richards, making his movie debut as the polished crime solver, brings to the screen a personality as smooth and ingratiating as any Philo Vance has known. Bonnie Karns, as a more athletic Heath than that portrayed by Eugene Pallette, gets as many laughs out of his role as any excellent comedian could.

Best Way to Discipline A Child

Often Wise For Parent of Opposite Sex to Correct a Youngster

By Lisa Grenelle

This idea that the father should take over the disciplining of the son, and that the mother should correct the daughter, seems to me all wrong. It certainly does everything possible to encourage "a house divided."

The father, having "washed his hands" of all responsibility of disciplining his daughter, for instance, indulges himself by spoiling her. This, of course, makes the daughter realize what a great deal her father is in comparison to her mother, who is just an "old crank" and always spoiling everything with her "don'ts" and her "can't's." The mother is the enemy, the father the ally. That not only is unfair to the mother, but is a wrong beginning for a father fixation, which, according to the psychoanalysts, is a very unhealthy condition.

Reverse either end, with the father doing all the disciplining of a son and the mother spoiling him and standing between, and you have the same situation with the same unhappy results.

Generally speaking a son will accept advice and "take" things more readily from his mother than his father, while a daughter is usually more prone to accuse her father's faults than her mother's. It is the same way with parents. The mother naturally more inclined to be critical of the daughter, the father of the son.

Wiser Methods

Therefore it seems to me far more reasonable, though not according to custom, for a father to discipline his daughter, while the mother should, whenever possible, correct the son.

There, is perhaps nothing more valuable for a girl than a chum and friendly relationship with her mother. But this is difficult, if not impossible, when the mother must do all the disciplining; difficult if not impossible, without the father's support and co-operation.

The same thing, of course, applies to a father and son. The success of their relationship is largely dependent upon the mother's attitude.

In all fairness, and for the sake of the children, parents should suppress each other in the matter of disciplining. If they can't agree, they should let the thing pass.

Nor should a father always act helpless to his daughter. "You'll have to wait and ask your mother," meaning the mother is to all the refusing. There may be occasions, but generally speaking, a father's judgment is quite good enough to decide the matter alone, if he just puts his mind to it.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Wants Daughter as Ring-Bearer

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—I am going to be married in the early part of next year, in church, with the double ring ceremony.

I'm just what position does a ring bearer come. . . . before or behind when? I have a daughter seven years old by a previous marriage, and we greatly desire having her act as ring-bearer if it is at all possible and proper. She is as excited and happy over this occasion as we are!

2—Should I have the engagement announced in the newspapers?

Reader

1.—It isn't considered good form nowadays to have a ringbearer. A ring-bearer gives a definitely "provincial" touch to a wedding.

Also, since this is your second marriage, you would be more careful to plan every detail of your wedding so that it will register complete simplicity. Having your daughter as a ring-bearer would not do this. Your groom may have a best man, and you may have one attendant, preferably a matron of honor . . . but I would do no attendants.

2—Your engagement may, if you wish, be announced in the newspapers. If your mother and father are living, they may make this announcement. Or the announcement may be made by you and the groom-to-be.

Should Widow Wear Wedding Band

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct for a widow to stop wearing her wedding ring and engagement ring?

Reader

A widow continues to wear her wedding ring after her husband's death. And she usually continues to wear her engagement ring, although sometimes she prefers to wear a jewel during her period of mourning.

If she decides to marry again, a widow immediately, on this decision, discontinues wearing her wedding and engagement rings that symbolize her first marriage.

Christening Garments

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Will you please tell me if it is correct to have my small daughter —she is two years old—christened in a mate-colored silk dress, mate-colored socks, and white shoes? She has long, curly hair, and I usually use a barette on her hair. For this occasion would it be best to use a hair ribbon?

2.—I am having my mother and father and sister visit me from Lutherans. I do not know if my parents or my husband and I should fee the pastor after the christening. Will you tell me?

3.—We would like to have a family party after the christening. Please tell me who pays for the food and drinks for this party.

Mother

1—It would be much better taste . . . vastly more appropriate for a child's christening . . . for you to dress your little daughter in white. And use a white hair ribbon, instead of the barette.

2 It is your husband who gives the fee to the pastor after the christening.

Should it be you and your husband who are the hosts of the party after the christening, paying for all the items of the party.

Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

CAUGHT IN WEB

If this snake had learned the old nursery rhyme instead of "eating his time crawling about he'd not be in this predicament. The reptile is shown securely bound with the web spun by several spiders whose domain he invaded in the home of R. J. Holden at Hornell, N.Y. For 11 days the snake has struggled to free itself; but every time it breaks a strand of the web the spiders immediately spin another section. Mr. Holden, indisposed to "interfere with nature" will let the fight go on to a finish.

Workers May Accept The Agreement Drawn

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 19.—(CP)—The 1,700 striking employees of Canadian Celanese will vote today on an agreement designed to end the walkout which has tied up the plant since June July 26.

The agreement, details of which were not disclosed last night, was drawn up at a conference at Toronto between Premier Hepburn, Canadian Cottons' officials and the strikers' delegation.

Possibility of the strikers' accepting the proposal was seen in the statement of Arthur Laverty, President of the Cornwall Textile Workers' Union, which called the strike, that he and other members of the Strikers' delegation would urge acceptance.

"I think it is a very good agreement," Laverty said last night on his return from the Toronto meeting. "I'm prepared to say we are all members of the committee, so strongly recommend its acceptance."

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or other rectal troubles, don't take the risk of an operation for relief. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning. Proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemoid and use as directed. Results are often surprising. Not only generally quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spot, Hemoid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the benefit of the first dose. So don't suffer another day. Get Hemoid today. If not entirely satisfied after you have had all it says it will do, your money will be cheerfully refunded. Don't delay. Get Hemoid today. It may be just the relief you have been looking for.

23 RINKS PLAY IN CAMPBELLFORD

Rink Skipped by A. Woonascott Second in Consolation

Bellevilla Lawn Bowling Club was represented by four teams in Campbellford yesterday afternoon, it being the occasion of the annual Men's Rink Competition at the Campbellford Club. Twenty-three rinks were entered for play representatives coming from Kingston, Oshawa, Peterboro, Lindsay, Warkworth, Norwood and Belleville.

Play commenced at 1.30 p.m. and the last bowl was not rolled until 2.30 this morning. The ideal location of the Campbellford greens with water on two sides, heavily wooded hills in the background, combined with beautiful weather, made a most pleasant day for all.

Bellevilla was well represented by three rinks as follows: W. Hayden, R. Zeran, O. T. Woodley, C. Symons, skip, G. McGuire, R. C. Woodley, skip; Mitchell, A. Woonascott, skip, J. Black, F. Harper, K. Catcher, G. Watkin.

C. Symon's rink won 2 out of 3, losing in the consolation series to Paulton of Campbellford.

G. Watkin's rink won 3 out of 4, also losing out in the consolation series to Sedgwick of Peterboro.

A Woonascott rink was successful in winning second prize in the consolation series, losing in the finals to Sedgwick of Peterboro.

Prizes awarded skip Woonascott's rink were: G. McGuire, clock; R. Woodley, food thermos; R. Mitchell, clock; A. Woonascott, table lamp.

The Tuesday series was won by Denry of Kingston with Booth of Cobourg second. Hard luck was given by Jeffery of Bowmanville.

Refreshments were served to the evening visitors by the ladies of the Campbellford Club. These were much enjoyed.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Aug. 19.—(CP)—If Louis and Farr gross 300,000 you'll not hear Mike Jacobs moaning.....

Tom Laird, sports critic for the San Francisco News, looked over Farr and didn't like what he saw.....For $3,000 I'd fight the bloke on 42nd Street at 10 minutes' notice,' he says..... Add youngest sports editor contest: Mike Yatonsiou, of the Springfield (Mass.) Messenger, boils up and says he's only 15..... (the 10 and 12-year-old-guys will please have their pegas write.).....

Max Schmeling brought over a German cuckoo clock for Mrs. Eddie Mead, wife of Henry Armstrong's manager.....When Armstrong fought Johnny Cabella the other night in Washington, Al Jolson (who holds the Negro's contract) had a special radio hookup installed so he could hear the fight .....Cost: $3,500.....English flight promoters are getting ready to slap two or three suits on Tommy Farr the minute he returns home.....Washington baseball writers, here with the Senators, say Bucky Harris will be back at the helm of the Senators next year despite those rams that Joe Cronin will return as President and General Manager.

Tommy Farr says Bob Olin, the light-heavyweight is the best man he ever fought.....what a surprise Mr. Farr has coming! Louis is the 13th boxer to hold the world's heavyweight title under the Marquis of Queensbury rules.....Those Giants are a different ball club with little Dick Bartell in there regularly .....Everybody along Broadway is wondering just what Al Weill (manager of Lou Ambers) had in mind when he offered $35,000 for Tommy Farr's contract affective after the Louis fight.

Kiwanis Juniors Win 6 to 5 Over Peterboro Rotary in First Junior Playdown Series

Substantial Lead Melts But Relief Hurling Helps

PLAY HERE SATURDAY

Weird Declsions by Base Umpire Put Locals in Hole

Beating back a belated rally by effective relief hurling by "Lefty" Weeks, Belleville Kiwanis Juniors defeated Peterboro Rotary by 6-5 in the first game of the Junior "A" O. B. A. A. playdowns at Peterboro on Wednesday, evening a distinct edge in the two out of three game series between these two smart squads. The return game will be played in Belleville on Saturday afternoon and a bumper crowd should be out to greet the kids and cheer them along to a possible playoff title.

Piling up a six run lead in the first five frames behind the hurling of Joe Kelleher, the winners saw their lead melt to a one run margin in the eighth, as Kelleher suddenly lost his stuff. Bert Noakes was rushed to the hilltop, who allowed one run on the three run splurge put on by the Rotary team and when he walked the first man in the ninth, who finally scored, "Lefty" Weeks ascended the hill and checked the rally promptly, forcing two in whilst but giving up a single and a fly ball to the outfield. The Kiwanis team played heads-up baseball during the pastime and could have won by a greater margin had it not been for the weird decisions handed out by Ike Batten, a former O.B.J.L. third baseman for the Peterboro club. Whether the calls were intentional or from blindness we are not prepared to say but certainly sure they had a taint of the "Old Scout" stuff!

Decisions All Hurt

Every call was made when they hurt and on two of them the man he declared safe eventually came to bat. "Pete" Woodley, coach of the local team, rightfully protested to the Chief Umpire, a convenient time to be deaf, and was assured occurrence would not happen again. Even in the face of such discouragement, the Kiwanis boys fought back and displayed much better baseball during the game. Russ Collins at second base, being a standout and Eddie Plummer behind the plate a close second. Collins rapped the hurling of Grant Clark, for three hits, two of them for bases, accepted seven chances at second without a slip and all times was cool in the ball game. Plummer made two difficult catches of foul balls with otherwise steady as pitchers with skill. Amo, Ronsky and McDonald kicked in with swell fielding at the tight spots and the rest of the boys were always on the ball.

Vince Corbett, in short, once he found his bearings, played a smart game and the combination of Clark and Collins around the middle sack has taken a lot of worries off the coach's shoulders. He got himself a bit-and accepted five chances in short, four of them in the difficult class. Kelleher, who opened on the mound, had only one inning to face against his delivery until the sixth frame but in the eighth, he just could get on the ball at the batter. Woodley removed him for Noakes, who had two hits and a trio of fly-outs before he was removed in favor of Weeks at Clark. Good-fielding Giardino 2nd. 4 1 2 1 0

In the eighth, Armour batting for Edmunds singled, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Giardino's triple. Noakes replaced Kelleher and Kelly singled to score Giardino. Givard went out, Kelly moving to second and scored on Platt's single, who batted for Thornton. Clarke struck out to end the frame. After Noakes walked the first man in the ninth, he was replaced by Weeks, who struck out Armour. Thornton went to third on Plummer's bad throw and scored after Giardino filed out to deep left, Kelly singled but Latol struck out to end the game.

Experts Who Climbed on Limb For Cubs to Win the Pennant Are Scrambling Back to Earth

Chicago Now Only Two Games in Front of Giants

PIRATES RECOVER

Pittsburg Playing Best Ball of Any Team in Loop

(By Ed Feter, Associated Press Sports Writer).

The "experts" who climbed 'way out on that creaky limb for the Chicago Cubs a couple of weeks ago were scrambling all over each other today, trying to get back before the thing broke in two under them.

You could hear it cracking wide open all over the National League circuit in Brooklyn, New York, whose galloping Giants were only two games off the pace in Pittsburg, where the once-more pounding Pirates were moving along at their fastest pace since early in the season, and in glum Chicago, where they were giving unmistakable signs of quietly folding up and stealing away.

The Bucs pinned the fifth straight setback on the hurlers jinxed Windy City wallopers yesterday, winning 7-6 with a ninth inning rally that "Uncle" Robert took into a virtual tie for third place. At the same time, the Giants, making the most of their newly-discovered ability to hit timely behind their top-flight flinging, belted the Bees 9-1 for their fifth straight win.

Although the Pirates have little of the crack pitching that is starrocketing the Giants along, particularly the masterful left arm of King Carl Hubbell, who turned in a seven-hitter yesterday, the Bucs are belting that apple-and winning the close ones.

Pirate to be Feared

While the Giants have been taking the second division Phillies and Bees during their current winning streak, the Pirates have run into the tougher clubs in the loop, St. Louis and Chicago, with the same result. Yesterday, they took a bat at it, however, it appears the Giants and Pirates may get right it out for the flag, with the Cardinals still to be heard from and the Cubs praying for less bandages on more ball-players.

Meanwhile, the Yankees are slugging along on an 11 1-3 game lead in the American League.

Murderers's row made it three in a row over the Senators yesterday with a 7-6 decision on the strength of Joe DiMaggio's 35th homer, which broke up the ball game in the Ninth inning.

The second place Tigers were trounced thoroughly by the White Sox, losing 8-0 to Vernon Kennedy's four-hit shutowing. The Athletics scored their first win of the year over the Red Sox, 4-2.

The Indians and Browns broke even in a double bill. Cleveland coming through 3-2 in the opener and then dropping an 11-6 closing contest. The Dodgers and Phils were rained out and the Cards and Reds took a day off.

ORIOLES SPLIT

(By The Associated Press)

While the Newark Bears go on their merry way toward clinching the International League pennant, the other Clubs of the loop continued to wage a hot battle for the three other berths in the playoffs. Latest developments on the first division front saw the Syracuse Chiefs draw within a half-game of the second place Montreal Royals with a double win over Toronto while the Buffalo Bisons and Baltimore Orioles maintained their status quo, with a half-game separating the fourth place Bisons from the fifth place Orioles.

The Bears peacefully racing themselves against the record books, approached the point where they can mathematically see up the hunting inside of a week.

Here's the way the situation stood at the end of last night's games:

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

Groups were gathered about the buffet table at the farther end of the terrace. Lorna Lee had wandered out there through another door. They stood apart from the others. There was a smile on Lorna's glow Lorna, her back to Tony, stared across at la Paula. Her eyes had a green cat-shine.

"Well, we historic Lorna." La Paula touched her small mustache and his lips were rather cruel.

"I don't say, thirsty," was Jane's answer. She braced her shoulders, pacing long limbed in her white draperies, beside la Paula's slight figure. "Is Miss Rowland a great friend of yours?"

Those pale mocking eyes could flicker to blue flame. "No woman is ever my friend," le Paula said.

Lorna's high, clear voice reached out like a slender silver hook drawing them up to the surface of attention. "Tha Henri asked you to read, yet?" she called vivaciously. "You'll probably want to paint you with the Kaye emeralds. How about the famous jewels, Tony?" Her small cliffs face sharpened when she looked at Jane. The Kaye emeralds on this girl pricked eyes. Nowhere!

"Well, what about them?" Tony grew busy, pouring himself another drink. Plainly annoyed.

Jane closed cold fingers around the tall frosted glass la Paula handed her. Family jewels she was supposed to wear as Tony's wife! And he hadn't liked any mention of them.

Mrs. Forrest, the willowy woman in pink who had been friendly earlier in the evening, said to Jane with a side-long glance at Lorna—"My dear, they're marvellous, those emeralds. Quite a tradition. It's Napoleon give them to one of the Kaye's for diplomatic services rendered, or something, Tony?"

He set down his glass. "I believe so," he said carelessly. And to Jane—"Let's dance." It was a possessive movement that brought him up to her, blocking out la Paula's slight figure. "In Miss Rowland a great friend of yours?"

Jane glanced up at him as they crossed the terrace toward the house. His grey eyes were restless, his mouth a little grim.

"Having a good time?" he said. "Are you?"

But he didn't answer. The evening had got on his nerves. Loosely, his arm drew Jane to him. He didn't want to think about that moment beside the lake when he had so nearly let himself go.

From the room behind, tormenting, throbbed through the long formal salon of mirrors and red damask. What would Tony say if he knew that old Mrs. Lacey's daughter, brought up in a garage, had never gone anywhere, never done anything until the moment she had whirled herself into the self-created role that her dreams had imagined. These never had been anche good enough—never any boys except Bertram Cotter, and he hadn't counted.

Jane danced instinctively. She let her feet go Tony's way with a sense of floating. His pattern was mechanical; grew more complicated.

"I meant to warn you about the emeralds," he said suddenly. "It's going to be a bit awkward."

Jane fumbled her step. "You mean our agreement doesn't include my wearing them?" Suddenly she was hurt and angry. What did emeralds represent to her, except the indication of her position, a paid performer in a world she could never legitimately enter. Black lashes hid the shadowed blue of her eyes.

"Are we going into that now?" Black eyebrows level over a dark cynical face, quick to label the slightest hint of greed in a woman.

Jane was at the point of calling it all off. Yes, he would be capable of breaking their little contract experiment as quickly and recklessly as he had gone into it.

Jane held on to herself with an effort. No money in the world, she knew now, could ever comfort her for losing him. He would pay her handsomely in releasing her from the bargain; he would admit contemptuously to a mad prank—and be forgiven. And she would never never see him again.

"I don't think it need be a mess," she said slowly, looking up at him again, all her loveliness gathered in her eyes and lips. His arm tightened on a rhythm that swayed them on around the room. And the smile had the peculiar childlike appeal and grace to send any woman's head spinning. The gold of her curls brushed his arm.

Lorna stood framed in the French doors. She hadn't missed the swift clearing of Tony's moody darkness as he danced with this tall golden girl from Nowhere. She drew back to the terace, her hand on la Paula's arm.

"Henri, I want you to do something for me." Usually her nearness wakened light, dainty like electricity passing from him to her.

But tonight, there was no vibration to his response. "And what is ma chere, can I do?"

"You're angry at me, Henri." Lorna pressed closer. "Jealous of Tony?"

La Paula shrugged. "Mais—non."

"Well, you seem to like his wife." Lorna's voice was suddenly hard. "But you and I, darling, can't afford to be jealous of each other, can we? In fact—" She stared at him, narrowing her eyes. "I'm asking you to be particularly nice to her, conspicuously so. You do make love so beautifully, darling. You know what I mean."

"You are a little devil," la Paula said slowly. "You like to make trouble not love in that menage, not so? Why is it my affair to hurt these two if I could?"

"You're not always so scrupulous." Lorna's laugh was angry. "Besides Tony isn't happy. Anyone can see that. They'll be divorced within a year."

"Ah, yes, I understand, there is douce petite femme." With sudden force la Paula gripped her wrist. "But you had better be exareful. Pay what I start. I finish."

Brusquely, he let her go.

CHAPTER VIII.

MOUNTING COMPLICATIONS

After the night of the impromptu party, Lorna Rowland deliberately stayed away from Keystone.

"We really shouldn't have barged in on Tony's first honeymoon," she dropped lightly to others of the Yuzado crowd, scrupulous to Tony's hospitality. "It wasn't fair to Alice-in-Wonderland. That's what he calls her, isn't it quaint? And shouldn't you think someone would know who she is by now with all that publicity and everything!"

As Lorna had hoped, this was the one move that would pique Tony. The flavor of adventure was poisoned by the apparent indifference of Lorna and his friends. He wasn't accustomed to being ignored. Black browed and restless he tramped the acres of his estate, raced his cars or played hell at billiard room. his grey eyes turned away from Jane's loveliness. Grimly he himself roundly for bringing this strange, beautiful girl into his life. He couldn't get out of the situation now without another storm of publicity and scandal.

Jane watched him anxiously. It was Lorna, of course, spoiling that gay reckless companionship she had known with Tony the wonderful day he had carried her off. Of course Lorna would never come back: if only Tony could forget. Jane knew more that devil-may-care look flash to his dark, handsome face. Tony and Katy-Lou Jane waxed nothing more. She loved the dignified spaces of this big quiet house on its hill, the sweep of lawns splashed with gardens, servants at her bidding, and lovely cliffs to roar through the June hours of roses. How far from the small garage of Fond du Lac where she and her father had pored over magazine pictures of fat such stately places, and read of the doing of people who could command leisure and travel. She was so sure that while she held the glamor of mystery, Tony would never throw her off completely. If ever he knew the truth, though, ever knew that she had virtually tricked herself into his world, by sheer luck and a flirtatious woman had played for Tony.

The Honorable the Comte la Paula's oddly light eyes worried her. There was danger in his mind, caressing slow that seemed to hold her framed—a girl in black bleaching in that long window. Jane summed up only the day before she had slightly plunged into her roommate's role. In his slim foreign elegance, la Paula had been a part of those first exciting impressions. Could he have forgotten the brief, startled moment she stepped into the sun almost into his arms!

"I won't let anyone frighten me," she told herself defiantly. "Jane Carey's dead, and only Tony knows that really. I'm Anthony Kaye."

Four days without a sign of Lorna. Jane woke abruptly one afternoon. "Well, this about settles it. Our crazy experiment is a flop, and I'm not sorry I care." But his smile was wry.

Jane found him in the sun on the terrace. Light picked out the gleaming edge of tight yellow curls clustered all over her small head. There seemed no answer to make.

His eyes grew bitter. "I suppose Lorna's too decent to play around a man she considers romantically married."

"Nonsense!" It escaped quite naturally. "She's just playing it on purpose, waiting to see if you'll run after her."

Tony shook his head and stepped nearer, so very tall in his well cut flannels. "I don't think you realize, my dear, how difficult our—enforced solitude is becoming. I'm no saint, God knows." His shoulder of the back, black brows flattened over the long slant of his nose. "I can't promise to keep our agreement if this goes on much longer. I'd better go." he said with savage abruptness, "I went as far as the door of your room last night."

Jane stared at him, her wide set eyes a deep, steady blue. "That just shows how much you know about me," she said slowly, looking up at him again, all her loveliness gathered in her eyes and lips. His arm tightened on a rhythm that swayed them on around the room. And the smile had the peculiar childlike appeal and grace to send any woman's head spinning. The gold of her curls brushed his arm.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL IN MATE WEDS SWEETHEART

The climax of a romance which was renewed at the 'date party' held for students of the Girls Industrial school at Tecumsah, Okla., came when Evelyn Steele, 17, one of the inmates of the school was married to her sweetheart, Hercle Cook, 20, in the school's 'Honor Cottage' recently. Joe Crosson

Chartered by the Russian Embassy at Washington, a Fairchild aeroplane piloted by Bob Randall, veteran northland pilot, has joined in the search for the six missing Russian aviators, down somewhere in the Arctic wastes. Joe Crosson, hero of many northern rescues and the man who flew the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post back to the United States, has also joined in the search. Rescued by Sigismund Lavanefsky, leader of the lost aeroplane, when forced down in the north in 1933, James Mattern is using his $125,000 "flying gas tank" in an effort to find the missing aviators. Mattern is planning to fly to Moscow over the North Pole, though United States federal authorities have refused to approve the flight.

Ward, pediatrician, at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., the disease is one which dates back to before birth.

CAPPS GOLD MINE PROTECTS VEINS

Directors Announce Control of Mineral Rights on 600 Acres

On the advice of J. C. Houston, Consulting Engineer and Hugh Jardine, Mine Manager, the Directors of Capps Gold Mine, a few months ago, quietly set about to obtain additional properties so as to fully protect the strike and dip of their veins. In this they feel that they have been successful, as they now control the mineral rights on approximately 600 acres.

The strike of the Jane Vein is protected for upwards of 4000 feet, and is located on the north of the entire distance, whilst the same is true of the Capps Vein for a distance of around 3000 feet, and it is believed that the dip of both veins are normal to any depth that may be desired.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Aug. 19 (AP)—Leading stocks lipped backward in today's market, losing as much as 2 or more points. Offerings were light and fairly active selling in the morning, reaching a new low for the rate of about 750,000 shares. Mild rallying efforts met with little success and, near the final hour, quotations were around the lows of the day. Steels, motor rubbers, coppers and farm implements were in the forefront of the retreat.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 19 (CP)—Toronto Exchange listings drifted to a lower close today on much reduced volume. All groups posted a preponderance of losses but declines in sessions were mainly of minor importance. The feature was again the selling of Consolidated Chibougamau in which about 140,000 shares changed hands. The price dropped to 40 cents and closed around 47 for a net loss of 12 cents.

The market for McIntyre tightened up to 37 and then for a gain of a point or more. Dome was off slightly and Hollinger held narrowly on the up side. Issues selling down 10 to 15 cents included Read-Authier, Perron, Powell-Rouyn, Central Patricia, Sylvanite, Base Metals and Lapa Cad. Stocks dropping 4 to 8 cents included Francoeur, Pamour, Pickle Crow, Bidgood-Kirkland, Gold Eagle, Hard Rock, Red Lake Gold.

In slow trading Consolidated Smelters boosted up 1¼ and Nickel dropped a point or more and Noranda a point. Pend Oreille, Buffalo Ankerite and Walle-Amulet weakened 10 to 20 cents each, and Falconbridge took a minor loss. Hudson Bay was the only strong spot, advancing 1¼ to 83¼. Losses of 1 to 3 cents were boarded by Three Silvers, Eldorado, Castle and Mining Corporation.

Local Broker Gives Opinion on Gold Stocks

Undoubtedly, the severe setback which the market has suffered during the last three months, especially in the mining stocks, is due mainly to the depression of rumours concerning a possible reduction of the gold price, state Garnam and Ostler, of the Investment Market Letter.

All sorts of conflicting theories on the subject have been advanced but with a cooler view of the situation, it now seems that the unanimous of opinion may be summarized as follows.

The concentration of gold reserves between a few nations must be considered as a temporary and abnormal condition which should be remedied as soon as international trade starts expanding again; the excess of gold held by certain countries shall then flow back throughout the world in the natural exchange of commodities and services.

But such a tendency is possible only with the rising of commodity prices and with the building up of a larger buying power amongst the now less favored nations; these conditions being coincident with prosperity, it is evident, after the recent scare, that any reduction in the price of gold would defeat prosperity by destroying confidence.

The only excuse for controlled economy is in the checking of speculation and the boosting of production; but the very opposite would be effected by the manipulation of gold prices and the restriction of gold output as they would introduce a highly speculative element in the management of currencies and the merchandising of production.

The mere hinting that the price of gold might be reduced had such a depressing effect on the stock market in recent months that it can readily be seen what would happen should it become facts.

As a conclusion it seems evident that any tampering with the price of gold in the present state of affairs would be no wiser than trying to control its production.

Sensational discoveries have been made in townships like Duverny and Vauquelin, production is fast improving in most of the mines, and the general outlook is so favorable at this time of the year that one may confidently expect the gold stocks to soar during the coming months before the highs reached so far in 1937.

High Rate of Exchange Prevents Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine From Refunding Bonds to Advantage

The management of the Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine, Canada Ltd., have given the matter of refunding the company's funded debt a considerable amount of attention. The high rate of exchange for sterling makes it expensive for the company to redeem their 5½ % Mortgage Issue which are due in 1942. About $3,525,000 of these bonds are now outstanding.

However, with earnings of Gypsum, Lime improving steadily there is always the possibility of this issue being outstanding. So far the directors deciding to call in that it would be expensive to do so now. Under existing conditions of the money market the company could probably secure the needed money at a lower rate of interest and at the same time make the interest and principal payable in Canadian funds only. Over a period of twenty years a saving would be substantial in this connection.

Confidence Spreads

Although the stock market as a whole has done very little during the last few weeks there are signs at the present time in conservative financial circles a rather definite feeling of confidence. The point is made that by buying selected common stocks today, a better return on one's money can be obtained than in any other way. Second quarter reports of most leading companies were very good. Many big concerns are today earning considerably a large percentage on the present selling prices of their shares.

Police Interrogate Three Boys About Playground Equipment

Damage to the equipment and properties of the West Belleville playgrounds was reported and investigated by city police last night, and culminated with P. C. Taylor escorting three local teen aged youths to the police station for questioning. Two of the lads emphatically denied being on the grounds, while a third admitted he was playing in that vicinity, but denied any part in destruction of damage to the playground properties.

About 10.00 p.m. last evening P. C. Taylor answered a call to West Belleville playgrounds where it was reported mischievous boys had toppled over one of the higher slides and were generally causing disturbances on that grounds. As pointed out by playground's officials and supervisors, the equipment is placed for enjoyment of the children of this city was supplied at considerable cost to the donors and is used weekly by many thousands of local teen aged children. Wilful destruction of the fun and recreation provided at both local playgrounds.

The three lads in question were subsequently permitted their liberty to return home with instructions to assist in the preservation of the equipment at the playgrounds in the future. Police stated severe punishment would be meted out to persons apprehended or convicted of destroying playground properties in this city, police warned.

American Sailor Killed As Anti-Aircraft Shell Bursts on U. S. Cruiser

18 Men are Wounded as Evacuation Task is Carried Out

SHELL ORIGIN UNKNOWN

Japanese Premier States that Chine Must be Chastised

Shanghai, Aug. 20—(AP)— One United States sailor was killed and 18 wounded tonight when an anti-aircraft shell of undetermined origin struck an after well deck of the cruiser Augusta, flagship of the United Asiatic Fleet.

The Augusta, flagship of Admiral Harry Yarnell, has been lying in the Whangpoo River a little downstream from the heart of the international settlement, covering the evacuation of refugees from stricken Shanghai.

From High Angle

The shell plunged from a high angle. Both Japanese and Chinese artillery and anti-aircraft batteries had been firing furiously through the late afternoon and into the night.

The sailor killed was Freddie John Valgort of Raceland, Florida. None of the 18 wounded was seriously hurt.

Tokyo, Aug. 20—(AP)— Premier Fumimaro Konoye today barred foreign intervention in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war and asserted any settlement must be made by China and Japan alone.

Says Chastisement Necessary

Such a settlement, he indicated, could not be made until Japan had chastised the Chinese army. He said the government had been compelled to abandon its previous attitude of passive defence and assume the offensive with the ultimate aim of effective amicable relations between China and Japan.

Mass of Shanghai Ablaze

Shanghai, Aug. 20—(AP)— A fourth of Shanghai was ablaze tonight as Chinese aircraft struck savagely at Japanese properties along the Whangpoo river and Chinese artillery blasted at Japanese defence lines.

Foreign property suffered heavily as the battle for Shanghai, in its second week, became increasingly destructive of life and wealth.

The whole Pootung waterfront, forming industrial area just across the river from the heart of Shanghai was in flames, the result of heavy bombing of Japanese properties by Chinese planes.

No trouble was apparent at the Monaghan mill, also operated by Dominion Woollens, which was reopened last week, with the Auburn plant. All workers returned to the job and full operations appeared to be under way.

DEATH, DAMAGE FOLLOW IN WAKE OF SEVERE STORM

One Man Killed by Electrocution And Another Killed by Lightning

BROCKVILLE HIT

50 Mile an Hour Wind Accompanies Torrential Rain

By The Canadian Press

Death and destruction were left today in the path of the second cyclonic electrical storm to sweep southern Ontario within three days. Two men were killed, at least 16 persons were injured and the toll of property damage ran into thousands of dollars.

Wind uprooted a tree on the farm of William Breen, 58-year-old North Orford farmer, and it carried Hydro Electric power wires down when it fell. Breen, hastening to extinguish a fire that broke out in the tree, stepped among the live wires and was electrocuted.

At Sarnia, George Rennie, Toronto steel worker, was electrocuted when the air on the Imperial Oil refinery smoke-stack. A lightning bolt struck him and he lost his balance, plunging to death below. A fellow-worker, F. McPhee was uninjured.

Also in western Ontario, at Forest, was a storm accident in which 56-year-old William Codling and two others were stunned by lightning.

The bolt rip ed through Codling's home, blowin, hydro fuses and shocking Mr. Codling. Miss Alice Wright and Mrs. Sam Shepherd.

Forty Cannery Workers Shocked During Storm At Mountain View Plant

Steel Peeling Knife Torn from Worker's Hand—Mrs. Maracle Victim of Severe Shock—Damage at Telephone Office at Mountain View—Exposed Part Burn Destroyed by Fire.

Mountain View, Ont., Aug. 20— (Special)—Thirty women and ten men employees of the Dyment Canning Company were severely shocked shortly after two p.m. yesterday when lightning in a prankish mood charged metal equipment, tables etc. in the tomato room during one of the worst electrical storms experienced in this district in a number of years.

Standing at the peeling tables on the first day of their canning season the women suddenly tensed as a vivid flash of lightning sent blue flames dancing along metal tables. A second later the room was plunged in darkness as fuses and generators were burned out. Grasping tables and other metal-covered objects women and men shuddered while heavy charges of electricity went coursing through their bodies. A steel peeling knife was torn from the hands of one of the women and hurled across the room. Thoroughly frightened and shocked the employees were given a nearby warehouse where one of the employees, Mrs. Maracle, victim of severe shock lay in a stunned condition for over two hours. Others were rushed to their homes suffering from fright and shock.

Other than burned fuses and generators no damage was done to the factory. There was no sign of fire at any time.

Very Strange Happening

"It was one of the strangest things I ever saw" Mr. Jay Sprague, manager of the plant stated today. "It all happened so quickly that one can scarcely remember what actually happened. We searched the premises but could find no trace of the place where the bolt struck, although it were totally destroyed.

must have been in the immediate vicinity." The natural damp conditions of the plant and equipment in such a place afforded a speedy conductor, it is thought.

Serious damage was done in the nearby office of the Sprague Telephone Company. Lightning ripped through a Hydro transformer and through the pressure converter in the interior of the office. Expensive telephone equipment was totally destroyed. Telephone equipment in the district was at a standstill for upwards of two hours. A number of telephones along the various routes in the neighborood were burned out.

Barn Destroyed at Green Point

Lightning flashing down from sinister clouds totally destroyed the barn and outbuildings on the farm property of Arthur Carman, Green Point farmer, about three o'clock yesterday afternoon in one of the worst electrical storms experienced in that part of Prince Edward County in years.

The loss is a severe one as the total crop of the Carman farm was housed in the barn. Drawing in the last load of hay Carman had taken on his horses to the barn door entrance and hitched them to the hayfork.

Lightning flashed from the skies and in a few seconds the barn was a blazing inferno. Men dashed from the nearby fields, while Carman driving his life dashed to the horses, released them from the fork-rope and drove them to safety. The team was the only thing salvaged from the fire. Nine tons of hay, the entire hay and grain crop, several implements, besides other farming accessories

Says in Decade Ontario Will Need Total of 1,250,000 H. P.

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 20—(CP)— Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, in the election of Ontario last night a pledge to "take Hydro out of the vicious political juggling in which it is today." He addressed an open-air meeting in Armoury Park.

The opposition chief said an impending power shortage was the reason for a general election this fall. He challenged Premier Hepburn to deny that a test contract for power for Ontario's publicly-owned system is being negotiated.

Before 10 years are up the province will need 1,250,000 horsepower for industrial consumption and if we face a crisis at that time, Mr. Hepburn is to blame," he said, adding a promise that municipalities would be represented on the Hydro Commission if he is party were victorious.

As To Civil

A vote for David Croll, former Hepburn cabinet minister, Liberal candidate in Windsor-Walkerville was a "vote for the government which "kicked him out of his party," said Mr. Rowe. He had been dismissed from the cabinet because of sympathies for the Committee for Industrial Organization but Hepburn continued to refer to him as "our official who belongs to the C.I.O."

Louis Pine, Chief Conciliation Officer of the Department of Labour, sent, was a member of a trade union committee associated with the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization," said Mr. Rowe.

RUSSIAN SEARCH PLANE ARRIVES

Erroneous Report Today Said Lost Airmen at Point Barrow

Washington, Aug. 20—(AP)— The United States War Department announced today it had received advices that four Russian fliers landed at Point Barrow, Alaska, on the night on a flight from Siberia in search of Sigismund Levanefsky and his four-man trans-polar flier companions who have been lost for a week.

Reports to the Department also said the Russian icebreaker, Krasin, had been sighted off the coast of Alaska, presumably participating in the search.

An early story today from Edmonton said that "the Russian transpolar airmen arrived at Point Barrow, Alaska, this morning, the Royal Canadian Signals station at Edmonton reported."

This was not correct as U.S. signal officials reported in Seattle later said Levanefsky and companions "positively did not arrive at Barrow." There was a Russian searching plane, that arrived.

Reviews Record of Gov't. And Plans For Future if Returned

Amidst the thunderous acclaim of hundreds of Liberal delegates from the four corners of the riding of West Hastings, the Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health and present sitting Member, accepted the nomination for the constituency of West Hastings at the nomination meeting held in the Armoury in Belleville at Marmora yesterday afternoon.

Proposed by Ernest Ellis, Trenton, the name of Dr. Faulkner was the only one submitted to the convention. The motion that nominations be closed was moved by Mayor H. A. Ponton of Belleville previously mentioned as a possible nominee, contestant to Dr. Faulkner.

Surging waves of approbation from the assembled hundreds in the tightly crowded building greeted the acceptance of Dr. Faulkner as candidate, who will oppose Mayor R. D. Arnott in the coming provincial general elections.

Had to Change Plans

One of the hearing rain storms of the season, which descended over the district during the afternoon, necessitated changes in the plans of the committee, who had hoped that the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Premier would address the meeting from an outside platform in the fair grounds. This, however, was not pursuit to the general business of the convention.

In response to the questions addressed by chairman and secretary-treasurer F. A. Bapty of Deloro, it was revealed, that 66 delegates from Belleville were present. This was a total complement of the number allowed, two to each vote. It was announced by president of the Belleville Association, Mr. Percy Thompson.

The village of Stirling had a total of eight delegates present, Mayor Corry; Hawdon fourteen; Marmora, village and Marmora Township twelve and Herschel, sixteen present. President Thos. Laycock checked each municipality as the delegates were numbered.

In the absence through illness of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, Mr. Laycock pointed to the fact that four years ago he had held the similar position, and "had been unable to get away from it from the chairman.

"However Mr. Hepburn is the next Premier of Ontario", he de-

Why the Weather?

Mayor A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Primitive refrigeration!

Everyone knows how evaporation cools things. This principle is used by the natives of India to make ice. They leave porous vessels of water or bottles of water wrapped with moist cloth or sacking out to the cool dry night wind. Or, they place shallow pans of water on deep beds of straw usually in shallow pits. The straw insulates the pans from the warm earth. The cool, dry wind in all cases causes rapid evaporation, the water cools and if intense enough ice is formed. In the early days and even now, travelers in the dry regions of the west expose porous water bags to the wind which keeps the water pleasantly cool to drink.

Entire Universe is Shrinking, Finding of Prof. Sambursky

Radius of Electron is Shortening He Says

NEW PRINCIPLE SEEN

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE,
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Aug. 20—(AP)— S. Sambursky, 36, of the Hebrew university, Jerusalem, today gives in the Physical Review, his evidence that the universe is shrinking, with everything in it, including even the measurable units of energy.

His idea is as startling as Einstein's discovery of the curvature of space-time and somewhat analogous in setting. Einstein was also a young man when he startled the world. His then unbelievable theory. Sambursky, German born, has been a quiet, unknown scientific worker in Jerusalem since 1924, except for two years of science work in Holland.

The American Scientific Journal in which his article considered by both its worthiness and Sambursky's standing among scientists who know him.

Evidence of theory

His evidence of shrinking comes from recent discoveries made with the world's largest telescope at Mt. Wilson, California. This telescope shows that apparently the nebulae, island universes of stars, are all rushing away from the earth.

Their apparent speeds run to 25,000 miles a second. For several years this was discussed as proof the universe is expanding at an explosive speed.

NO SCULLING OARS FOUND IN CITY

Careful search among the cobwebbed rafters of boat houses in this city has failed to produce a single sculling oar of the old-fashioned type, once so commonly used by watermen along the harbor front.

Interest in the art of sculling has again been aroused by the statement of a local resident that the art of sculling, as single oar sculling — had been lost to the younger generation. He said the end, willingness to donate a cash prize for any trip in sculling that might be staged, was voiced by the local man.

"I haven't seen a sculling oar for years. Nor have I seen anyone around here using that means of rowing for about as long", it was stated by one veteran harborman this morning.

BARBER SCHEDULE IS EXPLAINED

Explanation in full of the various phases of the Industrial Standards Act as applying to the barbers' trade in Belleville, was given to approximately twenty-five representatives of the Belleville Barbers' Association by J. Crawford, Industrial Enforcement Officer of the Ontario Department of Labor, at a meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

The meeting was called following the publication in the Intelligencer of a schedule of hours, labor and wages, arising from a special meeting held here a few weeks ago at which a representative of the Industrial Standards Branch drew up the schedule at the request of members of the local association.

Every phase of the schedule was explained in full by Mr. Crawford to the satisfaction of everyone present with the result that one hundred per cent of the barbers of the city will fall in line with the new scale of wages, operations closing and hours of labor.

Open discussion took place following the address of the guest speaker and many grievances and other matters were satisfactorily ironed out. The new scale of operations charges went into effect on August 19th.

Berry Pickers Lost For Night at Marmora

Lost while blackberry picking near Marmora this week, Mrs. Arthur Eggleton, Miss Ida Gillen, and Mr. Arthur Neal of the village, wandered for hours before they finally located the home of a settler, some three or four miles from their parked car, from which they telephoned for aid.

Starting their berry picking in the forenoon, the party gradually edged away from the car, finally wandering in circles. Late in the afternoon they sighted one home, but fog later obscured it from view. During the night they managed to keep dry by the lighting of a fire. At daybreak they started for the home sighted the day before and finally reached the farm of Mr. Gawley. During the night search had been instituted by relatives under the direction of county constable Percy Gray and provincial officer A. Dymond, Telephone, Gawley home from Marmora, Ontario. In addition to Mr. Gawley home finally called off the search.

Obituary

REV. J. F. PARKE

Bayfield, Aug. 20—Rev. James Francis Parke of Bayfield, died after an illness of several months, at his summer home, Bayfield, Ont. Mr. Parke was the last of his family of 1933. During his long ministry he served his church as a missionary, who gave his name as George Woodman, when he appeared before Magistrate R. F. Butler, K.C., in today's police court and pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication.

"Did you say you were going to work for General Williams?" inquired Assistant Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. "Yes sir", replied Woodman.

"Well you'll have a long trip ahead of you, General Williams has gone to Winnipeg," informed Mr. Donnan as he looked knowingly towards the bench. "He has?" was the only startled reply in a section of Ontario. His association with Greenshields was over a period of thirty years.

The late Mr. Calder was born at Wick Caithness, Scotland, and is survived by one brother, Capt. James Calder and two nieces, Miss Mary Norbes and Miss Dorothy Norbes who reside in that country.

During the Great War Mr. Calder enlisted in Western Canada and overseas he served as an officer in the Imperial Black Watch. Fraternally he was a 32nd. degree Mason and a charter member of one of the Masonic lodges at Edmonton, Alberta. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

POLICE COURT

Woodman could make. He was sentenced to serve 15 days.

Two old offenders to the L.C.A. appeared charged with intoxication, a six residents of this city. Upon one His Worship postponed sentence for one month, during which the latter must not be in possession and must report weekly to Chief Kidd. The other stated he was deaf "and could not hear at all", but when His Worship accepted a plea of guilty and stated the fine would be ten dollars and costs and default of payment 15 days, the accused spoke up and stated he was unable to pay the amount fine and would have to accept the jail term, that dates from the time of his arrest last Saturday.

William Babcock, Belleville, pleaded guilty to selling liquor, contrary to the L.C.A. and was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail, without the option of a fine. The dwelling was declared a public house under the meaning of the Act, at the request of Mr. Donnan. As a sequel to the above case a local resident pleaded guilty to consuming and paid the minimum fine. Both above cases arose out of an arrest occurring on the C. C. Arcuit last Saturday night. Police revealed today they secured statements regarding a bottle of liquor found in his possession and allegedly purchased from Babcock.

A domestic case of long standing was heard in camera following the regular court proceedings. His Worship attentively listened to the arguments of Mr. Donnan and R. D. Arnott, who appeared for the accused man, and subsequently suggested the man and wife endeavour to settle their own differences amicably. The mallet was enlarged sine die.

The general's resignation is believed the result of his inability to change the course of President Lazaro Cardenas' revolutionary program, which threatens to drive all foreign capital out of Mexico. J. McIntosh Gets 12 -Pound Trout

One of the finest specimens of the grey trout species to be caught in the northern lakes of Hastings County fell to the lure of Jack McIntosh, prominent Belleville merchant, on Monday morning. Weighing twelve pounds, seven ounces, the flinny beauty threshed and fought at the end of one hundred and seventy-five feet of line before it was hauled in the boat, off the shore of Salmon Lake. In company with a friend Mr. McIntosh threw out a gold "Wobbler lure" and within the space of a few minutes the fish struck. "It gave us an interesting five minutes", Mr. McIntosh stated, "but we finally landed it after a hard fight." The fishermen caught three other fine specimens of trout later but these did not quite come class as the twelve pound beauty.

AS AIRMEN FEEL AND ACT

What a galaxy of men and women aviation has created! No one can deny the bonds which tie together these folk of the air who in most modern of callings and achievements preserve their humanity at its highest. One has but to look over the annals of aviation to discover the heroism which is the badge of those who dare the elements above the ground and the universal recognition of that courage by fellow aviators.

Man has always dared to think of the day when he could be as a bird and fly. But man has achieved more than the bird. The bird developed wings which are utilised for flight from one climate to another and for migrations, for gathering of food and for protection. While the flier may follow in some ways the uses to which the bird puts its wings in the main, the aviator, while called a bird-man, is never as a bird, his plane is separate from himself and he uses artificial wings for many purposes of which no bird has ever dreamed (if birds do dream at all). He has gone on errands of mercy to bring a doctor to a patient or to carry a patient to a doctor; he has dared tempests in the air to bring serum through to those who are stricken; he has explored in the few years in which aviation has been known most parts of the known earth and gone to many places hitherto unknown. His last crowning achievement has been the flight over the top of the earth with nothing but air between him and earth, himself suspended in that outer blanket by which the earth is surrounded and by which everything that lives lives, namely, air, or atmosphere.

The newest of the achievements of mankind has made him no less chivalrous, perhaps even more so, for he will give his life in the hope of bringing aid to another in distress whether that other be a flier or such other citizen to earth.

This bond of airmen is a happy augury of days to be. It means that planes in warfare do but a very small fraction of the part they will play and are intended to play in human affairs.

In these latter days we have seen men risk their lives for others who could not understand their tongue and their customs, who might even be considered some day their country's enemies if undesired war should come. Surely this is a sign of a better day to be when men of all races will understand that war is really the negation of progress. Doubtless most of the aviators see that today and hope that war scares may disappear and that men of different races can look upon one another as airmen look upon airmen, as true heroes and gentlemen whose kindly relations and recognitions no such thing as war will ever mar, or frustrate.

THIS EMPIRE OF OURS

"The Wonderful British Empire", at the time of the accession of King George Sixth, has appeared in Plymouth, England, in its eighth and revised edition. It is the work of the Rev. Alexander Sharpe of St. Barnabas, Plymouth, who says "a little honest boasting will do no harm in view of the little pride so many take in the Empire." It is published by F. E. Sachs and Co., Sydney St., Plymouth, England, at the price of two pence.

When the compiler says the proudest boast one can make today is "I am a Citizen of the British Empire" he says truth for the British Empire sway is greater and more cosmopolitan than was ever that of imperial Rome when a man boasted of his Roman citizenship as the proudest possession in life. The ancient Roman had a right to boast (it was really not boasting) of his Roman citizenship for Rome has brought to the world many blessings, she opened up the world by her imperial ambitions though one cannot agree with her methods of conquest, she taught the world the value of the supremacy of the law and the importance of government. Britain with 496,000,000 subjects who have tasted freedom, and known it from the standpoint of most of the races of the world as people of many races, to whom it brings security and liberty has a citizenship of which the world may be proud.

Reading this little book of facts one can agree with the words of General Smuts. "You are not an Empire; you are half the world," and as Botha said "Britain is the cornerstone upon which civilization must rest."

One of the most striking statements on the cover of this little collection of imperial facts is this "England has reproduced herself more than any other country the world has ever seen. If England were to sink into the sea she would continue to live in a hundred new Englands scattered over the globe. Thus, so to speak, England can never die."

In the light of such words one can read this booklet, a treasury of facts, about the greatest political fact in history.

AUGUST DAYS

In the quiet dawn of an August day
When silence enfolds the morning gray,
When shadows lie on the rock-strew sand
And dews lie damp o'er the meadow land,
Then in the hush of the waiting earth—
Silently waiting the day's re-birth,
A spirit comes the heart to cheer,
And the presence of God seems very near.

Then over the sunlit harvest fields,
Where August her golden treasure yields,
I heard the harvester's lusty song
As he drives his sturdy team along,
And the binder's hum seems a song of praise
To God for the wealth of harvest days,
For He alone sends sun and rain
That the earth may bud and bloom again.

O August days with your wealth of gold,
Your fruit and flowers and gifts untold,
Your quiet dawns and your moon-lit nights
Your days with old and rare delights,
Ah soon! too soon! you are drifting by
I check a tear and a rising sigh—
Your magic power o'er my heart holds sway
For I was born on an August day.

COLUMBUS DISCOVERED AMERICA

a small part of America, at that, but the writer discovered Columbus, all of it, recently, a pretty country village nestling in the midst of an exceptionally fine agricultural country, north of Oshawa. Motoring up hill and down dale, some pretty steep hills at that, we came to Inniskillen, an ideal village of comfortable houses, with an unmistakeable air of well being and a sufficiency of this world's goods, backed by farm after farm bearing every evidence of competent and painstaking care with satisfactory rewards. Innisklillen's chief claim to greatness lies in the fact that here the first McLaughlin carriage factory was located. From Innisklillen to Bowmanville a splendid paved road carries one through a splendid farming country and several charming villages far enough from the madding throng to distill comfort and contentment in copious quantities. The visit to Innisklillen was the result of a well known Belleville business man having happened to be born there where his father was the village storekeeper. There he learned to coo and crawl, then to walk and run, and very soon to enroll in the little red school house. At fourteen the family moved to the city in order to afford the children opportunity of higher education—but before he ceased to be a villager this Belleville business man in the making attained fame, if not fortune by becoming the organist in the village church and Sunday School, without salary, working week days on a farm for six dollars per month and victuals. This then made the visit more enjoyable for all concerned with the revelation that the "ole swimmin' hole" was still down in the hollow under that clump of trees, and that there were still "blood suckers" in the creek. The steep declivity where the lads and lassies used to slide down hill stood silent and lonely as if recalling the joyous shouts and laughter of the days of long ago when sliding was all the go in the winter time. Then there were the farms where identical fence posts planted well and truly by the youthful six footer a month farmer were identified. The successful search for the Sunday School teacher who first directed the youthful minds into the mazes of Old Testament history and romance—the meetin' house and the new house for the parson, and all the rest of the old time remembrances and improvements calculated to cause the throat to constrict and the eyes to get just a bit watery, passed slowly before the vision so long obscured by big buildings and many people. Innisklillen may we never forget thee, and Columbus Hampton and other peaceful places where it would seem no sin or discord or trouble can enter, may you always be as peaceful and happy as you seemed that day in the summer of 1937 to a stranger and to one who looked upon you once again with the eager eyes of youth, as the threshold of a great and wonderful world which had its beginning just beyond that distant row of poplar trees.

Why Some Motorists Get So Much More From The Cars They Buy

It is well known to motorists who have owned several cars that while all cars of a given make may be the same when they leave the factory, they are not the same when they leave the local dealer, nor do they render the same performance through the years of ownership.

The principal function of the local automobile dealer is not only to see that the customer gets his car in the same perfect mechanical condition in which it passed the final factory inspection, but to see that it is properly conditioned and adjusted to the owner's needs, and further, to see that he gets full utility value from the car throughout its entire life. Nobody else can assume that responsibility and fulfill its obligations.

Here we deliver these plus values to those who buy Pontiac, McLaughlin-Buick Cars and G.M.C. Trucks, and provide all the requirements of good performance to Pontiac, McLaughlin-Buick and G.M.C. Truck owners, to the end that they get uninterrupted satisfaction in the use of their cars and trucks.

Little Benny's Note Book

This afternoon it was even hoter than yestiday, and ma was in the living room looking for dust and fanning herself, saying, Really, I mean really, such temperature shouldn't be allowed. When it gets so that a person cant think of anything but the heat, its time to call a halt, she said.

Giving me a idea, and I said, May ma, does my forehead feel hot?

What, why should it? I mean, how do you mean, hot? ma said, and I said, I mean any hotter than usual?

O dear now what's all this? pay ma said, Why didn't you say something before? Come here and let me feel it. Why, I dont feel a thing, she said, and I said, O, ma, do you mean there's no sensation there at all?

I mean there's absilutely nothing hot about your forehead, ma said. At least as far as I can make out. What gave you such an idea, I mean when did you first notice it? she said, and I said, Notice what, ma?

About your forehead being hot, you silly thing, ma said, and I said, Well O, ma, you said there was absilutely nothing hot about it, so how could I notice it?

Whose forehead is it yours or mine? ma said, and I said, Mine, but O, ma you felt it with your hand.

Does your forehead feel hot or doesn't it? ma said and I said, No ma'm.

Then I'm going to tell your father he must be mistook in those boys, and you know what he thinks of falsehoods, ma said, and I said, Holey smokes, ma I never even said it was hot I just asked you if it was to take your mind off the heat and do you a favor.

The result being she didn't tell pop on account of thinking he mite think it was funny.

Wich he did, me telling him myself to find out.

Stirling, Aug. 20—Sixty-five young people representing Young People's Unions in all parts of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada are this week gathered on the United Church property at Oak Lake for a week's study in young people's leadership training. Coming, many of them from larger centres within the Conference they are combining a healthy vacation period with specially prepared study courses in religious training. Exchanging constructive ideas for the betterment of young people's organization within the church these courses planned by experts in leadership training provide means of acquiring knowledge necessary by Union officials in fulfilling their duty in young people's work throughout the winter months when they are most active.

Child Needs Friends of Own Age

Associating too Much With Adults is Apt to Harm Him Later

By Lisa Grenelle

Susie was the youngest of a big family, very much the youngest. When Susie first became conscious of her surroundings, Sis, Sadness, Fred and Allen, and sisters, Mary and Ann, loomed almost as large to her as Mother and Father and, as time went on, rather more impressive.

Susie, as soon as she could walk, toddled after her brothers and sisters, and they petted her and fiddled her and were enough older to tolerate her with patience.

Susie grew to scorn any other companionship. Children of her own age bored her. They couldn't do such exciting things as her own brothers and sisters. They didn't say such interesting things; nor were they as kind or attentive. Susie's own contemporaries, small, dumb and unimportant compared to such magnificent beings as Fred, Allen, Mary and Ann, were also much rougher and ruder, and were always wanting their own silly, stupid way which proved very tiresome to Susie.

Unpopular Child

That was how it happened that Susie grew precocious, fed on grown words and manners. She was very polite, according to grown-up standards, but the sort of politeness that sat rather oddly and artificially upon an eight-year-old, and seemed even a little impertinent sometimes.

So Susie was not popular at school. She "put on airs", so the children thought. Certainly, she scorned the silly pranks of her classmates and took little pains to hide her scorn. Susie kept to herself and went home as soon as she vowed, never going back to school in the afternoon for games, as the other children did.

For the first years it worked out quite well enough. Susie was content; lessons were easy and school hours short. Not until she was 10, or maybe 11, was Susie aware of any serious lack in her life. Not until then did she begin to realize, vaguely but intensely, that she did not really belong in the life of her brothers and sisters; nor was she really altogether wanted there.

A Needs Companionship

At 10 or 11 pride and understanding began to push their way through, six or seven never thinks whether or not he or she is wanted, whether or not he or she belongs. Children that age come anyhow, anywhere they are forcibly stopped. But 10 or 11 (sometimes not until 13) wants to belong, to be wanted, needed, a real part of the business.

Susie didn't belong in her brothers' and sisters 'lives, and she knew it now. And she developed no liking for one among her contemporaries, for she had made no place for herself among them. It was perhaps too late to make one until the high-school years.

It is kinder, in the end, for older brothers and sisters not to be so available in allowing small sister or brother to spend all his or her time in their vicinity. It is kinder, in the end, for mothers to insist that children of Susies specials get into the time with children of their own age, even though at first a little unwillingly.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A big success is that of an evening jacket of taffeta satin in coral white, its sleeves embroidered with bright leather ourlines. The sleeves are wide; the hem is loose in back.

In the air go trimmings on Autumn hats. A black felt hat has a high crown, and additional height is given by a waterfall of bright blue uncurled ostrich placed at one side.

Big moments by the beach include a costume consisting of blue and white cotton halter and a flying shorts, the halter topped off by a dazzling white sharkskin bolero.

Right on top of the evening dress color card is white, for wraps as well as for dresses. A beauty of a coat is a redingote of white faille, double-breaster, with crystal buttons setting off the silk back ground.

A dash to any suit would be given by Chanel's fancy use of vest organza with its great semicircle of tucks in front and two matching cabbage roses at the neck. The sleeves have tucked semi-circles, too.

More luxury awaits us this Autumn, judging from the accessories we have seen already. A grand ensemble of glove and bag is at black dendrite, both with scalloped gold metal borders.

Fashionable Figure Is Normal, Shapely

By Helen Follett

Take a look-in at any fashion show and you will notice that the extremely slim janes are not among the beauteous models. The fashionable figure is the normal one. Which means that from the slender waist there is a graceful outward curve toward the thighs, and second! Yum! Not cushions, mind you, Neal, nice, trim hips.

Proportion is the aim. The bedslat shape is out, fat is just as decidedly in. Bones and angles, babies most whittle down, skinnies must fill out. Diet and exercise combined with horse sense will do the business unless health is not normal.

Heavyweights and lightweights need plenty of sunshine and fresh air. The woman of considerable bonnage must have vigorous exercise if she is to obtain the slimped tissue. The thin one must have enough exercise to chip up a normal appetite but not so much that she suffers fatigue. Rest is her good friend. Plenty hours of sleep are what the beauty doctor orders.

Now that the girls are growing embonpoint again, it is just as well to know how to groom the little furnaces that ornament the forehead.

Ginger Rogers

The modish miss has graceful hips these days

Who suffer from whose flocks of styles usually have intestinal troubles of one form or another, though some eye specialists claim these horrid little boils on the lids accompany faulty digestion.

Do nothing at all about the cold sore; it will take care of itself. Apply hot, boric compresses to the eye. When a yellow point appears, break the head on it by pressing on the pus.

When filing the finger nails, don't work far down at the sides. If you do, the cuticle will harden, and there will be trouble.

Use a fine-grained, flexible steel file. Rub in orange wood stick under the nail care to bring out little shreds that may remain, fluff them away with the emery board. Don't soak the hands before doing this beauty chore.

Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

She Doesn't Want to Go Out on the Sly

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a young fellow 19 years of age, on the sly, for the past two or three months. I am 18. My parents have said, over and over again, they would not allow any boy to take me out or call at our home unless we were going "steady".

This boy does not wish to go out on the sly any longer.

One evening I came in at 11.30, and mother was nearly frantic. Of course, I lied and pretended I had been with my girl friend, though I had been with the boy from seven to eleven. Mother found out about this, and has prohibited me from seeing this boy and all my other friends, both girls and boys.

We do like each other but we know we're too young to talk about marriage. Do you advise me to go against my parents' wishes, and continue to see him on the sly? How shall I act toward him when I am to meet him at a certain club function, the end of this month?

Miserable

Hard as it is, I'm not going to advise you to sneak, which is always bad for one's character, and in the case of discovery, such as you've experienced, leads to humiliation. Opposition is the spice of many youthful love affairs which would die a natural death if parents did not make them so attractive by prohibiting them.

When you meet this boy at the club, dance, be natural. And here's hoping your mother will be a bit more reasonable.

She Can't Keep From Blushing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Is there anything I can take, or any exercise I can go through with, or anything else I can do, to keep me from the miserable habit of blushing? Please don't think I'm some rustic village maiden, who has never gone anywhere or met anyone. We have a normal household, a father, mother, two brothers and self. I graduated from high school in June, but blush violently when anyone speaks to me, especially a boy.

I've been to dancing school and dance well, and yet, when a fellow asks me to dance, I turn the color of a lobster. I just hate it.

Furious-With-Myself

To find a blushing girl at present day is to come across a pearl of great price. So please do not be in too great a hurry to recover from this blessing. You probably have a very fine skin, through which the emotions are easily detected.

The late Professor William James had a theory about blushing. A girl blushes, not because she is embarrassed; she is embarrassed when she blushes. The flushing of the cheek comes first; afterwards, and then only, comes the emotional reaction. Wrinkles do come from it, a gift of the gods. Don't worry over it.

Brother Ronny's Clothes

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

WNU Service.

The big ship was nosing her way slowly out of the Channel on her homeward voyage—homeward at least for Ronny Dickinson, for he said:

"It sure is grand and glorious to travel and see bits of the world's," said Ronald. "But it's grander and more glorious to be going home again. What do you say, Sis?"

Connie snuggled her hand deeper into the warmth of her brother's tweed-clad arm.

"I say the same," she laughed. "But if we hadn't been in London and seen that little shop in Fleet street with this tweed in the window, you never would have had your precious coat and plus fours, I simply dote on the smell of this tweed."

The sort of taken with it myself, said Ronny. "I'm not so sure old Dickinson will get his when we get another man as I do with you."

Ronny squeezed his sister's arm against his side. "Well I have a good deal the same, old girl, especially as I'm not just too keen on Dickinson. Perhaps it's just because I don't think any man good enough for my sister."

And then to change the subject Connie asked: "And have you seen your cabin companions yet, I have drawn quite a charming girl from Washington."

"No—I haven't caught sight of mine. Hope he'll be a decent sort and doesn't suffer from mal-de-mer the violent manner." He glanced at his watch. "Oh, I say, hadn't we better be going below to unpack and dress for dinner? I'll meet you along this deck before dinner."

Connie disengaged her arm from his and wished now that she too had a coat made of the fragrant tweed.

They went below and Connie unpacked the dainty frocks she had picked up in Paris and the lovely lumper suits from London, and while she slipped into a pretty evening frock she enjoyed chatting with her cabin mate.

Later, resplendent in a soft cloak of old blue velvet and celestial fur, Connie went up on deck to search for her dearly loved brother.

Meantime, a silver wedge of moonbeam had found its way into the evening sky and had cast so radiant a path out across the silver sea that Connie felt her spirit snatched up into the air and all earthly troubles were left behind. A pang of sadness gripped Connie as she suddenly longed for a kindred soul to share these rare moments. Then, unbidden, there rose she knew that Paul Dickinson, the man she had so practically promised to marry, would never share them.

Ronny had it. He shared every moment with her and she knew, with a little thrill of pleasure, far away, that his soul would be swept, partly, by the same ethereal moon, that path that led—on and on—to her.

Yes, there he was, standing right where Connie had left him.

Connie could tell by the line of his tall, slim figure that the new coat that he was drinking in the beauties of the night. For a second only she hesitated, then with him out of his dreaming, but knowing he would welcome her, she crept softly up to him and slipped a arm swiftly into his.

"Ronney dear, isn't it glorious and wouldn't we love to talk on forever and ever across that moonpath." She pressed against the fragrant tweed and even brushed her cheek against his shoulder. "Just you and I."

Ronny didn't move a muscle and even Connie wondered so at his tense an admiration. She stirred slightly.

"I'm not Ronny but I'd love to talk and on—over the moonpath—just you and I. I am not your brother but I wish I were."

Connie was speechless in her error and found nothing to do but to hastily withdraw.

"Your brother was so kind as to invite me to dinner his coat, but had the ill luck to lose mine just before coming on board. Left it hanging in a friend's cabin and some chap helped himself to it." John Varney was talking almost at random for Connie's hair was like starlight and her eyes great pools of flame. "Your brother is my friend mate. Oh, here you are, old thing, we've just been agreeing in the second of the tweed coats."

Ronny had never seen his sister looking so abashed and lost and simply could not find amusement when the situation was made clear to him. He then introduced the two and left them alone silently out over the silver moonpath.

Later, very much later that night when all three went below, Ronny smiled softly to himself as he thought: "Dear old Dickinson," he thought, "he'll never get 'yes' for an answer from Connie Love at first sight—but right into it through a tweed coat —and my coat at that."

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Acceptance and Regrets

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been invited to my employer's daughter's wedding and reception. I know the bride very well personally.) I will be unable to attend the reception, but I will attend the wedding in the church. Please tell me how to word my regrets.

Should I give a reason for not being able to attend [she-reception] or I would not like to offend my employer as he is most kind.. Two of the other girls in the office are going to attend, and then there are several who are not been reception. . . hence I do not want to appear ungrateful.

Reader.

You do not say what kind of invitation was sent to you, but I take it for granted that it was two separate invitations, formal, one to the church ceremony, and one to the reception.

The invitation to the church ceremony . . . the one that reads "request the honour of your presence" . . . it is not necessary to answer. But the invitation to the reception that is reading "request the pleasure of your company" . . . it is necessary to answer.

In your formal acknowledgment of this reception-invitation it is not necessary to give a reason for your regrets. The your very best letter-paper, white or gray and double-sheeted, and on the first page write your answer, spacing the lines as nearly as possible as they were spaced in the invitation. Like this:

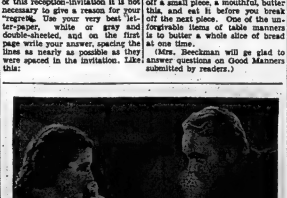
Miss Marion Sammis regrets that she will be unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's parents') kind invitation for their daughter's wedding, reception on Thursday, the tenth of September

I suggest that, under the circumstances you so definitely set forth, you might send a box of flowers to the bride-to-be, to arrive on the morning of the wedding. This would be a courtesy-bow that she would appreciate.

Bread and Bread

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Do you think it should help one self to crisp bacon when it is passed on a platter? One would not use a fork, would one?



2—When eating bread, should one lift the whole slice to the mouth, or break the piece into smaller bits?

Reader

1—On the platter with the bacon it is being passed. Even if it should be, for good service, a small serving-fork and serving-spoon. Then, as you, serve yourself from the platter, you should take the spoon in your right hand, and the fork in your left hand, and lift the pieces of bacon to your plate. If you find that there is only a fork as a serving-piece on the platter, you should use this as conveniently as possible.

2—From the slice of bread break off a small piece, a mouthful, butter that, and eat it before you break off the next piece. One of the unforgivable items of table manners is to butter a whole slice of bread at one time.

Mrs. Beeckman will ge glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

DEATH, DAMAGE

near Stittsville, while Thomas Keyes, Carp, received a shock from a wire when an automobile struck a truck in the storm.

Thrifle wind lifted the roof from the Queen's Hotel at North Toronto causing it into the street. Four automobiles were damaged and falling trees disrupted power and communications. Many other scattered districts reported loss to crops. Wire services were disrupted in Brockville, Smith's Falls, Perth, Vankleek Hill and Hawkesbury.

Serious fires were caused by lightning blasts and spread by the wind. A bolt struck a transformer and lpvelled a four storey frame and stucco stores building of the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph. Forty prisoners were called out to fight the blaze, and with the help of Kingsway guards, prevented its spread to other prison buildings.

90 Mile Wind

A 90-mile wind spread fire from the barn of Percy Clements in Dover and township near Chatham to destroy William Graham's home, 200 yards away. Two other farms were threatened by flying shingles. Alvin Graham, 19, in bed with a broken leg, was carried from the burning house.

Mount Forest, north of Guelph, was hit by its worst storm. Half the trees in town were shattered or uprooted. Three barns were destroyed, several others damaged, a greenhouse, several verandahs and a back kitchen were battered by cyclonic winds.

In Toronto, eight street cars were stalled by blown fuses. A roof damage was done to Simpson Avenue United Church steeple. Farmers in suburban districts lost buildings. One at Britannia lost five calves and four pigs when a log house was burned. Lightning set his barn with $6,200 loss.

Farmers grumbled about the delay caused thrashing and harvesting operations and eyed their flattened fields, particularly oats. Hail accompanied the rain in parts of Huron County. Trees were blown down in several sections, blocking roads and tearing down telephone lines. Orchards suffered.

Windmills Blown Down

Lambton County was caught in the storm's path. On concessions two and four, Bosanquet, several buildings on the farm of William Zavitz and Edward Price were damaged. Part of the roof of William Sitter's barn was blown 100 feet.

Middlesex reported damage to stocked grain from excessive moisture, which germinated and is sprouting. Two large barns in Alma Dairy district were destroyed by lightning and destroyed. Both were on the farm of Simon Thompson and were valued at $2,000 exclusive of the season's harvest. H. A. Lampher, east of Highfield, also had his barn and part of the Highfield Tile Yard roof torn away by the storm.

Preston, Guelph, Galt and Strafford reported damage. In Strafford district one was accounted by lightning that knocked down the chimney in Mrs. Montgomery's house. It also hit a water pipe, flooding the home where three children were sleeping. They were called from work to turn the water off.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 20—(AP)—Stocks failed to find anchorage in today's market and leading issues drifted downward on a light selling current.

There was a brief unimpressive rally at the start. The list soon began a slow slide and, with the exception of a handful of specialties that managed to hold small gains, losses ran to 3 or more points near the final hour. Transfers were at the rate of about 850,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 20—(CP)—The Toronto market registered a slight decline today on a slowing up of trading. Not the close some of the Golds recovered part of their early losses but other groups finished around their level for the day. Volume was down about 100,000 shares from that of the previous session. Consolidated Chibougamau stood up against pressure and closed only a cent or two down for the day.

Preston East and Dome was under selling pressure and the price slumped to 1.14 before receiving buying support and it then recovered to around 1.20 to show a net loss of 3 cents. Other issues offered in considerable volume at losses of moment.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Buffalo Ankerite Report for First Six Months

The report of the mine manager shows increased tonnage and increased production for the period. The production for the first six months was 134,305 tons as compared to 163,436 tons recovered during the same period of 1937, and increase of 30.66 per cent. Bullion recovery for the first six months of 1936 was $1.20 and for the same period in 1937 it was $1.313, 011.96, an increase of 24.7 per cent.

Although diamond drilling is continuing below the 1600 level favorable proving ground, mine management is making all plans for sinking within the near future as one is already selected.

Capital expenditure for improvements during the period amounted to $134,530.32. The installation of new hoisting equipment to enable the company to purchase higher grade ore at a cheaper rate than heretofore paid should accomplish considerable saving to the company.

Development work on mining claims in the north continued during the second quarter.

Net profits from operations for the six months period after making provision for taxes is $509,546 or $2.43 a share as at the $1.48 per share per annum. The rate for the first quarter was $1.43 per share per annum and 76c per share per annum for the year 1936.

The Ore Reserves have increased as shown by the figures as of June 30th, 1937.

	Tons
Broken Ore Reserves	160,891
Positive Ore Reserves	765,870
	926,770

$20.67	$20.67	$35.00
$5.00	948,536.00	1,436,995.7
5.83	4,500,546.00	7,835,222.8
	3,357,082.00	9,972,218.30

Some nervousness over the far-East situation and the effect of inflation of some of the international issues, including Canadian Pacific and International Nickel, which stocks are listed on the London market, was responsible for the day's weakness. The only thing to be hoped for in the China-Japanese conflict is that it remains a local affair with other nations not becoming involved. The possibility of Japan and China are reminiscent of the revolutions of the recent period, and it is to be hoped that those which have never been considered seriously in this country.

The very severe break in the shares of Consolidated Chibougamau has had a sobering effect on the mining list as a whole. Until such time as a statement emanates from Consolidated Mining and Smelting explaining the situation little comment is possible at the present time.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, Aug. 20—The produce market yesterday was firmer at unchanged prices, with good demand for butter and eggs. Cheese was very quiet. Poultry prices were unchanged and potatoes also were firm, with interest manifested in the New Brunswick new mountain No. 1's at $1.65c a bag; No. 3 Quebec potatoes were from 60c to 70c per 80-pound bags. Receipts were 1,182 cases of eggs, 668 boxes of butter and 5,256 boxes of cheese which included 781 boxes for export.

Offerings of Quebec fresh 92 scores butter on the Commodity Exchange were 24 3-8c to 24 1-2c. Quebec seconds, 38 score, 23 5-8c to 24c. Three hundred boxes of Quebec fresh 92 scores butter were sold at 26 1-8c. 73 boxes of Quebec seconds were sold at 25 5-8c.

Charley Grimm Jolly Glad To Eat Words About Davis Now Hurling Ace in Chicago

Pitcher Defeats Bucs to Give Cubs Three Game Lead

CARDS WIN PAIR

St. Louis Can Still Make It Tough For Two Top Teams

(By Hal Foster
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Charley Grimm sat down with pleasure today to eat a few of his own words.

The diet was about as appetizing as a barbed wire sandwich, but Jolly Cholly had a lot of fun slowing it away, nevertheless, especially since it had to do with a bright spot for his Chicago Cubs and their three-game lead on the National League pack.

The meal, spoken by the Cubs' pilot when the current season was just a youngster, revolved about big Bill Davis, the champion hand luck guy, Curt Davis, and his right hand pitching prowess. The Cubs, said Grimm at that time, didn't expect much. If any, help from Davis this year.

And for weeks, it looked as though Grimm didn't have a leg to stand on. The big lumberman from the northwest wasn't getting anywhere from last year's stomach ailment before a sore arm put him on the shelf again in the early weeks this year.

Forced to Use Him

But even without him, and in the presence of a record-breaking list of injuries, the Cubs were sporting a growing lead in the pennant race.

Then came the slump. They lost five in a row, and their lead crept out to two games over the reviving Giants.

Into that situation, Grimm threw Davis yesterday, largely because there wasn't much else to do, the hospital list being what it is. And Davis showed that he's ready to take his regular turn again by zooming through with a 7-4 decision against the perennial Cub jinx, Pittsburgh's Pirates.

The victory really meant two games to the Cubs. Had they lost and the Giants won, their league lead would have been shaved to a single game. But the Giants dropped an 11-inning, 5-4 heartbreaker to the pitching mastery of Jim Turner and the Boston Bees, and gave the Cubs another breathing spell.

Trades Maligned Pace

The Yankees, meantime, got the breaks to maintain an 11 1-2 game edge on the Red Sox by taking a 4-3 decision in the second game of a twi-night double-header with Cleveland's Indians. Lefty Johnny Allen, the Tribe's ace pitcher, was victimized by a pair of homers each by Rudy York and Gerry Walker, helped the Yanks to floor 13-4 in a game cut to six innings by rain. The second game of a scheduled doubleheader was rained out.

Getting effective pitching from Lon Warneke and Mike Ryba, the Cardinals clouted the Reds 6-2 and 9-1 for a twin win. The Phillies and Brooklyn split a doubleheader, winning the opener 3-0 and dropping the nightcap 7-5.

Bob McNair's pinch-homer gave the Red Sox a 5-4 edge over the Athletics. The Braves ran away from the Browns 9-1.

Letter to the Sports Editor

Dear Sir:

As all old Belleville boy I extend a very cordial invitation to all members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club to attend the twelfth renewal of our "Cobbler Doubles" tournament to be held Saturday, September 11th, commencing at 2.45 p.m. (summer time).

This now ranks as the greatest tournament in the Dominion attracting an entry of five hundred keen bowlers for the past two years —the population of a small town plays an sixteen bowling greens.

Several pairs have come up from Belleville and nothing would please us better than to have a team from there win the trophy.

Yours very truly,
Leonard R. Howe,

Tweed Team Practices For Ottawa Contest

Tweed, (Special)—Tweed ladies are practising faithfully for their series with the Ottawa ladies softball team. Home and home games will be played. Competition for the local team is obtained through exhibition games. On Monday afternoon they met a team from Arden in the park and defeated them by a score of 15 to 13. The locals presented a revamped lineup as some of their regulars were away on their holidays. Leila Scott, pitching for the visitors, had a fair turn of speed and with the exception of the second and third innings, Tweed ten runs came in was not in trouble.

There was a tendency on the part of Tweed girls to take the game seriously as nothing was at stake. This is one fault of exhibition games.

The line-ups:

Arden—O. Osborne, J. Munro, Leila Scott, E. Hughes, M. Pringle and K. Hall.

Tweed—P. Rashotte p; C. Long ch; Graham 1b; Marion Tummon 2b; L. Rashotte ss; E. Terry 3b; A. Pringle lf; M. Thomson cf; M. Freeman rf.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS EASILY WIN PAIR

Syracuse Works to Runner-up Spot Behind The Bears

(By the Associated Press)

The sensational play of Syracuse Chiefs and the bad health be piled off berths is overshadowing the steady, methodical race of Newark Bears nearing their first International League championship since 1934.

The Chiefs, have displaced Montreal Royals in the runner-up spot, a position the Montrealers had held since May 29, and are riding the wave of a six-game win streak. Meanwhile the duel going on between Buffalo Bisons and Newark Bears nearing their first International League championship since 1934.

The Chiefs, have displaced Montreal Royals in the runner-up spot, a position the Montrealers had held since May 29, and are riding the wave of a six-game win streak. Meanwhile the duel going on between Buffalo Bisons and Newark Bears nearing their first International League championship since 1934.

The Chiefs, behind a pair of brilliant hurling performances by Earl Cook and Whitey Moore, subdued Jersey City Giants 5-0 and 5-1 scores of 5-0 and 5-1. Cook and Moore allowed but seven hits between them while Syracuse's batters and holding the Bisons scoreless through 15 consecutive innings.

The Orioles were rained out of a double bill at Toronto and as a result Buffalo hurling performers found themselves a half game in front of the Bisons. Rochester Royals, also rained out of a doubleheader with Jersey City, found their night off wasn't as fortunate to them as it was to the Birds. They fell a game astern of the Chiefs.

The Bears moved on to Rochester and helped cut a 5-1 victory over the Red Wings and, despite the change in the runner-up positions, moved a bit closer to the pennant.

SOFTBALL GAME GOES 18 FRAMES

Bator Ice of Detroit Wins 2-1 Over Hiram Walkers of Windsor.

Windsor, Ont., Aug. 20—(CP)—The iron men of the border cities today gave softball historians something to mull over. After the wrong team showed up for a game here last night, the resulting fracas went 18 innings before Bator Ice of Hamtramck, Mich., emerged with a 2-1 victory over Hiram Walkers of Windsor.

Bower Bearings of Detroit were scheduled to play a senior men's softball game at League park, with Hiram Walkers at Kennedy stadium. Bowers could not come. At the last minute, Umpire Jack Bennett, that Bator Ice, another club in the same league, should substitute. Play began at five minutes past nine and finished 10 minutes before midnight.

Bolter pitched all the way for Windsor against Lavery and Rowsell. Murray went the first 16 innings and yielded only four hits, did not weaken. But Bolter walked three, Murray really blew them in, getting 33 men by the strike-out route.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 20 (AP)—Brevity, that stirring Gettysburg address in Dan K. Bible at Texas U.... He has a 3-year contract at $15,000 per.... Note to American League Management: Joe McCarthy says he'll make the Yankees 40 per cent stronger by trades next winter.... Read it and weep.... Lefty Gomez isn't a natural on the British Wightman Cup team.... That goes for Kay Stammers, too.... Why, is a mystery to everyone who has seen both of them watch, back from a triumphant tour of the South, sees another world's series.... Covering through the provinces has enabled Al to back more dough at the ponies year than in any three years he spent as a big league baseball coach.

When more and better overtures are made, Max Schmeling will make 'em.... Mike Jacobs is "regunited" at the German's demands for 80 per cent of the gate to meet the Louis-Farr winner.

"I offered him that to meet Louis two times, Max ain't said Mike, "and he gave me the old runaround.... Well, I have him on the hot seat for a little while".... Trainer Max Hirsch is turning down all offers for Cabalero II, the Chilean sensation.... It will take more than $10,000 to get him, for which Max got for less than $10,000.... Al Stamm, the comedian, and Nelson Howard, of California, have offered as high as $25,000.

The No. 1 comeback man of the 1937 baseball season is Senior Vernon (Lefty) Gomez of the Yankees.... If wise old Bill McKechnie is offered the job of managing Cincinnati Indians, the Reds will release him.... Only hitch is, he says he is content to stay right up there in Beantown with Bob Quinn.

Just how the O.B.L. heads intended to unravel the present conditions that prevail relative to playoff berths is puzzling, but Secretary-Newt. Thompson says the old league has weathered much worse storms and survived. At the present situation glands Oshawa and Kingston can tie for first place with Napanee has a mathematical chance to tie Peterboro for third position, which really is just as good as second. It seems Kingston has not postponed games on their schedule, while Gilbeards have one with Peterboro also. If Kingston wins all of their remaining games the Peelers can tie Oshawa, who are all through their schedule now, with two wins over Kingston and one over the Peles would tie the Gilbeards and the Peles. Rather complicating, but that's the situation as it is today. The Peelers have been ordered to play in Napanee Friday and probably Kingston wins, then the Peelers and the Oshawa gang will battle it out in a sudden death game at Peterboro with first place the object on Monday next. If Napanee wins, however, the Peelers play their postponed game next Monday night at Napanee, and will have to await further developments from that point.

"We're a long way from being out of the woods with this Peterboro team yet. They've got a fairly good team with two or three really smart juniors while Grant Clark, their ace mentionman, will have to be fully reckoned with. This lad Giardine at second, will be up with the senior Petes next year, or I'll miss my guess, that's just how good they are, but our boys will have to be at their best to stage fright and will most likely be seen at a better advantage before the home crowd at the 'Fair Grounds on Saturday," predicted Coach Wheeler's refreshing interviewer's junior O. B. A. A. boss. A Peterboro fan homesteen outhit the local juniors 12 to 8 but the Woodley-led clan managed to get their timely hits for the needed runs. The locals have a tough job to overcome in the game at Peterboro and need the vocal support of the fans on Saturday afternoon. The Kiwanis juniors are the only baseball team representing Belleville in the playdowns despite the fact they are of the teen age, the kids play a splendid brand of softball, Skipper Woodley may lose Joe Kelleher right back at the young Petes, although I hope they don't get the starting call. The visitors only have one star player in Grant Clark, their stalwart righthander.

Up in Guelph this week a softball player by the name of Cecil Ray, Guelph, was sentenced to one month in the common jail after being convicted of disorderly conduct. Ray is alleged to have been the aggressor in a fracas, that saw an opposing player seriously injured. In summing up the case before Ray was sent to jail, the presiding magistrate said—"There is nothing I know of that will kill the desire of the public for sport as quickly as such things as this"—and the Bench continued to admonish the aggressor for his unsportsmanlike tactics. Recently during a lacrosse game at Brampton, officials and opposing players were set upon and injured. Some sport sponsors or mentors seem to deem it advisable to inject fisticuffs into competitive sport and believe these actions attract the patrons, but we doubt this very much. It might attract attention of a few, but not of those who will keep on the line for paid to fight. Such actions have no sport entertainment. If the fans were desirous of seeing scraps of fighting and brawls, they would patronize boxing matches or wrestling shows, where the contestants are of their remaining sanes, the Peelers plan to take in the Oshawa-Grant game, however, and the sooner this is realized the better it will be for the respective games.

It's amateur wrestling night at the Queen tonight with three strong bouts listed. The main attraction sees George Hamby, sample with Ted Fielding while the semi-final brings the ever-popular Red Garner in the ring versus a newcomer, Harold Stevens. Gadaway's gift to the grunt and groan artists. The preliminary will open the show.

Old Jupiter Pluvius dampened the spirits and ardor of baseball fans in the city finals last night, when the Corbin-Bell-Sargent game was called off during the 7th. Coleman Plats diamond being more fit for a regatta than baseball. Presidents Bill Todd announced today the intermediate "A" play-offs, between the Belle and Stirling ball clubs scheduled from the best three in five to the best four in five, making Saturday night's game of the sudden death nature between these two clubs. "The winner of our league must be prepared to meet the Peterboro winners next Wednesday and there is no use in tiring our group winners with a long drawn out series. No matters stand now it is as fair to one as the other to have Saturday night's game," said Coleman Plats fiscal. The Belleville O.A.S.A. intermediate 'A' winner, pushed out Percy Todd.

Maybe for the welfare or good of senior baseball in Peterboro this season, it is a good thing Belleville has been represented in the Central Ontario League, Twice in the past eight in Belleville diamond squads have humbled Peterboro champs right in Belleville diamond. On Wednesday the Kiwanis kids turned the trick at baseball, while Saturday night the Belleville lacrosse is a marvelous defensive effort to down the Peterboro Shamrocks seven 6-4 in the first game of the junior O.A.S.A. play-downs. The second game will be played at the Coleman Plats this evening and the season's biggest crowd should welcome home the Aajmaa kids and more especially assist them verbally in their efforts to lift a second provincial softball title to Belleville.

The Aajmaa kids staged a belated rally to come from behind and emerge victors by a mugs length margin, poor base running resulting in numerous unnecessary outs. Harold Graham was touched for 11 hits and was ably supported by Moon, Foster and Manfield defensively. Dracup was only in trouble in one frame, the fifth, when the young Petes scored three. Dracup likewise won his own game with a timely single in the tenth to drive in the winning counter.

Understand Manager Harry Smith, of the Graham team, winners of the Trenton Softball tournament, to replay their ten-all tie with the "comedians" Labor Day. All right, 'comedianting' the game should be played on neutral ground. The O.A.S.A. was notified of the trouble and in turn instructed Convener Roger Caverly to see that same must be played in Point Anne this evening.

Local Softball Team Wins First Game in Junior Playdowns 6—4

TIMELY HITTING

In true Merriwell fashion the Belleville Aajmaa juniors came from behind to down the Peterborough juniors in the first game of the junior O.A.S.A. play-downs at Peterborough last evening, when the Townsend-led aggregation from the Quinte City scored in each of the last three innings to win by the score of 6-4. The second game of the first round junior O.A.S.A. playdowns will be played at Coleman Plats this evening, when the young Peterborough squad meet the Aajmaa kids at Coleman Plats.

Harold Dracup, Coach Townsend's clever relieving pitcher, not only hurled eight hit ball, but came through with the 'million dollar' hit in the ninth that drove in the winning runs as the Aajmaa kids came from behind, after facing a four run deficit in the seventh, to score in the last three innings and win a clean cut victory. The local junior softballers out-hit the Peterboro kids twelve to eight in their ball-fest. Fleming, the home town moundsman, coasted along nicely and was not scored upon until Frank O'Neil blasted one of his fast balls for the circuit in the second half of the Aajmaa initial counter. The Belleville lads added three more and tied the score in the eighth, to go on and win in the final stanza.

No Score Till Fifth

There was no scoring in evidence until the fifth, when three hits and a walk gave the homesters a trio of runs. Creighton singled in the sixth and scored on Foster's three base hit to give the young Petes a 4-3 margin in the sixth, while in the seventh Fleming's homer gave the Aajmaa's their initial run. Amo's single, coupled with a walk and a brace of infield outs and Moon's mammoth circuit blow in the eighth, saw the Aajmaa juniors tie the count as they scored three in the frame. In the ninth, with one out, Reynolds doubled and scored who proved to be the winning run on Dracup's timely single. Dracup subsequently scored when Rowbotham singled, to give Belleville their sixth counter.

Smart fielding featured the game as the defensive ball played was superb. Moon made a sensational one-handed catch to save the locals in the clutches, while Mansfield and Amo played inspirited ball effectively. Anderson with his exceptionally fine running catch and Conroy stood out for the homesters, while Reynolds also proved to be purely a pitchers' fuel. Fleming, coming out for Belleville batters, but passed two while Dracup issued one free ticket and whiffed three in his relief support.

Heavy Clouting

Of the even dozen hits collected by the victorious Aajmaas three, O'Neil and Moon clouted circuit blows and added subsequent timely singles. Amo clicked for a double and single, while Reynolds also hit in the pinch. The Aajmaa kids were guilty of many very indifferent and poor base running, that ultimately cost them numerous runs, however Leighton, the Peterboro catcher, was the most potent batwielder on the home team, as he collected three of the young Petes' eight bingles, one a double in the sixth, when he scored. Foster had a double and Creighton a triple in the fifth, when the homesters made their final tid. Fleming, the Peterboro hurler, was replaced by Craig in the ninth, but the damage was done and the game had been won as Dracup retired the side in order the last stanza.

If the local Aajmaa kids can make it "two straight" at Coleman Plats tonight, they will advance to the second round of the junior O.A.S.A. provincial play-downs versus, probably an Oshawa team. The game was most capably handled by the two umpires appointed.

The line-ups—Belleville Aajmaas: Rowbotham c; Adams 2b; Tapp 2b; Amo ss; Moon lf; O'Neil cf; Manfield s; Reynolds rf and Dracup p.

Peterborough—Coursey lb; Conroy ss; Creighton c; Foster rf; Jamieson 3b; Fleming and Craig p; J. Craig 2b; Anderson and Moorehead rf and Miller cf.

Health Minister Favors Tuberculosis Treatment To Be Free in Ontario

clared amidst boisterous applause.

Congratulates Health Minister

"It is a happy privilege to again return to my friends in Hastings County", remarked the Hon. Mr. Hepburn as the wave of applause had subsided. "As you perhaps know, I spent some time down here a year ago when the East Hastings by-elections were on, but even if we were defeated on that occasion, the defeat has not been a permanent one, and we are back again to show the opposition, that this time we really mean business.

"I am glad to see your endorsation of a man, who made such a success in the last election", continued Premier Hepburn. "There is no one, who has worked harder for you than Dr. Faulkner, and no one who more deserves your support. I am glad to put a stamp of approval on your choice.

"During the past four years I have been very closely associated with Dr. Faulkner, and though I have been known as a hard boiled financier and keeper of the purse strings, I'm an old "softie" when it comes to according to the demands of Dr. Faulkner for help in his particular department, when he needs it. I realize the good work he has done and is doing, and if I can, I'm willing to assist him in any way."

Referring to Dr. Faulkner's department, that of the Department of Health, Premier Hepburn cited just a few startling facts which have been made since Liberal occupancy of the office.

"One thing we found was that in the free distribution of insulin for diabetic patients, many individuals were grabbing off what supply they could. The people who could well afford to pay for the treatment. We stopped this, and as a result we have on our list a considerable amount. In fact we cut the cost by one half.

"Dr. Faulkner stretched out in another direction. He instituted a new policy of saving money and returning more benefit to the country by carrying or selling the travelling clinics for the diagnosis and treatment of tuberculosis. In this way we are gradually stamping out the White Plague. Give Dr. Faulkner another two or three years and this will gradually be stamped out in the Province of Ontario. Statistics have already shown a considerable drop in the number of cases.

Wants Clean Campaign

Declaring that his campaign would be a clean one, fought only on the issues before the electorate in the minds of electors of the province, the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn declared how proud he was with the Hon. Earl Rowe with whom he sat in Commons for many years.

"Our policies were at times diametrically opposed, but I always strived to legislate in the interests of the people, and I have become annoyed at times with the statements of the Hon. Earl Rowe, particularly at the made this week in which he expressed doubt as to the certified inaccuracies of the last presentation of the province's finances. In this he linked me with Mr. Aberhart. Well, I'd rather be linked with Aberhart than with the John L. Lewis crowd (cheers).

"Alberta, after all, is purely a domestic problem. It isn't up to the officers of Ontario to handle their affairs."

Ontario Hydro system was described by the Hon. Mr. Hepburn as one which was headed for bankruptcy until the Liberal government, by assuming the reins of office, stepped in and instituted an entirely new policy, by cancelling contracts which would have cost the residents of Ontario millions over and above the debt they were already in", and contracts "which were signed behind closed doors by a handful of men such as Geo. S. Henry, Mr. Ferguson, and others".

Reduced Cost of Hydro

"We were told to step in and clear up the mess, and that is just what we did. We have reduced the cost of hydro to consumers of the Province $6 per horse power and we have reduced the service charge of from $36 to $12 a year.

"Though I haven't the exact figures for example, we have cut or made savings in Lanark county to the amount of $138,000 per year. In a large county like Hastings, I imagine the savings will be much greater.

"This year in the Eastern Ontario section over 500 new miles of lines being built will carry the blessing of Hydro to some 2700 of Ontario's communities in the rural areas. This is an adequate answer to some of Mr. Rowe's criticism regarding this department.

"Mr. Rowe has also charged that the financial statements given the public of Ontario last time in inaccurate. The financial statements as presented at the last session of the Legislature, he was certified by the Provincial Auditor. It ill becomes a leader of a great party such as he has been chosen to question or to question the integrity of such a man as Mr. Brown, whom we followed here and cannot fire because his appointment comes under an act of the Parliament of Canada.

Abolish Highway Clocks

"How was it possible for us, a new government, in the three years we have been in, to reduce debt and reduce costs or administration also?" questioned the Hon. Mr. Hepburn.

"We have been called the 'spend' government" by the opposition. Yet, we have returned more to the people than we have received through direct taxation which might be felt by the average resident.

"When we took over we abolished the twenty per cent provincial highway cost to the municipalities. We took away the school examination papers fee, which means a saving to parents of some $150,000.

"We abolished the Succession Tax, took over the Old Age Pensions, the Mothers Allowances, and the Mother and one child allowance. To offset these we have found new sources. We have imposed the corporation brunches tax whereby rich investors hold the tax on their holdings are now compelled to pay a right-to percentage on their income. We have increased the income tax, but I don't think any of you here have objected to that. Now we have collected sixteen millions of dollars from estates through the succession duties tax, and this coming year we intend to collect much more. In the last two years we collected twenty-eight millions of dollars through this source, collecting monies which were entirely overlooked by the former government."

Another "Smashing Budget"

"Another year" declared Mr. Hepburn with some emphasis — "we will have another 'sunshine budget' for the people of Ontario. Very few of the electors of this Province, except those who have studied the matter, realize the perilous condition in which the province was in when the Liberals took office. Then, in 1934, a competitive method of spending money —your money—had been developed. We stopped this. You had your homes and your farms and your property mortgaged to the hilt under the Tory government. You had it mortgaged to eighty per cent of its actual assessed value. We have at last been able to bring the Province to the rightful position it deserved. We have been able to stop the debt, and have some of the departments at last showing a decent return in profits.

"The Department of Mines and Forests, for example, it was pointed out by the Hon. Mr. Hepburn, is not the least one of the departments which has been brought "from the red" to a paying proposition.

"I said here if I was elected I'd put this department on a paying basis under a business administration. I said also the T. and N. O. Railway could be made pay. We have increased the revenue here by one half million dollars a year. The Department of Lands and Forests showed a deficit of 800 thousand dollars. Something was wrong. Under the Timber Hauliers Act Bill we have recovered for the Crown six million square miles of limits. We have four times as much timber as we had when timber stand with cutting rights for sale. Every lumberman can have now at work in this territory. Hardly an unemployed man can be found in the north country today. We have increased revenues four millions of dollars during the next year we expect seven millions from a department that was formerly in the red.

Kept Promises in Order

"Mr. Rowe has also charged that the promises", continued Mr. Hepburn. "Yet we said when we came to the people we would do certain things. We said we would reduce interest rates and we have done so. We have brought them down to well under three per cent. Now twenty eight millions of dollars annually interest charges on Ontario's debt. It was hard work to do that.

"We said we'd balance the budget, and we have done so, showing a surplus of $1,000,000 at the end of the year. We said we'd reduce the debt. We did over 100 millions in overdraft on short term obligations, and we also reduced the debt of Ontario has been reduced.

"We said we'd take off the twenty per cent cost of provincial highways for the municipalities. We did. We took away the school examinations, the Old Age Pensions, we said we'd clear up the Liquor-Toll Gate system and we did. Under the first full year of the L.C.A. we cut the cost $542,000 for the people of Ontario. A total of one half million, although we sold less liquor in that time.

But we rubbed the toll gate operators of the six millions and gave it back to the people.

"This department, is admittedly, the most difficult in the lot to administer. We have been criticized greatly for many aspects of it. But to municipality is bound by it. We were not the ones who brought it into being, however. We only said we'd give it a try.

We have been accused of giving "every last dollar and a license". All I can say is that every hotel given a license has its physical photographs on file at the Liquor Control Board office. If Mr. Rowe can find any hot dog stands in this province I'll not only eat the hot dogs there, but the buns, too.

Can Have Referendum

"Municipalities are not bound by the present act. If they don't want a hotel or tavern, all they have to do is to have a vote of twenty-five per cent of the people to have a referendum taken, which would abolish it. As to the time of closing, that also is a purely municipal affair. We are trying to administer this act as fairly as we can.

"One means by which costs were reduced by the government was the abolition of the old motion picture studio in Trenton, which it was claimed by the speaker cost over one million dollars. Forty-eight technicians had been employed on the making of what was stated to be an obsolete series of pictures there. The selling of all cars formerly owned by cabinet ministers in the Conservative government had also resulted in considerable savings, it was stated.

"As long as I have been in office, I've never charged the Province one cent for my travelling expenses", he cancel, impressed Mr. Hepburn. "Nor have any of my Cabinet ministers."

The C.I.O. Issue

Pausing for a moment to review the points already enumerated, the Premier turned to the question which will probably become one of the chief ones during the present campaign—the Committee of Industrial Organization as applied to Canada.

"I've never questioned the right of Canadian workmen to strike. I've never questioned the right of any workman to work when he so wanted to do. And as long as I am Premier I never will. And I'll refer to him the protection which is due him when he wants to work but is not allowed.

"Mr. Rowe on this matter has been like a tin rooster on top of the barn—he has shown whichever way the wind has blown.

"But as your Premier, -I have known of the influx of outside, or paid agitators working in the interests of Mr. Lewis, the gas salesman, who has been responsible for much in the United States, however, that has not been to his credit. United States records will tell you of this part, that has been practised by him and his assistants in nine states in that country. That is the man that was sent over here. Can you Canadian workers view-with-alarm his that heading you, telling you what you can do and what you can't do. Why a man like that could ruin any industry in Canada. Never should this country put itself in such a dangerous condition as that. Let Canadian workmen manage for the best of Canadian workmen. A fair deal to the workingman is what will be given. But we don't want them to be misguided.

"I am fully cognizant of the fact that as prosperity returns to the country, and better times are experienced, the laboring man is entitled to a full share in the profits, which will be made.

"We have no room here in Ontario for labor agitators.

Asks For Mandate

"A victory for Mr. Rowe and his party is a victory for John L. Lewis. But a return of the Liberal party to government is an assurance of industrial peace and harmonious working conditions. Rowe wants an election to see what the people think of me; we want an election to see what the people think of Rowe and his party. We have no fear of the result. Rowe and Conservatism mean misery and hard times. I have had my fill of politics, and have been ready at any time to withdraw, but have been steered back to the helm and the party just once again. I have consented to do so, and now my ambition is that I be allowed to finish what I have started out to do, namely return to the people of Ontario some of the money that is due them, some of the money which will be collected from the estates I have in mind and have charted ready for action. It will be a bitter job, and one that will make enemies, but I have always worked with the assumption, that I have been elected to work in the interests of those, who elect me.

"I leave the decision up to you—a better place to live, or a return to the same old Conservatism, which had held you so long," concluded the Premier.

Hon. Dr. Faulkner

"If the Hepburn government is returned to power at the next Provincial election and I am one of the selected members I hope to lay a scheme before my chief, that will give free treatment to all tubercular patients in Ontario," declared Hon. Dr. J. S. Faulkner in accepting the unanimous nomination of the East Hastings Liberal Association at their convention held on Thursday in Marmora.

"I am announcing myself as candidate," said Dr. Faulkner in speaking to the convention before the arrival of Premier Hepburn. "And as your representative I have travelled in my own car, paid my own chauffeur and all expenses and the gas bill due to my election and that is the spirit that has prevailed since the Hepburn government took office. I have not canvassed since the last election in any way and I want the delegates to choose their representative without any interference from anyone and if I am the choice, I promise faithfully to give you the whole time and ability to further-the growth of Hastings County."

Wants Clean Campaign

Dr. Faulkner stressed the need of a clean campaign stating that his opponent was not a personal friend and "I would be sorry to see anyone in the Liberal party cast any reflections on the integrity of Richard D. Arnott, one issues of the day we have a right to discuss and four years ago the Liberal party presented to the people picking holes in the former administration and they were given the elected representatives with a record of achievements and it has been a good one." I shall deem it an honor and privilege to be elected as the official Liberal candidate for West Hastings. At this point Premier Hepburn rose from the hall to a salvo of cheers and took his seat on the platform while the speaker graciously gave way for the delegates and others interested to hear the Premier of the Province.

Thanked For Nomination

At the conclusion of the Address Premier Hepburn, Dr. Faulkner was heard in the remainder of his address. At the close Chairman of the convention for the honor, that had been conferred upon him. To acknowledge it as the choice of Liberal member for West Hastings, he asked for hearty co-operation of everyone and he reiterated the statement made at the last election there would be no condoning of purchasing votes and other sharp practices sometimes exhibited in election campaigns. "Let us fight a clean fight", said the Minister of Health, Speaking of Bridge-builder Arnott, county of Hastings, Dr. Faulkner gave a number of figures, obtained through official channels at Bible Hall to show, that under the Hepburn government, the county has been saved a considerable amount in relation to legislation introduced by the Hepburn government.

He told his listeners, that the county had received subsidies each year from 18 and 1-2 mills to 15 mills and that the last payment on the road built by the last government would be made this year and next year. "I can safely say the mill rate will be reduced even further", he said, "and during all the years of the county especially in the lumber industry and men are urgently wanted.

"I believe it is the individual responsibility of every man to get out and seek a job for himself, a condition that continued to me, when I started out in life," said the speaker. Turning to Hydro the speaker declared that concessions had been granted to the consumer more favorable than the most sanguine of the Henry administration. He showed also how the cost of hydro in Marmora and taking off the tax on plumbings, stating that more than $500,000 had been spent in this industry alone in the last four years and this money has gone to the north, where it was most needed.

Savings Announced

Turning to his department, that of Health, he stated, that $1,000 a year had been saved by the disposition of two nurses one man now handling the work of two men. "I understand one of the men displaced is just waiting for the government to change so he can get his job back. He told his audience that one employee in the mental hospital was caught for six patients while under the Henry regime, only five were cared for by one employee. He also related how many District Officers of Health had been discharged, which was costing the Province $40,000 a year, while a saving through the book as to the expenses of some of these officials. It was found one official was drawing his time in holidaying at Bigwin Inn at the expense of the taxpayers of the Province.

Travelling Clinics

Treatment and prevention of tuberculosis, a pet subject of Dr. Faulkner, was dismissed at length. "We are developing an organization to combat tuberculosis," he said, and he recited an instance where the scheme was working out, when he took the Hon. Earl Rowe, to Hastings to a clinic and had him X-rayed and sent on to a sanitorium. He told of the establishment of travelling tuberculosis clinics at Belleville, Ottawa, and North Bay and the announcement was made, that others would be located at Timmins and Fort William.

He asked cooperation of the various municipalities in advancing his scheme for free treatment, boldly stating that it would cost some municipalities more than others, but that a great good would come from free treatment of this dread disease. He showed that it cost a municipality $1,000 a year for a minimum case, $2,000 a year for a medium case and from $4,000 to $6,000 a year for a malignant case. Turning to insulin, Dr. Faulkner stated the bill for this aid to diabetic in 1934, the year Henry was defeated, was $102,000 to the government with 3,500 receiving free insulin but today there are only 1900 receiving free insulin and then only when the clerk of the municipality puts his signature to the order.

Will Continue Road

In closing the speaker believed, that West Hastings stood behind Mitchell F. Hepburn in the good government and although he had been defeated once by having the by-high way run partly through East Hastings he was sorry for his action for it was his purpose when elected to serve all people regardless of political affiliations and he promised if elected, that the road would be continued from Bancroft to Porterville. The speaker asked for loyal cooperation in the approaching fight and with that he believed he would be the elected member and then have as guest, Mitchell F. Hepburn, the friend of the common

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

"I find that when I'm frank, no one ever believes me. That's really a very sobering person, Tony. I did want you and the gimarack." She had a penetrating way of dusting on her lower lip, and her green eyes were set obliquely in her small, dreaming face.

She always evaluated violence in Tony—a desire to shake and crush. Today, it was worse than ever. "You need a good spanking," he said.

"I'd simply adore it." Add Lorna smiled. She added—"You know you don't look married, Tony. You're far too good-looking—or rather, attractive to be married anyway."

"You little wretch," Tony said under his breath. Jane was coming out of the house, fresh and beautiful in white.

"Don't come back till you've bought out the town." He tucked them in the roadster. His boyish grin saw them around the curve of the driveway. But he needed a drink quite suddenly. Decent of Lorna to be nice to his—wife. Too d—— decent. It made him feel like a rodent.

Lorna swung her car through the iron gates of Kayestone and turned to York. "Don't tell me if you don't want to," she said. "But I've been dying to ask. Don't you really remember a single thing? I mean how you ever happened to lose your memory—and so on. It was so extraordinary. You're picking you up on the street, as it were."

Jane stared at the rushing green of country, spotted with houses and gardens. This was why Lorna wanted to get her away alone, to pool and pry. "I'm afraid I can't satisfy your curiosity," she said, and black lashes drooped.

"I'm never curious. I'm only curious." Lorna eased down at a light. This queer girl was no fool. Wiser to make friends with her in front. Lorna pursued her pleasant chatter. "If you want divine gowns, you'll find them at the Paris Comte Chabrey—Katia. She's a Georgian, you know—some thing or Russian. And a great friend of Henri le Paule's. You liked him, didn't you?" Lorna sounded naive. But Henri was her capi, and more than ever she meant to play him.

"I hardly saw him the other night." But Jane was conscious of a despairing color.

Lorna looked at her slyly. "Henri only paints married women if they are rich and beautiful. Katia claims only to paint the wickedest or purest women in the world. Of course, that's all bigus—humbug. Henri's done my portraits, and Heaven knows I'm not married or beautiful. And Katia will drown anyone who comes near her priest."

Jane didn't answer. But she thought. The man Lorna married—rich, and either very pure or very wicked, neither. Had Comte or the Princess still be interested in me for long, although possibly I'm wicked." Certainly many people would consider her an adventuress!

In silence Lorna rolled on to the Port Les Ferry. Wedged between other cars, she only pretended to be rude. Her mind spun and clicked. There was something quite strange about this whole affair. Tony didn't act as if he were blindly in love. And this gold and white Mystery he had so rashly married seemed capricious rather than a blank. Lorna didn't trust or like women anyway, and she told herself now that it would be a good thing for Tony if she could rid him of the creature.

As they neared 135th Street, Jane reached into her bag for powder and lipstick. The bag slipped along the smooth white of her gown, to the floor of the car. Diving to retrieve it, Jane saw by her dimness that the gemstone ring she had hidden there for safety, had fallen out.

"Oh, I'm sorry. Have you lost anything?" Lorna peered for the ring. "How amusing!" she exclaimed. "Valentine sentiment—the heart as a setting. I thought I knew most of Tony's heirlooms."

She glanced at Jane whose involuntary movement betrayed her.

"Why it has—I mean we found it in a funny little shop." Too late to regret a stupid lie, badly told. One of the seven things she had ever done, denying her own father's ring, because she was afraid.

"I adore old-fashioned jewelry." Lorna handed it back without further comment, but she had not been deceived by Jane's flustered manner. Not for one moment did she believe that Tony could have anything to do with this ring. She began to talk in her high, light voice as they threaded their way through traffic. Presently she drew up at a drug store. "Mind if I telephone?"

Her first call was to Kayestone. "I'm taking good care of your bride," she said with a mocking note to her young voice. "I warn you, darling, the day's life will be stiff. We're going to shop and shop. By the way—" and Lorna paused. "Do you like moonstones?"

"Can't abide 'em." Tony sounded amused. "What's it for, a riddle?"

"Yes, and I'm trying to solve it," Lorna said sweetly. "I'll report later perhaps if you're interested."

So Tony's Alice-in-Wonderland, as he called her, had lied. That was obvious.

Lorna's second call was to the Comte la Paule. The drug store booth was small and smothering, but Lorna pressed against the receiver, her tone lower, intimate. It gave her an odd, exciting sense of power to project herself in different ways to these two men.

"Bonjour, Henri. How many portraits have you been making love to?"

"Ah, c'est toi, ma cherie."

His faintly nasal French drawl was what she had most wanted to hear. His greeting with its "thou" and "dear" seemed like the light, nervous touch of his hands. "Listen, Henri." Lorna spoke more quickly. "I'm with Mrs. Kaye. We'll be at Katia's about four. Will you come?"

La Paule took his time to answer.

"So—your charming program marches." he said at last. "You do not wish me to be in love with this beautiful lady, but I am to—shall we say, flirt with her? Yes? For other reasons than you imagine, I will come."

CHAPTER IX.
AFTERNOON ADVENTURE

Katia, the Princess Tcherev, had once said to the Comte la Paule: "Mon cher, you and I belong to an expensive past which other people must pay for now. Women are becoming to aim their own checks, therefore are they more careful. Let us find the women whose husbands still sign. I shall dress them, and you shall paint their portraits. I am from the Georgian mountains, and you from Paris. I am nearly 60, and you, not yet 40, and we have both lived in the gutter as if it were the Ritz, and in the Ritz as if it were a gutter. Let us see what we can do in this America."

In Katia's Russia reference books were pasted clippings of mushroom fortunes, brownstone failures, and scandals that had crossed Europe. The names of millionaires who had made fools of themselves in finance, the arts, or at the altar she had alphabetically arranged. Under Anthony Kaye, she had listed the still impressive Tax Returns of an inherited fortune, the escapades at home and on the Continent, Lorna Howland, Palm Beach Park, whose people were flabbily clinging to a remnant of respect, and the accounts of his romantic marriage to the beautiful girl he had found on Park Avenue, who didn't know who she was or where she came from. The Princess reserved a space under Kaye for the future developments of this marriage. There were unpaid bills of Lorna's in her files, which probably would never be paid now.

But the Princess expected to cross some women for nothing or for services not marked on her books. Lorna had come to her through Henri la Paule. It seemed natural that the new Mrs. Anthony Kaye should be brought to Katia by Lorna.

There were no other clients this June afternoon when Lorna drew up her roadster at the narrow marble front on the East 50's. Leading Jane about in New York had proved profitable. Lorna had ordered quite a few things she had slipped on the charge accounts opened for Mrs. Kaye.

All that day Jane had allowed herself to be managed, because she wanted to learn all she could from Lorna. There was a way and a manner of feeling rich without vulgar ostentation, and Lorna had that way and manner. Whatever her sins and faults, she had the air of wisdom, also she knew how to command service. The power of the Kaye name and fortune was made very visible to Jane on this round of shopping. It must be bitter enough for Lorna to see Simone die using it. But as the afternoon went on she was so friendly that Jane wondered if she hadn't imagined the other girl's hatred of her.

Now they were at Katia's. "I'm dying for a cocktail," Lorna said as they walked through a grey panelled hall, flowered with chrysanthemums. "Katia always serves them when she's showing her models." Shallow steps led up to a long, narrow salon done in black and white with mirrored walls. Lorna seemed suddenly rather flexible. Her mind had not been quite a moment since she had secretly telephoned la Paule suggesting that he meet them here. It was a risk she was taking, Lorna thought, in throwing Jane at la Paule, and her intriguing little heart grew dark with violence as she realised that to gain Tony Kaye she might lose the one man who had ever wakened a genuine passion in her.

The Princess advanced to greet them, a tall, strong-featured woman with black tailored suit, her grizzly hair black as the lacquered tables and screens decorating the room.

"Ah! Mademoiselle Howland!" There was no warmth in the throaty guttural. Then she turned to stare at Jane.

Lorna's assured, "Hello, Katia," somehow willed on the air that rustled with her unpaid bills. "This is Mrs. Anthony Kaye," she went on. "And she's going to want lots of things."

"So?" But the Princess' long, harsh face softened as she continued to look at Jane, as if undressing and dressing the long, graceful body topped by the clustering gold of curls. "That should not be difficult."

"I'd love to see your models," Jane felt a little shy. The Princess' made even Lorna seem shallow, and clinking. The maps of strange countries were printed on her rugged face, and he remember was that of a very great lady.

"I'm giving a party next week," Lorna drifted to one of the white couches, lighted a cigarette. "Mrs. Kaye must have a gown to wear with the Kaye emeralds. You've heard of them, Katia?"

"You have heard of everything," Katia drily answered. She clapped her hand with an Oriental gesture to that brought a young woman in black taffeta to the door. "Mlle. Martinin for the ladies. In five moments, my latest collection of designs that I have not yet shown. You will tell Marie I wish her to wear 'Spring Moon'."

Jane sat down on the couch, wishing that Lorna had not mentioned the emeralds. They reminded her so tragically that she never would have the right to wear them, little imposter that she was.

With a murmured apology, Lorna drew the Princess into a corner. "I owe you an awful lot, don't I, Katia? Perhaps now we can make some arrangement. I mean Mrs. Kaye is going to be a very good client of yours. Tony won't care how much she spends here."

Contempt and understanding rods on Katia's thick black brown. "You wish me to add your account to the price I make Mrs. Kaye?" She put it bluntly. "Cela ne me fait rien. It means nothing to me, since you wish to do business that way. You are a friend of Henri's."

Lorna colored angrily, her green eyes sullen. But you had to be careful how you treated Katia. "Henri gets commissions from me, doesn't he? I've brought lots of people to you, too." And she turned away.

From the couch Jane watched them whispering. Would life some day stamp her with the weariness and wisdom carved into the older woman's face? Would she, too, every fall, get out of life, as Lorna thought, "and I'm trying to get everything without paying." But she knew she would pay for whatever she got. Tony.

Lorna brought in old silver linen, cups frosted with cocktails, set them down on the black lacquer tables. Katia clapped her hands again, the signal for her show to begin. But as her models floated in, Lorna moved behind a black screen. Lorna glanced toward Jane and started toward her, her surprise beautifully done. "Why, Henri!"

The Comte la Paule had just come in. "Is it permitted, or do I interrupt?" His eyes flicked from over the light drift of girls in exquisite evening frocks. Their silvered, wavering looks showed that they knew him well. He bent over the Princess's hand.

"You are always welcome, Henri," she said as to an old friend.

Jane sat where she was, conscious of heightened color. This was the last place she ever would have expected to see la Paule, the woman she had thought of as Tony's first—when he turned finally to her, his light blue eyes held only admiration for a lady he had met.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"The Singing Marine," Dick Powell and Doris Weston in Few Plus Musical

Just what the title indicates is the story of "The Singing Marine," which, with Dick Powell as its star will be the feature attraction at the Belle Theatre, Tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday, matinee daily.

Dick is a marine, and a modest buck private at the San Diego base .....and he can sing. So his comrades get up a purse to send him to New York to have a try at "Major Rowe's" amateur hour.

At the same time, on her own, Dick's sweetheart essays to enter her voice into the competition. This is Doris Weston, a lovely and talented newcomer to movies.

She doesn't get by. The Major's famous gong stops her. But Dick becomes a tremendous success.

That was just too bad! It goes to Dick's head. Spoiled by the adulation of innumerable women, and the favoring of children who surround him, the young marine forgets his comrades out on the Pacific Coast.

But after all he only has a leave of absence from the Marines, and when at the end of his furlough he's shipped with the rest of his company to China, he has a chance to redeem himself with a splendid bit of heroism, which restores him to everyone's good graces, and of course Doris' too.

A splendid cast surrounds Dick Powell in the gay song and dance fest, including Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Doc Rockwell from vaudeville, Jane Wyman, Veda Ann Borg, Larry Adler the harmonica champion and Lee Dixon eccentric dancer.

Also on the screen is the new production, five of them by the famed team of Harry Warren and Al Dubin, and Dick Powell and Warren and Johnny Mercer. "The Girl Who Couldn't be Kissed" is one of the most novel songs of the year.

"The Singing Marine" has plenty of comedy, a lot of big spectacles, and can be thoroughly recommended to the whole family.

The Belle Latest World News Events, and "Grelna Green" a unique color novelette, will be exhibited on the same program.

On Saturday matinee two upsetting cartoons will be exhibited in addition to the regular program.

Myrna Loy, Depavis

Myrna Loy and Clark Gable are appearing at the Belle tonight for the last time in the soul-binding romance, "Parnell," featuring Edna May Oliver, Billie Burke, Donald Marshall and others. "Bars and Stripes," a smart musical revue will be exhibited on the same program. Tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday, matinee daily, "Hopalong Cassidy Returns," the Latest of His Adventures in Film Form

Clarence E. Mulford's hard-fighting Western hero leaves a roaring mining town of the Old West, almost single-handed, in the latest of his adventures to be presented in film form, "Hopalong Cassidy Returns." The picture, featuring William Boyd as Hopalong, one of the screen's favorite Western heroes, is shown at the Capitol on Saturday only.

In "Hopalong Cassidy Returns," Boyd is given a role which identifies him, in a way, with Wild Bill Hickok, Bat Masterson, Wyatt Earp and several other almost legendary characters of the boom days of the West. Given the job of bringing lawful order to Lawless Mesa Grande, he finds he must back the opposition of a gang of thieves who make the Crystal Slipper saloon their hangout, and who are ruled by a woman, Evelyn Brent. Plenty of hard-riding, gunfire and hand-to-hand combat go into the assignment.

The role played by Miss Brent is unique in Western films. Though her part in the story is that or sort of an arch-villain, she, as well as the lovely Gail Sherman, contributes romance to the story. Her ruleship of the Mesa Grande outlaw element brings her death at the close, but her fate is due in part to her own realization too late that she is in love with Cassidy.

Incidents of the war to stamp out crime in Mesa Grande bring about a series of thrill-packed situations following each other in rapid-fire succession. A gun battle in the street outside the Crystal Slipper, a final "to-the-finish" when the outlaws make a fortress of an isolated mine opening, and abet Cassidy's younger brother as hostage, and a pistol duel between Cassidy and one of the worst of the cutthroats, are among them. The story is fast, furious and loaded with excitement.

Added Shorts

In addition to this splendid western thriller a fine array of short subjects is presented. The 3 Stooges in "Slip Foiled," a musical comedy, "Just the Type," starring Timberg, Mickey Rooney, Jr., a Lupert reel "Jumbo Home, Jumbo," and the latest Capitol News Events complete this splendid bill.

Today Only

Shown for the last three today, two grand features. As hit No. 1, Cicely Courtneidge in the musical comedy "Everybody Dance," and as hit No. 2 "Night of Mystery," with Roscoe Kearns and Ruth Coleman.

But about a year ago Dr. Edwin Hubble, one of the observers with the big telescope, reported at Oxford, England, discovery of a puzzle in the expansion. The slightly reddish colored light of these nebulae failed to substantiate fully the expansion theory.

Dr. Hubble said it might be necessary to discover a new principle of nature to explain what the big telescope saw.

New Principle Offered

Dr. Shapley offers the new principle today.

Under the expanding theory the light of these distant nebulae would be red if they were going away.

But Dr. Shapley points out the same thing would be seen in the telescope provided something between here and those distant nebulae is slowly, uniformly shrinking.

He shows this by using mathematics, substituting the shrinkage as a factor in calculations already presently used to prove the expansion idea.

Several things are shrinking he says. These include the "universal length of atomic physics." One of these lengths is the radius of the electron, smallest known particle of matter.

Another is the unit of energy. The measuring rod for this unit is known as "H", a tiny fraction which can be written as 6.54 over 10 followed by 26 ciphers.

LATTA NINE WIN OVER FOXBORO

Score is 14-8 With Latta Showing Class in All Departments

Latta, Aug. 20 (Special)—"Doc" Welsh's Latta nine is still in the running for South Hastings League baseball honors as a result of their lopsided victory over the Foxboro lads here Wednesday afternoon. Minus two of their regulars and with their second string hurler on the mound the visitors were rather easy pickings for the homesters, who with their backs to the wall pulled out their first win of the series by clouting the offerings of two Foxboro hurlers to all corners of the lot and after building up an insurmountable lead in the early innings went on to turn the game into a 14-8 rout.

Manager Welsh made no mistake when he sent Marsh to the hillock to stop the Foxboro team, and for nine innings the diminutive speed ball artist set the visitors back on their heels as he threw his fast one past them consistently. In the seventh when a hit and an error coupled with a walk filled the bases with no one away, he was relieved by Youngs who was promptly greeted with a double scoring two.

Snappy Fielding

Snappy fielding by the winners put an end to the rally however, and for the rest of the game Youngs had the opposition baffled. The Latta outfield especially showed absolutely no respect for the offerings of Seeley, Foxboro's starting hurler, and their bats ran out a merry tune with base hits being very much in evidence which coupled with some sloppy fielding soon gave the homesters a big lead which they never relinquished. Starting the fifth Seeley was relieved in favor of Ashley who after holding them down for a couple of frames fared little better and the ERF heavy hitting broke out afresh to put the game beyond all doubt.

Overly rabid fans caused a near riot at the game yesterday when one of the players took exception to personalities hurled at him by a spectator and left his position in the batter's box to settle things in a way which, according to reports, was far from verbal. Umpire Hall promptly ruled him from the game and play was finally resumed, after the fans were lashored outside the fence. Incidents such as this, while certainly creating excitement are not exactly in accordance with the best of sportsmanship and while the umpire was correct in his ejection of the player from the game, if the fans would refrain from any personalities and keep cool inside, everything would be happy.

The fourth and possibly final game is scheduled for Friday on the Foxboro diamond and with their regular team back in full strength, Foxboro club are all set to have it over with on Friday. If history repeats itself, the silverware will remain in Foxboro as last year the Foxboro club took the cup in four games.

Lineups:

Foxboro: Seeley p and 2b, Breese 2b and cf, Ashley cf and p, Wilkins ss, Williams 1b, Gray c, Wall 3b, Peacock rf and cf, Gray lf.

Latta: Gowe cf, G. Hall 2b, Orr c, Marsh p and ss, N. Hall ss and 3b, Parks 1b, Doherty and A. Hall lf, Youngs 3b and p, Fargey rf.

Scores by innings:

Foxboro ..	001	010	030—						5	11	3
Latta	261	010	32x—						14	13	2

SHANGHAI IS ROCKED WITH HEAVY EXPLOSIONS

Toll in Life Enormous As Tenth Day Begins In Struggle at Shanghai

Tens of Millions of Dollars Damage Has Resulted

FLIGHT TO SEA

525 Refugees Picked up By French Liner Today

Shanghai, Aug. 21 (AP)—Three Chinese warplanes dropped over the smoking ruins of this war-ridden metropolis today, planted a barrage from guns on warships and tried to wreck the Japanese consulate with dash bombs. The struggle was another day of warfare.

Four missiles blasted into the area behind the consulate in the French concession while Japanese anti-aircraft gunners attempted forlornly to pick off the attackers.

Five Is Open Sea

Shanghai soon rumbled anew to the thunder of battle and the sad refugees of various nationalities fled to the safety of the open sea, boarding the French liner Aramis under a shower of shrapnel. The refugees included 525 Japanese and 115 Portuguese.

Shanghai entered the ninth day of the struggle between powerful Chinese and Japanese armies in a setting of carnage. Great sections of the city were in smoking ruins after a day and a night of terror.

Loss of Life Enormous

An estimated fourth of greater Shanghai's densely populated area was an unchecked holocaust during the night, the result of air bombardment, naval shelling and artillery demolition. The damage reached into tens of millions of dollars. The loss in life was enormous.

The sun dulled its locked forces along the winding Whangpoo River into a blood red haze.

Four hundred and fifty British residents departed aboard Kong aboard the British ship Shengking.

Five hundred Japanese refugees left aboard a Japanese liner, to be transferred to a steamer outside the war zone.

Six Japanese warplanes dropped their bombs in the vicinity of the great earthquake at Yokohama in 1923.

NOTED FLIERS OF THREE NATIONS TO CONVERGE ON ARCTIC

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 21 (AP)—Noted fliers of three nations converged upon the Arctic today for an epochal effort to rescue six Russian transpolar airmen, missing for eight days on the bleak roof of the world.

Canadian, United States and Russian aviators gathered on Point Barrow in an effort to pierce the fog-shrouded mystery of what happened to Pilot Sigismund Levanevsky and his five companions.

The Soviet ace and his crew left Moscow a week ago Thursday en route to Oakland, Calif., with a refueling stop at Fairbanks. They crossed the pole on their 4,000 mile hop the next day and then vanished.

Eager to repay Levanefsky for rescuing him in Siberia four years ago with an identical heroic act, Mattern left Barrow after dawn today from Fairbanks to Point Barrow, Alaska's northernmost town, yesterday.

Also at Barrow, waiting for a break in the weather, were Bob Randall, experienced northern Canadian flier, and the Russian flier Zadkoff, one of the ace pilots of Siberia. The Russian Ilyushkar-Krassin lay off Barrow with four planes ready to be hurried into the air.

Sir Hubert Wilkins and Pilot Herbert Hollick-Kenyon planned to investigate reports that they had sighted the missing plane in the Arctic Territory, with his party of four for Alaska.

PEACE RETURNS TO STRIKE AREA

Peterboro Workers Who Walked Out Friday Return to Jobs

Peterboro, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—Peace returned to the strike-disrupted textile industry today when it was announced 180 workers at the Auburn mill of Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, Limited, who yesterday staged a second walkout when a seven week strike ended, had agreed to return to work.

At a meeting last night of members of the United Textile Workers Union, Henry Mercer, managing director of Dominion Woollens, discussed the situation with the employees. A company official, after two hours of answering questions, received the union promise to return to the plant on Monday.

Company discrimination against returning workers was charged by the Ashton employees yesterday as the two Dominion Woollens Mills were re-opened after settlement of the original dispute had been reached. Some 500 workers of both plants, the Auburn and the Sonnerworth, were involved in the long strike, a total of 1,000 part in yesterday's second walkout.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Rain water is produced in the great storehouse of nature if caught after it has rained a while and is one of the impurities of the air have been washed out. Water may exist in three forms at once. Note your glass of ice-water. Liquid water and solid ice in the glass of ice-water. Liquid water and solid ice in the glass and the drops of water, or de-, on the outside of the glass showing that there is water vapor (water in the air form) in the air. Water contracts as do most substances, but it contracts only down to 39 degrees when upon further cooling it expands. When frozen to solid ice, it is about 9 per cent larger than the original quantity of water. So ice floats. Otherwise, rivers and lakes would freeze down to their bottoms.

MANILA A CITY OF REFUGEES

Residents Spent Two Nights in Parks After Severe Shocks

Manila, Aug. 21 (AP)—War in northern China brought refugees today to Manila a city of refugees today as authorities cleared away the debris of nature's destructive forces and sought to evacuate themselves from battle-torn Shanghai.

Thousands of Manila's nearly half million residents spent last night in parks after two severe earthquakes rocked the city, toppled many concrete structures and prostrated the metropolis into darkness.

For refugees who had just arrived from Shanghai, the quakes a few minutes apart late last night, were an added terror to the shock and peril from which they fled.

A vista of widespread damage was revealed by daylight. Thirty-three persons were injured, none fatally.

Tayabas Province, on the Pacific coast side of Luzon Island, was hard hit. All houses in the town of Alabat were damaged.

German Press to Give Lead To Despatches from Tokyo

Only Secondary Positions to Reports From Shanghai, Nanking

CHINA, COMMUNISM

(Copyright 1937 by the Havas News Agency)

Tokyo, Aug. 21 (C.P.-Havas)—German support for Japan's policy in China was reported here today after Premier Fumimaro Konoye's warning that pro-Communist elements must be eliminated from North China.

A Berlin dispatch to the newspaper Asahi said the German government press bureau had issued the following instructions to all German newspapers:

1. Give lead positions to dispatches from Tokyo.

2. Give secondary positions to reports from Shanghai, and suppress "Chinese propaganda."

3. Emphasize the strategic position of North China with regard to the Russian-Soviet Communism.

The Asahi correspondent said the German government called in recent days for a change in the attitude of Japanese, but would intervene, in conformity with the Germano-Japanese accord against the Communist International, to prevent any Soviet advance toward China.

The government of the Reich will not hesitate to sacrifice German economic interests in China in order to apply the anti-Communist accord, which is held in Berlin to have fundamental importance, the correspondent added.

ONTARIO HOUSE TO BE REOPENED IF ROWE WINS

Leader Says it Will be Used as Sales Agency For Agriculture

HYDRO CONTRACTS

Essex, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—Ontario House in London, England, will be reopened as a sales agency for Ontario farm products if his party wins the forthcoming Ontario General Election, Hon. Earl Rowe, Conservative leader, said in an address here last night.

(Ontario House was closed soon after the Hepburn Government took office in 1934. The office of Agent General for Ontario in the British Isles was abolished. More recently its property was sold.)

Selling Offices in England

"The Western dominions, New Zealand and Australia have their selling offices in England," said Mr. Rowe. "Why then should the loyal farmers of Ontario be so handicapped?"

Mr. Rowe spoke at Harrow, in Essex Conservative convention. Jas. Armstrong, Harrow, was re-chosen candidate. About 500 attended.

"Premier Hepburn has betrayed the workingman—the Union principle—in his stand on the labor problem, although he himself is a farmer, he has betrayed the farmer by refusal of farm loans and reduction of agricultural service," the Conservative chief charged.

Unfair Opinion

Nullification of Hydro-Electric power Hydro contracts had betrayed Ontario industry, Mr. Rowe said. Aberhart had betrayed Alberta's by adding to refusal to honor debts, he said Mr. Rowe. This was on top of his betrayal of labor.

"Labor has suffered long under Mr. Hepburn and does not easily forget it," he said. "Every workingman of this province will remember Ontario Bill 4, the Premier Peterboro and the gassing of women and girls. He will remember the pitiful conditions at Brockville and he will not forget his Hepburn Bill 99 which is the worst enemy the working class of Ontario ever had. It has betrayed the working man and turned out the army against him."

Claims Services Abolished

Bonuses for better livestock breeding have been reduced, he said, services abolished and farmers refused loans in order to balance budgets.

W. E. N. SINCLAIR NOT IN FIELD

Announces His Retirement From Politics at Whitby

Whitby, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—W. E. N. Sinclair, former leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, told a meeting of the Southern Ontario Liberal Association here last night he would not be a candidate in the forthcoming provincial election.

Member of the Legislature for Ontario South, Mr. Sinclair was first elected in 1911. He was defeated in 1914 and was a candidate in the 1917 Dominion election. Re-elected in the Provincial House in 1919, he has represented the riding ever since and headed the party from 1928 till 1934 when he was replaced by the present premier, Mitchell Hepburn.

Mr. Sinclair has played only a minor part in the Legislature since he left the leadership, several times mayor of Oshawa, where he lives, he was made Knight Bachelor in 1922.

Leader Mr. Sinclair's leadership, the Liberal party included retention of the Ontario Temperance Act as its platform in the 1926 election and the Conservative under Gr. Howard Ferguson supporting government control of liquor, swept the province. Mr. Ferguson became the new government control in 1929 and again the Ferguson forces were returned.

A convention of Ontario Liberals was called in 1930 and Mr. Hepburn was the overwhelming choice as leader. At that time he was a member of the 1926 House and did not seek a seat in the Legislature. Mr. Sinclair continuing as Ontario Liberal leader, Mr. Hepburn led the Liberals to a smashing triumph in 1934.

SUNSHINE BUDGET TO BE REPEATED DECLARES PREMIER

Budget Has Been Balanced Says Hon. M. F. Hepburn at Enterprise

SUCCESSION DUTIES

Enterprise, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—If Ontario will re-elect his government Premier Mitchell Hepburn promises "another sunshine budget." He told a Frontenac-Addington County Liberal rally here yesterday his government was the first in Ontario this century to balance budgets.

The provincial debt was increasing when his administration assumed control, he said, but "this year we are able to present a balanced budget."

Mr. Hepburn said he found the government was being defrauded of millions of dollars in succession duties. Last year $3,000,000 was collected from succession duties and "questions ask that more than $30,000,000 this year.

Would Repeal Budget

"Big interests have challenged the validity of the act and this brings me to the points why I am calling this election," he said.

"To put my back and I'll collect the succession duties and you will get another sunshine budget next year."

Reviewing his administration, the Premier said additions are pending into the government by income tax and that's paying for roads, old age pensions and Mothers' Allowances.

Opposing Wealthier Pay

"We're putting the burden of paying for the abolition of taxes best able to pay. But I fear that if Rowe (Conservative leader Earl Rowe) is returned to power those succession duties are not going to be collected."

Mr. Hepburn reiterated his opposition to the Dominion-Provincial Orginal Organization, declaring he believes in elbows conferences rather than elbows strikes to settle labor disputes.

The convention unanimously chose Colin A. Campbell, member of the Provincial House from Middlesex, as Liberal candidate in the forthcoming provincial election. Mr. Campbell was elected to the Dominion parliament in a 1936 by-election and retained his seat in the 1935 general elections. He has been a member of the Provincial House for the Ontario cabinet.

SANTANDER CITY NEAR DOWNFALL

General Franco Expects to Enter City by Saturday

By EDWARD J. NEIL

With transports on the Santander front, Aug. 21 (AP)—Weather permitting, General Franco expects his Nationalist troops to capture Santander in the early part of next week and that Spanish city may be his before another Saturday.

Today his two southern columns hammered successfully at dwindling government defences, with but 6 miles of rocky coast line between the can knife into Santander, the Nationalist last port and principal ace on the Bay of Biscay.

In the meantime the Santander's fate hung with one of these columns this writer witnessed a battle which may decide the fate of Spain's fantastic civil war. It was a battle in the Burgos mud between rifle shots struggling hand to hand in a dripping fog.

Then the game the fog, shrouding the mountain tops, soaking everyone in mist and hiding attacker and attacked alike. Yesterday the Burgos mud columns of Franco troops thrust through the fog at a point about 12 miles south of Torrelavega.

Asturians—about 3,000 in all of the Reds—are in the mountainsides, protected by the fog from both France's artillery and planes.

BEDEAUX SYSTEM IS ABOLISHED IN NEW AGREEMENT

Brockville Strikers Return to Work on Monday

COMMITTEE NAMED

Strikers Drop Demands For Union Recognition in Settlement

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 21 (CP)—The protracted strike of 22 employees over the operations of the John B. Stetson Company (Canada) Limited will resume Monday. The company and the strikers yesterday signed an agreement ending the walkout called June 26 by the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers International Union.

Strikers dropped their demand for union recognition and the company made several concessions including abolishment of the Bedeaux system which affected about 15 per cent. of the employees. A time study of piece work will be introduced.

Both parties agreed no discrimination will be practiced against any employee by reason of activity in trade unions. The company agreed to take back all employees closed if such action is deemed necessary. He hoped this would be a "proper step to prevent spread of the disease."

Situation Under Control

Situation Under Control

Not wishing to make people unduly alarmed, health officials on all sides have stressed that, while serious enough, the situation is still under control. In Toronto seven persons have died of the disease, while Western Ontario recorded its first death at London yesterday. Fear of the disease has spread to that section of the province now has not known since.

Toronto has 104 diagnosed cases with 33 more in the immediate suburbs, 36 of them in populous York township. The township council has ordered all schools proclosed for the present. Two children had died there and nine are under treatment in Hamilton.

Middlesex County has ten cases, all being from the city of London proper. Norfolk has four, two at Port Dover, one in Simcoe and one in Townsend township. Perth has four cases, while Waterloo and Lambton has three each.

Suggestion to delay opening Toronto schools for two weeks or more was made by Trustee Dr. W. H. Bull, who said he would prefer to that effect at next week's board meeting. Acting superintendent of the Board, Dr. J. H. Downing agreed that the schools should remain closed pending the end of the epidemic subsides.

However, the trustees added, would probably prove effective in checking the scourge.

POLICE BLOTTER

Arrested on a nominal charge of vagrancy and held in the cells for a time pretended coming out of the Belleville Exhibition Park in the early hour today by P.C. Evans following complaining regarding persons having been seen sleeping in the grandstand in the park last night. The men were Edward McKinnon, 24 years of year, 19, and William Durant, 22, both of Toronto, and Johnson Hillier, 22, Iranian. The men were taken into custody and remanded to jail until Monday morning next.

Following investigations police announced another person had gained entrance to the concession booth beneath the grandstand and had apparently entered the booth during the night. P.C. Evans also stated that a key had been kindled on the wooden floor of the booth, where it is presumed the persons had endeavoured to keep warm. "How the fire was kept going on the wooden floor of the building without igniting the entire building is what we cannot understand. The parties responsible for burning the fire in the grandstand building, broke up small pieces of wood with which to kindle the fire," was stated by officials of the Ontario Intelligencer today at noon.

All three apprehended, Hiller, Rosevear and Durant, denied having remained in the Exhibition Park all night, the men stating they had gone to Finnelle St. last night. Hillier was arrested as he was found coming out of the park, while the other two were apprehended in the nearby vicinity, police stated.

PARTS OF HOUSE ARE DISMANTLED

Gerald Mills, Brighton, Held on Charge of Theft

Provincial Police today announced the recovery of many parts of a house, that had been dismantled, and removed from government property on Nicholson's Island, in Lake Ontario off Consecon, over a period of some months past. The properties were recovered near Brighton and a man who police say is Gerald (Mike), Mills, Brighton, was arrested and charged with the theft of government property yesterday. Mills was later lodged in the county jail at Cobourg.

Situated on Nicholson's Island, near Consecon, is a large modern dwelling, the house and the island being the property of the Ontario Commission for Agricultural Loans. The dwelling is unoccupied. For some years past parts of the house, including French doors, fill sized doors, panelled cupboards and other parts of the building have been reported stolen, Provincial Police revealed today. A constant observation of the island and dwelling has been kept for some time past with the result that all of the stolen property was recovered yesterday.

Provincial Constable K. Smith, who investigated, stated to the Ontario Intelligencer at noon, that even parts of the roof of the dwelling had been dismantled and removed while portions of the interior walls were also torn down and taken away. "In all probability the goods were dismantled and loaded on a boat, to be later floated across Brighton Bay and landed, where it recovered the stolen goods yesterday," stated Constable Smith. Men of the boat building material of the house had been dismantled and removed from the island.

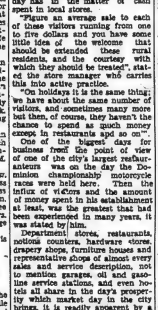
2,000 TO 2,500 VISITORS IN CITY EVERY SATURDAY

Store Manager Estimates Value of City's Saturday Trade

VALUE OF COURTESY

Belleville's ordinary week day population is increased on Saturday by an additional half of from 2,000 and 2,500 visitors from the rural areas, it was estimated by one popular store manager on Front Street this morning, politely, so that the daily involvement of non-residents into the city for the day has in the matter of cash spent in local stores.



"Figure an average sale to each of these visitors ranging from one to five dollars and you have some idea of the trade that merchants should be extended these rural residents, and the courtesy with which they should be treated," stated the store manager who carries this into active practice.

"On holidays it is the same thing; we have about the same number of visitors, and sometimes many more but then, of course, they haven't the chance to spend as much money except in restaurants and so on".

One of the biggest days for business from the point of view of one of the city's largest refreshment was on the day the Dominion championship motorcycle races were held here. Then the influx of visitors and the amount of money spent in his establishment at least, was the greatest that had been experienced in many years, it was stated by him.

Department stores, restaurants, notions counters, hardware stores, grocery shops, furniture houses and representative shops of almost every sales and service description, not to mention garages, oil and gasoline service stations, and even hotels all share in the day's prosperity which market day in the city brings it is readily apparent by a brief canvass.

"Saturday is our big day. Given fine weather we generally do as much business on that single day as on any three days of the week" it was definitely declared by a department store head. "If it rains, then we know there will be a heavy drop in sales. And, believe me, we watch the weather probabilities for that day. If on no other day of the week".

WEST BELLEVILLE WINS MEET FOR PLAYGROUNDS

Scant Margin of One Point Separates Two Squads

FINE RECORD

Playground Officials Congratulated on Excellence of Meet

West Belleville athletes won the track and field championship of the Belleville playgrounds defeating their East Belleville rivals by the scant margin of one point at the conclusion of yesterday's annual city playground track and field meet held at the Exhibition Park. With only the hop, step and jump event left in the senior series the West Belleville lead to win first, second and third position in this event, as they were trailing in point considerably at that time. With determined effort the West Belleville seniors accomplished what seemed the impossible, finishing first, second and third to give them a total of 29 points to 28 compared with 176 gained by the East Belleville athletes thereby edging the latter by the one point for the city playground championship.

The East Belleville won three of the five individual championships, however, Wilma Smith (East Belleville), won the girls' junior championship with accuracy while Ivan Weckell (West Belleville) winning the senior girls' title. Cliff Hay (West Belleville) won the senior boys' junior champion, Hay excelling in the senior event. Bobby Walker (Belleville), won the junior championship while Mac Carson, (East Belleville), scooped down the midget championship of the city playgrounds.

Some rehearsably fine times in the various races were established in the events, the 100 yards dash and runs for teen aged athletes, while in the 440 yards run for girls' an equally good standing were seen. Supervisor George Laughlin announced after the meet that a selected few of the Belleville playgrounds athletes would be taken to Toronto to compete in the provincial city boys' athletic and track meet held in connection with the Toronto Canadian National Exhibition, next month.

The officials in charge of yesterday's meet at the Fair Grounds were Mr. Laughlin, Mr. Boorman, Mr. Cousins, Ralph Griffin, Vic Mackey, Girls' Events and other playground officials.

The results yesterday were:

'Like an Alligator' Boys Describe Creature

Tweed residents this week are pondering the strange appearance of some mystic creature of deep waters sighted in Stoco Lake this week by two well known fishermen of the village, Orville Conley and Gene Green, who observed some form of marine monstrosity "like an alligator", while fishing.

Rowing in the vicinity of Sheep Island in the lake the two men suddenly observed in the calm waters part, and a monster head rear above the surface. It swam several yards in this fashion just a short distance away before heading for the marsh land, both fishermen reported.

The two men claim the creature measured several feet in length and had large head and body "like an alligator's. The apparition made its way quietly along the surface, with little fuss and disappeared quickly upon the approach of the boat, the fishermen rowing hurriedly to the spot last seen, but it had disappeared.

CAMPBELLFORD HOME STRUCK BY BOLT

Fire which broke out after a bolt of lightning had struck the chimney, hurling bricks to the ground and igniting the roof, did considerable damage to the Campbellford home of Misses Annie and Jennie Martin in the village yesterday. Though both occupants were away from the house at the time, the start of the blaze was noticed by Grant Anderson, who turned in the alarm. Firemen of the Campbellford brigade, with the use of two hose lines extinguished the blaze with some smoke and fire loss reported. A second alarm during the afternoon was to the Daly home, where a smaller blaze was subdued.

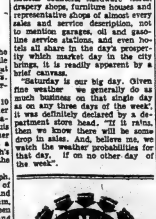
EQUINE ROYALTY WILL BE SHOWN AT EXHIBITION

Finest Exhibit of Horses For Belleville Fair



While the splendid exhibit of livestock and other products of the farm will hold a goodly share of the public spotlight at the Belleville fair, faithful "Dobbin" has not been forgotten, Equine royalty from the lowly work-horse to the proud prancing thoroughbred of carriage fame will be seen in one of the finest exhibits of horseflesh ever paraded before the general public.

From the proud Percheron, pride of many a breeder, with arching neck and distinguished mien will vie with the popular Clydesdale for honors in the draft classes. Under each known heavy breeds will have a fine representation and lovers of this particular type of horse will more than satiate their equine appetites.

With harness racing receiving a decided impetus throughout the district during the past few years due to the fact that continuous breeding from imported sires and dams has increased the quality of the thoroughbreds to a point where they compete favorably with any in the country, directors of the Belleville fair are going to great expense to bring to lovers of the harness race one of the finest collections of racers and trotters possible. Dropping to a level, which for years has not existed, the standard of this type of horse in an extreme state of nervousness, harness racing has increased in popularity in leaps and bounds during the past few years, particularly in the rural sections of the country.

Primarily a farmer's sport, interest has been revived to such an extent that many enthusiasts are now breeding and racing their own stock. Meets have sprung up all over the country and it is no secret that Belleville is one of those track bluebloods travel over the whole district in search of the finest specimens of horseflesh to be found in the United States to race at these gatherings which are fast growing in popular favor.

Belleville and district is no different to other progressive communities. It is then with this thought in mind that the Directors of the Fair have left no stone unturned to provide for their race-loving public one of the finest collections of harness races available. There will be attractive cards on Sept. 1st., 2nd., and 3rd.

Early to Bed and Early to Rise, His Recipe for Longevity

James G. Rose, Octogenarian of Madoc Points to Himself as Indication of Value of Hard Work — Criticizes Modern Speed.

There is practically nothing to this attaining a ripe old age, at least your late eighties if you follow the simple recipe of James G. Rose, octogenarian and lifelong resident of the environs of Madoc. "All you have to do," says this agile old gentleman, "is to adapt yourself to real hard work, get up with the chickens, go to bed early and in between do a real day's work. Of course you must have diversion. Interverse mild doses of this with entertainment of the healthy kind, take time enough to enjoy the company of members of the fair sex and you will be able to get insurance with any company."

And ample proof of the results of close adherence to this homely act of rules is exemplified in the fine appearance of this fine old man of the north. He celebrated his eighty first birthday on the eighteenth day of January last and expects to observe almost twenty more before he considers his life span run.

Hard Work

"And if you don't think that hard work is healthy" he insists, "look at me, I have spent all my life where I had to work hard and enjoyed it. Up early in the morning, sometimes at work before the sun had melted the icicles on the roof, and I have only been down sick for a short time over a period of eighty years. Should be added, "I don't mean those silly complicated times of the day following would go to bed with. I have had plenty of them but they did not deter me from going out in the woods and swinging an axe, or going in my trusty garden and spreading a load of vegetables for the market."

"Why today, at the age of eighty one years, I still own my place in Madoc, a distance of two miles, four and five times a week I walk it and exercise I get now since my retirement from active work, and I confess derive a great deal of enjoyment from it."

At Time of His Birth

Mr. Rose was born in a log cabin two miles north of Madoc four score years ago. "At that time the country was nothing but wood on Foxboro to Madoc," he said.

"A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George W. Rose, he attended school at Riggs' school house at Mullett's Corners. That place of learning he left at that time a sturdy log structure. The seats upon which the pupils sat were plain trees flattened on one side with pegs of wood stuck in them to raise them from the floor level.

Following his marriage to Elizabeth Rosser, he purchased the Mullett tannery at Mullett's Corners and immediately transformed it into a truck garden. Here he worked long and hard raising vegetables for sale and market. In the winter season he hied himself to the woods where with axe and brute saw he felled the giants of the forest to earn a livelihood.

Old Time Lumbering

He tells an amusing story of lumbering life in the old days. Fulfilling a contract for cut timber, he left his home before dawn had broken over the tree-tops, carrying his lunch and returning long after the sun had set over the western hills. Month in and month out the labored in the dim fastnesses of the woods. On this particular day his wife informed him that they had an invitation for dinner from one of their distant neighbors. "I turned that down", he stated, "for I wanted to get home in my own place looked like in daylight."

In Market Gardening

With the exception of thirteen months spent in Kent County where he fulfilled a lumbering contract with the C.P.R. to cut 1900 cords of wood, and an occasional summer when he cruised prospecting the saw in Huron County, he has lived practically all his life in and about Madoc, actively engaged in market gardening about seven years ago and is now living in well-earned retirement. His son, Foster Rose, carries on the garden business. Seven children were born to this fine old man, four hockey sons and three daughters. Three of his sons answered the call for men during the great war and one has today in the dust of Flanders Fields. Another was wounded. One boy died several years ago.

No Worry About Speed

This age of speed and modern science is no source of wonder to the octogenarian, for the simple reason, he says, that he has never bothered his head about it. "A car is a car—why you couldn't get me the best durned car that travels the roads. The old horse and buggy used to be good enough for me and it is for me although I now drive in. Give me the highway to walk on, that is for short distances—for the long ones I take the buses. I wouldn't be bothered driving a car. I have no expenses, a car is a source of worry and no sociedgits. When I travel I pay my way. I have the fun and the other fellow has the responsibility."

What He Thinks of Driver

"Besides, look at the accidents happening today. Every time I pick up a newspaper I see in it a shocking accidents. The trouble is there are too many cars nowadays that they are becoming a detriment to the public. Half the folks sitting behind a steering wheel these days couldn't drive the old mare down the lane after the cows. There's where a lot of cause of accidents could be located. We sir, you can have your cars, I don't want one.

"Another thing," and the old gentleman's eyes twinkled, "in the old days when we young fellows went courting, what better was there than a horse and buggy. We never came back the old hack into a sidroad and sit there and gaze at the moon. We drove along the country roads and did a bit of hand-holding that was all right, and then we took place to hide in a horse and buggy. The other day I saw a car with cars parked near my place. It was after dark and the moon was in full view. I couldn't see a durned thing in the cars." He shook his head. "Guess times have changed."

Asked if he felt his age, Mr. Rose laughed and replied: "Only when I'm sick. There's lots of time yet to worry about getting old."

CELEBRATE 51ST ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Barnhart, Tyendinaga Reserve, Mark Event

Shannonville — Mr. and Mrs. John Barnhart, aged Tyendinaga Reserve residents recently celebrated their fifty-first wedding anniversary. They were married on the Tyendinaga Reserve at the Anglican Church by the Rector at that time, the Rev. Mr. Anderson.

When asked if they ever quarrelled they both replied with an emphatic "No". Their motto they said is "it takes two to fight". Perhaps it would be advisable for some young couples to take heed to the above motto. At this juncture of the conversation Mr. Barnhart spoke up "When my wife wants to start any argument I keep quiet and when I want to start one she keeps quiet." Mr. and Mrs. Barnhart have had thirteen children all living at the present time.

With many of his young friends attending the funeral of William Lawrence Barnhart, aged five, who was killed when hit by a car on Sunday night, was held on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral service was held in the Anglican Church with the rector, Rev. E. R. Pepper conducting the last rites.

Seven of his young chums The pallbearers.

Left to mourn his loss are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Barnhart, three brothers, Connell, David and Joseph and two sisters Marie and Joyce all at home.

The Shannonville canning factory began operations on Thursday last, when they have a bumper crop. The factory has the largest acreage this year they have ever had and have made many improvements to accommodate the expected supply.

CHINA IS MODERN LOY LING FINDS IN 4-YEAR STAY

Prefers Canada to His Native City of Canton

CHINA WELL ARMED

Fashions Changing in Ancient Land of Confucius

"China's all right, but give me Canada. Canada is far the better place to live, with more freedom and better living conditions."

Thus did Mr. Loy Ling, one time former well known resident of this city, who has just returned to Belleville after a four year stay in his native China, express his sentiments regarding his return to the land of his adoption.

Resident of Coleman Street for ten years previous to his return visit to China, the popular restaurateur, and brother of Mr. Chan Ling of this city, left for his native city during old friends made here during his lengthy residence. His son Gordon, aged twelve years, who has been attending school in China, goes to the Queen Mary School of this city, has returned to Canada with his father.

China is Calm

Though hostilities with the injustice of the Japanese attacks at the present time, outwardly she is calm, defiant in attitude. Her people are imbued with the patriotism for which ancient China is noted. It was stated by the local resident. Though war is far removed from the district of Canton, the scene on the day by day conflict is keen and intense. Belligerent feeling is manifested on throughout the length and breadth of the country of the Rising Sun.

"China is well armed and well equipped. She is quite able to look after what is coming to them," smiled Mr. Loy Ling.

Though it had been twenty-five years since he had seen his native country, Mr. Loy Ling was impressed by the local man in either the progress or the backwardness of the customs of his country.

But a change has developed

China, as well as in the rest of the countries of the world, it was found. China has gone modern, modern in a big way. Her squatty homes have been replaced by more up to date structures. Not a bit cold running water in the country, however. In the business sections of the larger cities, for example, modern sky-scrapers now rear their tall piles to the sky. Brick and concrete and marble are now being used instead of the flimsy paper and other agents of the construction of the buildings.

East has met West in China, made over by the changing fashions even in clothing. No longer are the old fashioned wraps and sandals worn by the Chinese women of the country. In their place have come modern high heeled shoes, silk stockings and up to date styles. Modernism, indeed, has now become one of the popular forms of recreation. Dancing girls are now the vogue in China, and the institution they were. China has her flapper girls and flivvers the same as any other country.

Three week's steady sailing were necessary for Loy Ling to complete the voyage from his native country to Vancouver. Fifteen months and two weeks of fair sailing unmarred by accident or disaster.

"We were glad to see the shores of Canada again. We were glad to know that we were coming home again. China is all right; there's something of a bond between the two countries, but when we sighted Canada we seemed to feel it as more our home than China. Like a flock of birds we flew back there to live. Everybody is good here, and as for the price of rice, I'm satisfied just to stay here now."

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows was sitting on my front steps talking and arguing, and Skinny Martin said to Shorty Judge, Have you measured your self with Herbit Kline again lately, Shorty?

Herbit Kline being the new little kid that's been shorter than Shorty, and Shorty feels sensitive about it, saying, Aw what do I care? I've decided to call the whole things off and not even bother my mind about growing any maybe end up by being a giant, he said.

It's too late now, Sam Cross said. Herbit Kline's going to be a bigger giant than you could ever be. Didn't you see Dr. Rorer go to Herbit's house a couple times, and Sid Hunt said, Sure, I saw him too, but what's that got to do with everything?

Plenty, Sam Cross said. Herbit has been teasing his father and mother to leave him have a operation on his grower, and at last this morning they said all right and went for Dr. Rorer. Your grower is a little thing no bigger than a pickle and it's where all the growing microbes come from and Dr. Rorer says he'll put all over your body at the same time so you'll grow nice and big instead of having big flop ears and things like people with bum growers, and Herbit had his grower operated on so now he'll grow to beat the band, Sam said, and us fellows said, All go on, who said so?

Why, Herbit, being the most famous liar around, and he said, Lou saw the doctor, didn't you? If you don't believe it why did you ask me?

Wich nobody hadn't, only we didn't think of that, and I said, Let's go down to Herbit's house and see.

Wich we all did, and Herbit was just coming out, us fellows saying, How do you feel Herbit, do you still feel stumped in your growth, did it hurt much? and Herbit saying, What's you talking about, I'm in a hurry, my mother thinks she's sick again and I've got another prescription from the doctor to take to the drug store.

Proving there's no use trusting a liar.

THE FALL FAIR COMES

Agriculture more than season of the year when the progress of the primal industry has its most striking demonstration in the harvest and the autumn exhibitions or fairs. In fairs which have distinction patrons can see in clear lines the advances made in farming and in the development of the industrial life of the community.

Belleville has such a fair which bears distinctive marks, signs of a healthy agriculture and a prosperous urban industrial population with the peculiar blend of the urban and rural which characterizes every branch of the life of the people of this part of the district.

As an agricultural show-window the Belleville Fair leaves nothing to be desired. Merely to mention the exhibitions of the past and suggest the coming exhibition in say cattle, and horses, and in so many other classes of exhibits is satisfying enough to those who know the history of the fair.

From the industrial exhibition standpoint the full fair is no mean symbol of the life of the city and district plants.

Urban and rural angles of the fair are closely looked after by the directors and officers who are representative of every interest in the community.

With the promise of exhibits larger than at any other time in the fair's history, the fall show has the guarantee of success if the attendance keeps up to past records. The directorate will of course not be satisfied with merely reaching the peaks of other years but it has been its aim to develop and to expand every side of the fair, including the course being the attractions which will assure larger attendance.

Therefore people of the countryside and the city and the villages surrounding should lend their best support by patronizing the fall fair which opens here on August 31st.

THUMB MARKS

Many people hearing of thumb prints think of police clues and crime detection. But the thumb mark is a badge of honor and respectability as well as of crime, for the thumb mark is the identity of man or woman. Dodge this no one can.

This weeks' War Cry uses this thumb mark or thumb print on its front page to impress upon its readers the great fact that the thumb mark "is the indelible imprint of your identity." And the inevitable question is asked, "What are the marks of your character?"

That is the question the Salvation Army has studied in the lives of countless thousands and many million of men and women. That is the chief question in life.

Just as every one has the print on the finger and thumb tips which distinguish the physical identity, so every man and every woman has character, whether it be good or not so good. The thumb print marks the identity, which man cannot change. So the character may be moulded. The thumb print does not change, the character does change as it is growing. The thumb print is the mark of the physical body, the character marches steadily with the development of the soul. Yet always the character is the self.

UNION THROUGH IDEAL

A politically separated world may be united through the pull of a common spiritual ideal like Christianity, the Rev. Dr. Roland H. Bainton of Yale Divinity School declared in a sermon at the Broadway Tabernacle Congregation Church, New York.

Though "the seas of separation" have been bridged by tranbportation improvements, the world is not unified as it has been, Dr. Bainton asserted, adding:

"In the days of Rome's power the world was less separated due to the unified society that was created throughout the Western world, where men spoke the same tongue, obeyed the same government and followed the same religious ritual.

"Today, with the rise of nationalistic nations, there is no such cohesion. The spirit of nationalism among nations now means the reviving of dead languages and forgotten literature.

"In order to remove the new seas of separation, the nations do not need more mechanical means to bring various parts of the world closer together, but a common spiritual life that has the basis of understanding and peace. Only spiritual means can succeed. Only God is great enough to rank mankind."

THE BAREFOOT BOY

Out in the summer morning,
Brushing the forth away,
Life seems a day of adventure
With the dawning of each new day;
Fishing in sunlit waters,
Swimming in waters cool,
Carefree the boy and happy
Unmindful of work and school.

Holidays swiftly are passing.
Oh! how the glad hours fly.
Exploring the fields and meadows
Climbing the hill-top high,
Feasting on wild-wood berries
And fruit of the harvest tree,
Tanned by the sun's caresses—
Was ever a life so free!

Clothing does not impede him,
No hat ever crowns his head,
His feet are bare and hardened,
His back with sunburn red,
But oh! he's a lordly monarch
King of the out-of-doors.
Marching with tread triumphant—
His domain, the whole world-wide.

O boy of the sturdy bare feet
Such a emblem you are of joy,
The heart of the world grows younger
At sight of the barefoot boy;
For you bring to the aged and weary
Bright visions of yester year,
When life held its qld-time glamour
And the future shield nought but cheer.

BELLEVILLE AND HASTINGS COUNTY have sent forth their sons to all parts of the earth, and all have given a good account of themselves, many seats of the mighty being filled very acceptably by sons of Bay of Quinte district. One even hears the attentive to the throne, when he sign country. Recent visitors to Belleville included Mr. and Mrs. John Brickley, of Banes, Orienta Province, Cuba. Mr. Brickley, who began his education in the Little Red School House near Belleville, near his father's farm, continued in Belleville and at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, then went to Cuba where he became Assistant Superintendent of Agriculture for the United Fruit Company which maintains plantations and agricultural schools in Cuba and throughout the West Indies and South America. As an instance of the size and wealth of the United Fruit Company which owns ships, wireless stations and says Samuel Zemurray, the company's Director of the Company, has given one million dollars to Tulane University at New Orleans to found Department of Middle American Research. Recently Mr. Zemurray donated $250,000 of his company's stock to found a child guidance clinic in New Orleans, where, according to a contemporary account "he made his fortune in bananas, mixed in Central American revolutions and still lives."

NORTHWEST PASSAGE (Kenneth Roberts) is another large volume best seller which may be likened to "Gone With the Wind" and "Anthony Adverse" and to Canadians much more interesting on account of the setting and historical references. Northwest Passage is the saga of that bluff old hard-drinking, hard fighting Major Rogers, of Rogers Rangers composed of down-east Yankees of the backwoods type, great Indian fighters, who retaliated upon the Indian allies of the French in the winning of Canada wars, when all the American Atlantic coast colonies were a part of England and favorite raiding territory for Indian scalping parties. The central figure of the story is a young American artist, who serves as a Rogers Ranger in a raid from Crown Point and Ticonderoga on the Indian village of St. Francis on Lake St. Peter, where the Indians were surprised, slaughtered and the settlement burned. Here he got material for many pictures of frontier life and Indians, and later went to England where he starved and prospected, and finally was enthused by Major Rogers into joining an expedition to seek the Northwest Passage to China and the Indies, not by the Arctic ocean but via Lake Superior, Michigan, the Mississippi, Missouri across the Shining Mountains and down the great Oregon River to the Pacific Coast where a mighty port was to receive cargoes of furs for the Oriente, bringing back rich spices, and all the riches of Araby. Part of the story is laid at a frontier fort, Michillimackinac, at the junction of Lake Huron and Lake Michigan. Added interest is contributed to the tale by the introduction of Sir William Johnson, who was British Indian Commissioner for an immense area, married Molly Brant, Mohawk Princess, built a huge palace in the then wilderness of central New York State, made a huge fortune and spent his last days in England and Ireland. Some British officers well known to history are also introduced as characters in this moving tale of pioneer life on this continent, the fighting with French and Indians, and the causes leading up to the war of Independence, including the infamous Stamp Taxes, which lost England a colony and laid the foundation of the present far flung and wealthy United States are pictured in detail on both sides of the Atlantic.

There is no foundation for the rumors going the rounds that Hon. Chas. Dunning, Minister of Finance is seriously considering an offer to head up a merger of Milling companies. It doesn't make sense, and it definitely isn't true. That is from an unquestionable source. No such offer has been made to him, if we were made, it is incredible that it should be accepted. The fact that it was carried as a report by a section of financial service dog not alter the fact that it is without basis. Hon. Dunning has turned down a good many offers of directorships in his day, and it is conceivable that he is still being sought by private interests. But his sense of public service sacrifices two years ago to re-enter public life, and it is hardly likely that now, two years afterwards, he would jump out again. The income he had built up by directorships can be safely guessed, considerably larger than could be offered by any merger of milling interests.

Mr. Dunning resigned all his directorships and also all his financial ties which by any construction could be made to appear to influence his decisions he would have to make as Finance Minister, when he entered the Mackenzie King cabinet in 1935. He accepted a large potential loss in order to do so. He was Minister of Finance years from 1930 with a definite purpose. He had inherited from 1928 and 1929, when he was seriously ill, that he had a wife and family, and that he owned it in duty to build up a little surplus. When he left public life in 1930 after 20 years of it he was a comparatively poor man. His heart was in public life all this time, and, against the advice of some of his closest friends, who thought that he was making needless sacrifices he went back into it again in 1935.

There are so many able and sanitious lieutenants in the Liberal party that it is no wonder rumours circulate at times about their loyalty of one another. Hon. Charles Dunning, as Minister of Finance, is Mr. Mackenzie King's right hand man. He is in the preferred position of there seems to be nothing possibly there are other aspirants, so far as the post of Minister of Finance, for long as Mr. Dunning chooses to hold the portfolio, however, it is a little difficult to see how he could ever be passed by. He has shown exceptional capacity as Minister of Finance, just as he did as Minister of Railways only two years ago, and it in 1930, but it looks as though under his administration Canada will become the highest paid executive in the Canadian business world. Mr. Dunning, as Premier Bennett did earlier, to slave for his country and the honor and glory of the job.

Like many other successful executives, he can't abide unfinished business. He will do almost anything rather than leave a job in the air—he even writhes in pain, they say, over idle mischief. When you go in to see him, you never find his desk piled up with files or papers. He cannot tolerate them there. Everything must be made one way or the other, and the matter settled. He reads very rapidly and is marvellous at noting the salient points of every argument. Many a night he falls asleep over a book, having read for a while long after everyone else in the household has been asleep.

The people of Canada know their Finance Minister pretty well—chiefly as the "immigrant boy who made good." Here are a few things they may not have heard before:

He plays a little solitaire, or rummy, but cannot be bothered with bridge—though he once was dealt a hand containing 13 hearts and hopes it will happen again some time.

He has a cricketer as a boy, and used to play out at Regina when he was in the Saskatchewan Co-Operative. While he was over in England this summer he saw several games at Lord's. He is still an enthusiast but doesn't find time to play.

His golf flourished during his business days somewhat, but as a cabinet minister he doesn't find opportunity to indulge.

He loves walking about the streets, but is only a fair walker, despite his booking as a people.

He has a formidable appetite for getting at the facts. If he is on the trail of some problem, he will devour all the facts he can get hold of on the subject, and sound out all the experts.

He refuses to listen to criticism of his colleagues.

He is a big square solid brick house on the Island Park Driveway overlooking the river and bay.

In the final game at Niagara in the new bowling tournament the Belleville bowlers were defeated by the Niagara team by 21 to 19.

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn and family returned to the city yesterday morning after enjoying an extended outing on Georgian Bay, visiting Ottawa, Kingston and other places were visited.

OTTAWA PARADE

Back Stage in the Dominion Capital with
WILFRID EGGLESTON

He appealed for the support of the gathering and urged that they get out and work to bring the grand old Conservative Party back into power. They had lost it years ago and which is today rightfully theirs.

Previous to his introduction of the Hon. Earl Lawson, M. P., for South York, guest speaker of the afternoon, Mr. George Tustin, M. P. for Prince Edward-Lennox launched an urgent appeal for the support of both counties.

Charging that Ontario was being ruled under an autocratic dictatorship, instead of "good old-fashioned democracy" the Hon. Earl Lawson delivered a spirited attack on the Hepburn administration. The speaker limited his remarks to twenty-five minutes because of the intense heat and touched briefly upon the various activities of the present government.

C. I. O. Child of American Federation

He gave a ringing description, however of the C. I. O. and its activities since its origin. "It is a child" he said, "of the American Federation of Labor. "Since the days of the depression, industry has generally increased, the cost of living has accordingly gone up but wages remained at a stand-still. To keep pace with the cost of living, labor naturally sought higher wages. Then came the strike. Strikes are not new" he continued. "We have had labor organizations for years, but it is only in recent months, years, that we have had them in Canada. And they were nations in themselves. The C. I. O., a child of the A. F. L. which we had here, and which has been in fact brought over from the United States by the labor leaders."

"In the midst of the Oshawa strike, Premier Hepburn appointed himself mediator and arbitrator between the strikers and the General Motors Corporation. And when his cabinet disagreed with his tactics, what happened. Off came their heads. The strike was settled without bloodshed and disorder. But, the premier says, 'I'll keep the C. I. O. out of Ontario because they are committing illegalities in the United States."

Neither the Hon. Earl Rowe, the Conservative Party in Canada and Ontario nor its supporters has ever failed to stand for the maintenance of law and order, but subject to the standing of law and order we must recognize the right of the individual to organize as he pleases as long as he observes the law. He shall have the right to collective bargaining by secret ballot as long as he conforms with the law of the country. His freedom ends there. They shall join the unions I pick out for them.' The strikes in Oshawa and the Hepburn-Frost strikes in Quebec were not the C.I.O. but the A.F. of L.

"Hepburn says that he will keep the C.I.O. out of Ontario and continued the speaker, "but has he done it. No." There are more C.I.O. units in the province today than there were when he made that declaration.

Advises Personality

Declaring that he had personally advised the Premier to take the proper steps to apply for the Prime Minister King for cancellation of C.I.O. organizers' immigration permits if he wanted to keep them out of Ontario, Hon. Earl Lawson declared, "The Premier knew that Mr. King and his government would say he was "all wet." He knew that he could not exercise an autocratic power like that in a democratic country and survive.

"And that brings us to another point," continued the speaker. "What has become of the Liberal party today. Hepburn is running all over Ontario repudiating King. Why are they not agreeing? It just proves that Mr. Hepburn is not the King kind of Liberal. Further proof of that is seen in the fact that the minute a man does anything contrary to Mr. Hepburn's plans he is labelled Communist and Fascist. And all this in a supposedly democratic country. We don't want Communism and Fascism in this country, but good old-fashioned democracy and if you want this you have the only way to obtain it is to go out and vote for your candidate."

Will Reducing Cost Claim

Touching briefly upon the "Hepburn promise to cut the cost of government by fifty per cent," the speaker stated that instead of this he had increased it a little amount. The total money taken from the taxpayer in the Henry regime was $50,000,000. The total taken from them at the end of the last fiscal year was ninety-two millions. In fact, that did not include a cent for the government cars, but he did include the plates."

"The reason we cannot get a look at the Public Accounts is because the government is hoping to hide civil rights and democratic liberties from us," he continued. "If we have not a democratic government, what we have today in Ontario is a dictatorship, that is absolutely devoid of democracy. And if we do not do something about it we are going to lose the greatest heritage we possess."

The Hon. Mr. Lawson in referring to the repeal of the Separate School Act declared that members of the Liberal cabinet were "rubber stamps" into supporting the bill after signing a round-robin to that effect. When the Conservatives drafted a bill to repeal this "outrage to the province" members voted for it and then stamped into action. Hepburn could not take responsibility for his actions and promptly "choked off" members of his cabinet.

Calls It Autocracy

"That is what I call autocracy," declared the speaker.

Referring to Hydro, Mr. Lawson stated that the alleged repudiation of contracts were justified by Premier Hepburn on the ground that the power contracted for would not be needed. The fact remains, the Hepburn government has re-entered with contracts for one half million horsepower to cost three hundreds as in Ontario. Having regard for the present situation and the inability to get it here, in time you must pay, and pay through the nose."

Charging that Mr. Hepburn was out to destroy four years in his own cabinet, the speaker asked the electors to support the Conservative discussion in deterring policy. Do not be misled, declared, Mr. Lawson, with all his followers can he not pick out three men with sufficient ability and stability to fill those posts. He can-but he won't. If he will, why doesn't he do it. Surely he can't be afraid."

"Now is the morning veiled suggestions that if elected, so and so will get cabinet posts. That is why I am afraid of democracy and getting autocracy and dictatorship," concluded the speaker, closing his address with an urgent appeal for the support of the Conservative candidate of the riding for their candidate.

J. de C. HEPBURN CANDIDATE FOR CONSERVATIVES

Mr. Hepburn declared that he had been connected with the Conservative Party for thirty years and he had yet to make an enemy in either half of the riding.

"If elected," declared, "You will find me with both arms stretched across Prince Edward and Lennox. I will show no favors and will work in the joint interests of both counties."

MOTOR STEERED WITH A STICK

'Mother of Invention' Has Found a New Way to Run a Car

It has often been said that "necessity is the mother of invention." Apparently this proverb was all too true because parked in front of the Provincial Police office on Market St. was seen an improved coupe that drew the attention of many passers-by.

Instead of the conventional steering wheel the vehicle was equipped with a solid piece of hard wood, affixed across the top of the steering column and was the only medium by which the driver could steer the vehicle. Then at the rear was noticed a tin can, placed over the entrance to the gasoline tank in lieu of the customary gas tank cap. Provincial Police authorities obtained the licence plate number of the vehicle and will endeavour to ascertain whether or not the owner could be permitted to drive the vehicle with such a poorly improvised steering apparatus. The piece of wood used for steering the car is of the cross bar type, the driver having to cling to the two ends sections to manipulate the vehicle on the road. Police authorities feel the invention is not sufficiently safe to be permitted on the road, however.

COLLECTOR TELLS OF SCRAP PAPER

Sees on His Journeys About Town Many Unusual Places

It's a job, this collecting of scrap paper, a job which carries him into the remote corners of the city day after day, delving deep into cellars, the dusty shops of local stores and winding back alleys where repose the bundles of salvage he seeks, seldom, if ever, does any man in this city who for years has carried on his humble trade.

All this work for the profit of 30 cents per one hundred pounds of the first grade article, he points out.

"Times used to be good," confides the local collector. "But they're not any more. I've been at it. A few years ago there were only one or two of us now there must be a couple of dozen, all trying to make a living at it."

A connoisseur in the matter of collections, Mr. Dingman passes up old iron and rubber products of the waste metal dealer's bin. "Getting too old to bum around; I leave that to the younger fellows. Just paper now. It is easier to handle."

Times haven't been so good of late for those who trundle the little paper and junk filled carts. At one time paper sold high, frequently as high, that is, around forty five or fifty cents the hundred, if memory serves right. But there came trouble in the shape of more collectors and an apparent abundance of the commodity. Whether they will go up again remains a matter of speculation, speculation just as interesting as that of gold mines, or oil or other treasure sunk in the ground.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, August 21—(Special)—Coming in from the north a terrific rain storm accompanied by lightning and thunder passed over Trenton Thursday afternoon. The rain came down in torrents and was swept along in sheets by the high wind. No. 1 Power House on the Trent River was hit with the full force of the storm and the supply of electricity into Trenton was cut off for a quarter of an hour. Electric driven machines in all the local factories stopped, giving operators an unexpected rest. When the power came back on industry progressed as usual. Crops in the neighbouring farming sections were pounded into the ground by the driving rain but no tragedy by lightning were recorded.

Mixed Foursome Golf

With many of the members on hand Trenton Golf Club held their monthly mixed foursome matches on the course Wednesday. Good games were registered by the majority of the contestants and the reason for the splendid contests was credited to the ideal weather that prevailed. Playing a better brand of golf than their rivals Miss R. White and Mr. W. J. Nugent took the laurels of the tourney. Refreshments were served after the games with Miss Frank Bainbridge and Mrs. Harold Weller acting as hostesses.

Mercantile TBI Washed Out

A heavy downfall prevented Trent Cottons and Stoney Lonsmens playing the second Mercantile loop final last night, and it is likely that the both aggregations will be battling at Bayshore diamond tonight while Trenton Grabams and Point Anne are toasting in the Cement town.

Just Push a Button And the Machine Does the Rest — Your Favorite Station Automatically Tunes in—Arm-Chair Control and Other Magic Touches on New Radios.

Since the days of Aladdin's magic lamp ordinary mortals have dreamed of accomplishing complex tasks by a single movement of the hand. In those days it was a wave of the hand, the rubbing of a lamp, but in this modern electrical age it has been to press a button. And now, as though the miracle of radio itself were not enough, RCA Victor engineers have perfected a new electric tuning system which has been incorporated in many of their new radio instruments by means of which you merely press a button and your favorite radio station is tuned in instantly and more precisely than one could do it manually. This on the authority of Mr. H. J. Sims of the RCA Victor Company, who addressed last night the radio dealers of Belleville and vicinity at a banquet in the New Queen's Hotel.

"The push-button electric tuning is only one of a number of truly amazing improvements made in the famous RCA laboratories have incorporated in a new series of radios" just announced," said Mr. Sims.

"Every conceivable type of table and console model is in a wide assortment of distinctively designed 'beauty-tone' cabinets which have been skilfully fashioned not only to please the eye, but to get the most out of the acoustic capabilities of the instruments they house. These instruments also include the new battery-operated radios which, for the first time provide listeners in unelectrified areas with a standard of performance comparable to the more publicized AC instruments of the city."

"It was the development of a remarkable new automatic frequency control circuit by RCA Victor engineers which made possible a truly foolproof, practical and easy to operate tuning system," declared Mr. Sims. "To put it simply, when the pointer on the dial is brought to even an approximate station setting by the push-button electric tuning system, the automatic frequency control circuit acts to bring the radio set into perfect resonance with the desired program signal. Moreover, these same great engineers have developed magnetic core transformers and air trimmers that are impervious to temperature and humidity changes and therefore keep the various radio circuits in permanent factory alignment and adjustment: they also insure that the dial calibrations for the various stations will always be the same."

"There are eight push buttons, four on each side of the dial. Beside each button is a little window showing the call letter of the station. Once set, you have only to press the button and the station will come in instantly and as precisely tuned as if an engineer had carefully adjusted the station.

As an added luxury, RCA Victor has provided "arm-chair control." The push-button arrangement has been duplicated in an attractive but unobtrusive little box. This control box may be inconspicuously placed on the arm of a chair or at the table and connected to the radio by a thin cable that lies under a rug or along the wall molding.

"The Singing Marine" Dick Powell - Splendid in Big Musical Film

Dick Powell, Warner Bros' handsome singing star, who was last seen here in the gorgeous "Gold Diggers of 1937" a few months ago, will appear again today and Monday on the screen of the Belle Theatre in another famous musical comedy, "The Singing Marine," Warner Bros. 1937 MGM formation of stars, fun, girls and tunes.

This is a yarn about a "leatherneck" from the San Diego barracks, possessed of plenty of good looks and a splendid voice, who is sent to New York by his company-mates to have a try at the amateur hour contest conducted by the famous "Major Bowes."

He makes the grade and leaps at once to fame and an enormous salary. But feminine hero-worship—plus the money he is making—turns Dick's head.

He forgets also his girl friend, Doris Weston (new singing beauty of the screen) who was a waitress in San Diego.

But when his leave of absence expires, he has to return to his Marine Company and is assigned to duty in China. There he gets a chance to perform an heroic feat and save a comrade, which restores him to the regard of his fellow-marines and of Doris, too.

The cast of grand songs in the production, five of them by the famed team of Harry Warren and Al Dubin and the other by Warren and Johnny Mercer, "The Girl Who Couldn't be Kissed" is one of the most novel songs of the year. The musical numbers created and directed by the famed Busby Berkeley.

Powell and Miss Weston are supported by a splendid cast which includes Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Lee Dixon the eccentric dancer, Jane Darwell Don Rockwell of Marcella Marlen, Jane Wyman and Larry Adler the harmonica champion.

"The Singing Marine" has plenty of comedy, a lot of big spectacles, and is highly recommended for refreshing summertime entertain.

The Belle Latest World news Events and Cretna Green a novel colorgraph will be presented on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.10." "The Singing Marine" starts at 2.30, 7.30 and 9.30.

"Barry Coast" and "Littlest Rebel"—Revival of Two Grand Hits

All the flaming color, the rowdy, boisterous clamor of that lawless colony which sprang into being in the early days of the California gold rush of 1849 has been caught in "Barbary Coast" commencing Sunday matinee at 12.00 and continuing Monday and Tuesday as grand revival hit No. 1 brought back for the many who missed this great picture on previous showing here. Edward G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins, Harold G. Robinson and Joel McCrea offering the finest performances of their respective careers.

Into the epic of the building of America's gold mecca and the part played by pioneer newspaper publishers who fought to the death to build a thriving, responsible city that inimitable writing team, Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht have woven a powerful and thrilling story of love and treachery in the romance of human passions.

Into this world of gold-mad, love-hungry men Sam Swan, a beautiful girl comes to marry a gold-miner. When she finds him dead, she accepts the offer of the ruthless, powerful Louis Chamalis to preside over the crooked roulette wheel in his notorious Bella Donna cafe. Chamalis holds the town in the palm of his hand. Men lose their fortunes at the wheel and a world of complaints spells speedy death.

In this environment Swan grows hard and cold, hating all men and particularly the worshipping Chamalis who decks her with diamonds but never finds her her love.

Then into her life walks Jim Carmichael, idealistic young miner, and they fall in love. Learning how true identity means bitter disillusionment for him, however, and it is not until they have faced great peril together and escaped the jealous fury of Chamalis that Jim realizes Swan's true worth and his love for her.

"The Littlest Rebel"

Cast in pantalettes and crinolines, Shirley Temple is currently exacting the most lovable of Confederates in that grand story of the Civil War, "The Littlest Rebel", shown as Hit No. 2 on this great revival show.

Because of its dramatic suspense and its many scenes of tender pathos, "The Littlest Rebel" gives Shirley her first real opportunity as a dramatic actress, while her capacity for song, dance and laughter never fails to astonish and delight audiences.

Shown today only at the Capitol outlaws of the famous play from which it was adapted. Advice to the Lovelorn

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Husband Tries to Undermine Her Influence With the Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband, I suppose, would pass muster as a good citizen. He is honest, doesn't break the laws, and is a successful business man. But he is sowing the whirlwind in our home. He is so madly and insanely devoted to our children that he will stop at nothing to wean them away from me, and to have a greater influence over them than I have.

He spoils them, will not allow me to correct their faults. When we buy them suitable clothes, he will go out and buy them stuff which appeals to their vanity. He had a half-grown boy's suit cut down for my little son of four, and now the child will not wear suitable clothes.

I provide proper meals for the children: Fruits, cereals, milk, cream, the right sort of meat. He urges them at the table to eat "man's food", with the result that their stomachs are constantly out of order.

The children are quick enough to take advantage of this hold they have over him. He tells me, too, of ten brags about it, and puts the younger ones up to twisting their father around their fingers.

What's to be the end of this state of affairs? I shudder to think.

Dispossessed.

Why not tell your husband, as you're told me, about the nursery politics which is going on in your home; that the older ones understand his influence and is not only using it, but is teaching the younger children to abuse it to their advantage.

If father could be concealed back of a door, or in a closet some time while the baby boy is instructing little brother how to get the best of dad, it might bring about a reform. In the meantime, talk to your husband repeatedly about this state of affairs and how bad it is for the children.

Her Mother Says, Without Money Flies Out of the Window

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mother and married sister both say that love flies out of the window when there is no money to pay the bills. They also say that love can fall in love dozens of times and it's a mistake to take "false alarms" seriously.

The young man is 23 years of age, and makes only $15.00 a week. It would be years before he would earn enough for us to marry. Also, they say, he is not good looking. He may not be out for money, as my family is well-to-do. However, he is saving his money before he knew this.

This strange thing is I don't actually know my own feelings, but I think of him all day long, and do not want to give him up. He's the first man I've ever thought of. I'm 19 years old.

Miss E.

At 19 years of age, you have plenty of time to wait, to discover whether you're really in love, or as your mother puts it, whether it's a "false alarm".

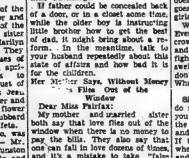
Am ambitious young man of 23 in this country can certainly hope for better prospects than $15.00 a week. Today every city, town and hamlet is trying to make people more prosperous by giving them instruction in classes for adult Education and Vocational Training. Why doesn't this young man enroll in one or two classes?

Some time ago, a young man who was a slim painter, and wanted to make more money, wrote to me for advice. He learned more about the technicalities of his trade by consulting books in the Public Library. Through this means he has increased his income.

Don't forget that fine old platitude "The Lord helps those who help themselves".

Then Get Together, But Not Exactly "Steady"

Dear Miss Fairfax:



We've been going together for a year or more but not exactly "steady". Still he gets raving mad if I go out with any other young men. He says time after time that he doesn't hold good for him, and he goes out repeatedly with other girls.

We quarrel about this frequently and then I make up with our crowd, and I dance with other boys and he dances with other girls, so right, but when we go out alone it's awful. He says he loves me, but I don't think he has proved it. What do you think about it?

Puzzled.

Since you are not engaged, and so not even claim to go "steady", you are certainly at liberty, by all the rules of the game, to go out with and dance with whom you please. If the young man shows temper when you go with someone else, and he reserves this privilege for himself, he is certainly a poor sport.

Quite in him that age-old maxim that, "sauce for the gander is also sauce for the goose".

Shirley Temple starred with John Boles and Jack Holt in "The Littlest Rebel" at the Capitol Sun day midnite at 12.05 and Mon. and Tues.

Make Gift to A Child His Property

Youngster Should be Permitted to Play With it as He Likes

(By Lida Grenelle)

Uncle Ralph gave his three-year-old nephew a boat for his birthday. Uncle Ralph was fond of boats, and his gift was a very fine one, with all the latest fixtures.

Nephew Joey was properly delighted, especially with the pontoons, through every one of which he could stick his little finger.

"Get a long string, Joey," Uncle Ralph said, "and we'll try her out on the pond."

Joey, an unexpected pout. "I want to drag it," he muttered. "But Joey, it isn't a cart!" Uncle Ralph said, unable to hide the scorn he felt.

Reluctantly Joey went in search of strong. Reluctantly he left the boat with Uncle Ralph. Later, back on the porch again, he watched with a distrustful, disapproving scowl, as his uncle fastened the string.

"I want to drag it," he said, and tugged at the boat in Uncle Ralph's hands.

Uncle Ralph pulled the end of the boat gently out of Joey's clutching fingers and started off, the proud with it. "Come along, everybody", he shouted. "We're going to do a little sailing."

Joey Not There

Uncle Ralph's boat, when wound, tugged purposefully off with considerable speed, full 25 yards from shore.

"Isn't she a beaut!" Uncle Ralph exclaimed delightedly. "Isn't she, Joey! What are you going to name her? How about Miss Lorene? There's a good name."

But Joey was not there. Joey had disappeared.

"Where's Joey?"

"Oh, he's at the house crying over something." Brother Mark said casually. "Let me launch her this time, Uncle Ralph."

Joey never took any interest in his Uncle Ralph's boats. He was horrid and wet after the pond, and it wasn't his boat anyhow. It was Uncle Ralph's.

Uncle Ralph was pretty sore. He appeared quite a bit that day. "You're spoiling that child," he complained to Joey's father. "Letting him get notions like that."

But maybe everybody has a right to his notions, however, a fellow certainly has a right. It seems to me, to his own birthday presents, to do with as he sees fit. Boats, to be sure, were originally designed to sail rather than to drag, but if the owner prefers to drag it, then he has the right to stop him!

Either give or don't give is my motto.! When you do give, go the whole way and fight without any strings, suggestions or restrictions as to what is to be done with the present.

Glasses and Silver

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When using footed glasses (water and ice tea) at dinner, does one use coasters? If not, what should one do with the iced tea spoon?

2—When serving a salad with a small dinner (family style but the salad on individual plates) does one put the salad fork on the salad plate, on the table with the other flat silver, or doesn't one use a salad fork?

3. When serving ice cream and cake at a small party, does one use a teaspoon for the ice cream and a fork for the cake, or would it be correct for the spoon to be used for both?

Thank you.

1—It is not necessary to use coasters with the water glasses. But under the iced tea glasses there should be either coasters or small glass or china plates (of the size of bread and butter plates). The small plates are more convenient, since they do make a place "rest" the ice tea spoons. But there should be something under the glass to protect the mahogany and to provide a harbor for the spoons.

2—Yes, when we serve a salad with the main course, and on individual salad plates, we should also provide special forks, either medium size forks or salad forks, for the salad. We should have a fresh fork for with which to eat the salad.

The salad fork should be placed with the other silver pieces at the individual place: on the left of the plate, with the other forks, and nearest the plate.

3.—If small dry cakes are served with the ice cream, it is not necessary to place a fork for the cake. But if we serve, say, slices of frosted layer cake, then we should provide a separate fork for eating the cake. Using an ice cream spoon to eat "gooy" cake is only makeshift service.

Marriage Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A woman of fifty is about to be married. She has a high school girl in her life spending her summers at home with her parents. The parents are still active, taking an interest in life. Should the couple announce their own marriage, or should it be announced by the bride's parents?

A Reader.

I suggest that, under these circumstances, the bride have her parents announce her marriage. Having a marriage announced by the bride's parents is always desirable, since it lends background and dignity to the announcement. And since the bride of whom you write has parents who are with her, parents would undoubtedly delight in being given the honor of making this announcement. However, I hope that she decides to have the announcement made by her parents. (Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

Long Locks Fashionable Again, Coiffures Varied

(By Helen Pollett)

It is apparent to the seeing eye that the fly-away fluffy hairdress is about to come to its end, edging away from childish arrangements, getting a bit grown up in the head. Curls will not entirely be done, but inclined to disguise the fact that locks are chopped off. Even the high hairdress is gaining favor—rolls and puffs on the top of the head, with a wave from forehead and the nape line and not a sign of a curl in sight.

As summer gets older there will be even more attention given to hair growing, it will grow and grow you put your mind on it. A new arrangement is a middle part that extends to the back of the neck. Along the parting are rolls laid on the bias.

To gain the smooth crown effect some ladies of fashion have chin the ends of their tresses submitted to the permanent waving machine. They have discovered that they look younger without an undulation. And the smooth effect is easier to groom.

Coiffures are never more varied. You can cook up any original arrangement of your wool and be sure that it is modish and chic.

Tweedy should not have an oily base, must be applied lightly, not rubbed in. She should drink plenty of water. She and Mrs. Grundy morning will make the skin all over look horrible—blotches and even more sensitive glands of the face. Rub the flesh with moistened table salt, turn on the shower and dry it gradually. Follow with a brisk rub down.

While hairs coming? Go into a conference with yourself. You can dye them or endure them. If you feel that you must dye, seek the advice of a specialist who will suggest the right coloring medium.

There are hundreds of good colouring agents. Certain ones are best for certain shades of tresses. Make an unhappy choice and there will

A chance you are blessed with violet eyes, don't use blue eye shadow. A faint film of rouge is better. It brings out the glimmers of the soul windows.

Some ladies of fashion have even rouge their knees when they apply a dark green powder to the eyelid shutters. Making up the eyes is a ticklish business; unless a girl uses a feder mirror she can't see the reflections in the mirror, she should not attempt it.

James Kent looked at his daughter with steady eye. "Allie," he said deliberately, "did I see you last night at the dance with Bill Hinker?"

"Were you there, dad?" smiled Almira Kent.

"I certainly was—and there was a whole posse with me," retorted the sheriff bluntly. "Perhaps we were looking for somebody else you'd been dancing with, my girl!"

Almira paled. "I don't know it," she confessed.

"I asked you, did you go to that dance with Bill Hinker?"

"Of course Bill took me—you know I have been out with him before."

"I know it, Allie. And your mother and I have both asked you not to have anything to do with him."

"If you would tell me what Bill has done—" she hesitated.

"Well—he has been mixed in all kinds of messes, Allie. The time has come when he has got to be reformed. He is a menace. His morning, noon and night has been suspected of several things, and there are witnesses to prove that he was the masked man who held up the mail stage on Monday. He is all the brag in the world, daughter, and he must have cleaned up a lot of gold from that mail robbery—but it is a wonder he hasn't asked you to run away with him—he is that kind. And the neighborhood is getting too hot for him, I guess!"

Almira's face reddened deeply. Perhaps her father had guessed correctly, and Bill had asked her to elope with Bill Hinker.

And now her father seemed to understand all about it, even to the planned elopement!

"Who is that man, father?" asked Almira with sudden interest. As a rider swept into the gate and went down the steps to greet him. The two men talked together in low tones, and Almira, seeing her small rocking chair, guessed that it was police business, as she and her mother had Mr. Kent's official business.

Once the man from Blaxton glanced up and his face grew bright and Almira's dark gaze, glancing away immediately and pink came into her cheeks.

After a little while the man from Blaxton rode away and the sheriff came to the porch for a moment before calling for his own horse. "You better not elope tonight, Allie," he said tersely.

As Almira sat there thinking busily she heard cautious footsteps and then, in the small grove of young walnut trees, she glimpsed Bill Hinker's heavy face and motioning finger. Then he dropped down among the walnut sprouts. She did not know that Curly Rob, one of the cowboys, had also seen that brief appearance of young Hinker, and that, even now, he was whispering a message over the house telephone!

So the girl dropped her sewing and, picking up a muslin garment, tiptoed over to the walnuts where there was a seat under the largest tree. Here she sat down and pretended to read, but her downcast eyes were fixed on Bill Hinker.

"Get me one of your dad's horses, Allie," he said low but clearly. "I got to get out of the county right now, see? The sheriff and his posse are after me—cause? Do you want me to get pinched?" he asked angrily.

"Of course not, Billy! But I asked if you had told me what you told me—about taking the blame for another fellow—he still was not through. I know he still was!"

He stared at her, astounded. "I don't get you!" he said confusedly. "You told me that you'd be my girl—after which I said you to get me one of your dad's horses to save me—you sit and think about something else."

"I will get you my own horse, Bill. Pancho is my very own and I have a right to—"

"Is Pancho there?" snapped the young man sharply.

Almira ran to the corral and caught her pretty black pony which she saddled. She mounted and, making him leisurely around the house toward the walnut wood. Just as she slipped out of the saddle, Bill Hinker leaped out of the saddle. Bill Hinker leaped into the brush and went leading out of the yard and down over the eastern trail toward the mountains. Five minutes afterward her father and the man from Blaxton, heading a posse, swept past the house and turned down the eastern trail toward Bill.

A couple of hours afterward Almira walked into her father's room to find her pretty mother sitting there, her face deathly terribly worn and anxious. "Oh, mother, is daddy all right?" was her first question. Her mother shook her head or nodded she grasped a question from Mrs. Bill Hinker.

"Caught," said her mother, briefly, "and daddy, my daddy, my dear, and they have put him in jail. There is something else that you have not told me, Almira, and you tried last year."

It was a long time before Almira wanted to see anybody, but after a while she heard the man from Blaxton, who had come to the ranch for dinner, and, although she rather hated him at first because he had known how foolish she could be, his persistent wooing at last won her. People said it was a splendid match—that of the prettiest bride and the handsomest man in the county!

Sir H. Wilkins and Party Start North

Edmonton, Aug. 21 (CP)—Sir Hubert Wilgins and five companions were expected to take off today from Fort Smith, N.W.T., 535 miles north of Edmonton, on a flight to the Arctic coast to join the search for Soviet Russia's missing transpolar flyers.

Sir Hubert's giant flying boat, purchased for the expedition by the Soviet government, arrived at Fort Smith last night after a nine-hour, 900 mile flight from Fort Resolution. Ont. The previous day the party flew from New York to Port Arthur via Toronto.

The plane expected to reach the coast at the mouth of the Copper mine River almost due north of Fort Smith, and proceed west to Aklavik, near the mouth of the Mackenzie River, Air Commodore Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, Toronto, chief pilot of the expedition, for election purposes, said Mr. Rowe. These things together with the abolition of Ontario House had cost Ontario farmers ten millions a year.

"Mr. Hepburn has no money to lend the farmer out of $9,000,000 surplus," he said. "He has no money for the better breeding of his stock. No money for the agricultural College at Guelph, for the farmers' institutes. He has plenty of money to pay a valet $1,500 a year to look after his $10,000 bull which just managed to win fourth place at the Royal Winter Fair."

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 21.—(AP)—Quiet buying in Steels and Specialties today managed to bring mild rejuvenation to a rather tired looking stock market.
In most of the two-hour proceedings mine prices were irregular, about evenly divided. Some short covering, based on the theory the market has already had a good selloff, then appeared and a slow upward trend developed. Transfers were around 300,000 shares.
Trading was light. Canadian shares with a few issues showing minor losses. Canadian Pacific dropped 1-4 and Dome Mines a fraction amount. Dominion funds were unchanged at 99.86 7-16.
Share gains running to 2 points or so were shown by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Vanadium, Crucible Steel, Youngston Sheet and Tube, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber and Goodyear.
Backward were Westinghouse, Douglas Aircraft; Johns, Consolidated Edison, Phelps Dodge and Borg Warner.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 21.—(CP)—The Toronto Stock Exchange closed through its greater part of today's short session but it tightened up considerably in the line of buying and at the close showed little change from Friday's final prices. Consolidated Chibougamau was encouraged by the latest official statement regarding the company's affairs and a net gain of a few cents was recorded at the close.
Industrials were neglected and price adjustments were limited to small fractions. Westons came out in considerable volume at a drop of 1-4 to 3-4. Rice Ribbon weakened 1-8 and Loblaw A was up 1-4.
In the Steels prices were down for Burlington, Dominion Coal Pfd, Steel of Canada and Dominion Steel. Utilities held up with Brazilian, Montreal Power and United Fuel Pfd showing improvement. Bell Telephone was off slightly. Banks were steady. Holding Shares lifeless and the papers were unchanged to slightly lower. Mercury Mills Pfd closed 2 points down.
The Base Metal share market was sluggish with Falconbridge, Smelters and Wilts-Amulet a little higher and Sherritt lower by about 6 cents. Nickel held steady in quiet trading. Lake issues developed little action.

CHEESE BOARD

A total of 2694 white and 60 colored cheese offered on this inspection's trading of the Belleville Cheese Board brought three prices, colored sold at 13 11-16 cents and Mr. Hart; 1,917 white sold at 13 5-8 cents and the balance at 13 9-16 cents.
Initial bid was 13 7-8 cents.

LARGE VARIED FRUIT DISPLAY ON LOCAL MART
No Change in Prices Noted From Last Week's Close
FOWL PLENTIFUL
Eggs Decline Slightly With "A's" Holding at 27 Cents

Belleville's city market once more lived up to its reputation of being one of the finest of its kind east of Toronto, when the morning saw large and varied display of fruits, vegetables and other farm and dairy produce presented in a large crowd of Saturday morning shoppers. Filled high on the pavement pear overflowing bushe fruits and vegetables in basket box and bushel lots gave a colorful evidence of the bountiful hand, which Nature has waved over the rich surrounding districts. Vegetables of the field were in great abundance, fruits both domestic and imported lay in colorful piles as early morning shoppers with each other to take advantage of the prices quoted. A number of would-shoppers did not deter vendors of shoppers from crowding the market square where scarcely a bountiful display of dairy produce, home-cooking and other edibles filled the heart of the lady of the house was on exhibition.
A general survey of prices revealed but little change in the tone of those quoted from a week ago. On the whole quotations remained fairly level with little or no fluctuation in the price of staple fruits and vegetables.
In spite of the fact, that canning factories are now in operation and are absorbing the greater part of the field tomatoes a good quantity of this product made was on display today. Basket lots were quoted at ten, fifteen and twenty cents per basket, while bushels moving well at fifty cents. Potatoes showed little or no change in price, selling at twenty and twenty-five cents for peck lots with bushels quoted at seventy five and eighty cents. Sweet corn still held its position as one of a great part of the buying public and showed little or no change with dozens selling at fifteen and two for twenty five cents. Cabbage and cauliflower at ten and ten cents upwards, cucumbers from ten cents per dozen and five cents for ten cents, new squash at twenty cents, and the delicate red tomato, green onions, celery and string beans at prevailing prices rounded out a fine vegetable display.
Variable Display of Fruit
One of the most notable displays of fruit headed by the color of the peach and domestic plums added a distinct touch to the general appearance of the market today.
The ever popular Burbank making its initial appearance and a responsive note with shoppers selling at the pet basket price. Grapes made their 1937 debut and sold at a similar price. Shiros, however were quoted at 25c per basket. The pet basket to the few vendors who had them on display. Yellow egg plums were plentiful and sold from 50c per basket upwards. Huckleberries showed little decline in quantity and held firm at the prevailing price of 81.75 per 11 quart basket. Crabapples were offered for the first time this season selling at 25 cents for a large sized basket. Duchess apple showing plenty of color proved popular and were quoted at 35c and 40c per box. Canteloupes transported in Early Harvester also sold well at 30 cents per dozen lots.
Watermelons and canteloupe showed plenty of quantity and quality and were available in large prices ranging from 5c upward for the melons. Tomatoes selling at 10c lb. ranged from 20c.
Eggs Slightly Down
Eggs showed a slight decline over the previous week's quote and on the wide market, selling generally at 27c for 'A' selects and 23c for mediums. Strictly fresh eggs were held out for slightly higher prices but the general level tended to the first mentioned price in the latter hours of the morning. Poultry and Spring chickens headed a fine fowl display with the former quoted at from 20c to 22c pound and the latter from 40c each. Farmers' butter remained steady at 30c, per pound with an occasional vendor quoting 'fancy' stock at 35c per pound rolls. Homecooking stands did a flourishing business with many ladies taking advantage of the many edibles offered.
Meat, fresh and fresh lake trout caught the eyes of fish lovers, and sold at 25c and 20c per pound respectively.

Pirates Become Hot as Weather Joining New York Giants in Chasing Chicago Cubs to Wire

Given Good Hurling Bucs Will Make It Tough

CUBS FALTERING

New York Yankees Moving Steadily Towards An-other Pennant

BY SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

Don't sell those Pirates short.

Pie Traynor's sleepwalkers aren't commandmitting any more. The idea may finally have penetrated that you have to keep punching to win ball games, or maybe Pie, himself, is at last getting tough with the boys.

Whatever it is, the Bucs from Pittsburgh have suddenly become as hot as the weather. And, with the Cubs faltering, they're joining the Giants in making a strictly two-fisted brawl of it for the National League flag.

As things stood today, the Cubs were only two games in front of the galloping Giants, while the Pirates, in fourth place by the slim margin of half a game, were five games back of the New Yorkers.

The momentary breathing spell the Cubs enjoyed after Thursday's victory, didn't last nearly long enough for them, for they dropped a 6-4 decision to the Reds last night in Cincinnati. This setback, coupled with the Giants' 11 hit, 13-4 win over the Phillies, and the Pirates' 7-4 edge over the Cardinals on yesterday's 13th inning 4 home run in a different garage, as they say on Delancey street.

Pirates Need Pitching

The Pirates' particular need at the moment is pitching prowess. Of those thirteen runs they got to the form they displayed earlier in the season and hook up with hitting dynamite the Bucs are exploding all over the place these days, the Pirates will be about the toughest nut to crack in the league.

They've been coming back with the speed of a rubber check since they began their current drive 12 days ago. In that stretch, they've taken eight decisions in 11 games, relying strictly on a batting bombardment that has netted 126 hits, an average of better than 11 per game.

They were given their best pitching in a week yesterday when Cy Blanton turned in a neat relief job, fanned seven, in muffing the Cards although a 15-hit attack on the part of the master-pitcher's cavalry on him any harm.

Giants Smashed Phillies

For the one day, however, the blast set off by the galloping Giants against the hapless Phillies topped everything in sight. Bill Terry's terriers turned their heaviest offensive of the season in running up 13 runs on 13 hits and 3 walks breaks that riddled Dick Bartell with an aiding ankle, Clyde Castleman because of a split nail, and Hal Coffman with a spiked foot.

Paul Derringer potentially accounted for the arclight decision over the Cubs by shutting the Reds, thereby making the Chicago lead as slim as a reducing diet.

The Yankees extended their American League margin to 13½ games when Bill Dickey connected with number gave them an 8 to 7 edge over the Athletics. The second place Tigers received a shot in the arm over and lost to the Browns 11 to 7. The Indians downed the White Sox 7-6 on Earl Averill's homer. The Senators spoiled the Red Sox' 9 to 1. And the Bees nosed out the Brooklyn Dodgers 6 to 5.

LOUIS EXPECTS TO BEAT FARR

Brown Bomber Refuses to Make Any Predictions on Battle

Pompton Lakes, N.J., Aug. 21 (AP) —Joe Louis is willing to talk freely on most subjects—especially baseball—but he becomes strangely silent when it comes to answering one question nearly every interviewer asks. That is how long does he think his bout with Tommy Farr next week will last.

"I feel fine and expect to win," he says, "but there's no chance of me naming the round.

"I picked a few very close, but I was only guessing. After the Max Schmeling bout I decided I should stop picking rounds. The one I got with Bob Pastor also showed me I was foolish. So just say Joe feels great and expects to beat Tommy Farr, that's all."

CAN CINCH FLAG WITH THREE WINS

Newark Bears, Smartest Outfit to Ever Win Pennant

It looked like a big week-end in Newark was due for the faithful followers of the Bears' fortunes, as the Yankee farm hands, like camels smelling out an oasis in the desert, rushed relentlessly forward mathematically to clinch the International League pennant.

Conceded the championship long ago by the other seven clubs of the circuit, the Bears, racing themselves against the record book, needed but one victory to eliminate the last chance of the Syracuse Chiefs, and three triumphs to end the hopes of the Montreal Royals. Even if the Bears shouldn't win another game, a loss by the Chiefs or three by the Royals would also serve to wind up the current pennant chase.

The Bears beat out the Rochester Red Wings 5-1 last night as Joe Vosmik chalked up his 180th win of the season with a three-hit performance on the mound. Only a big hander was almost invincible as he set the Wings down in order in the nine innings.

The Chiefs managed to hang on to second place as they split a doubleheader with the Buffalo Bisons, while Montreal also rained out of a twin bill with Jersey City for the second straight night. The Chiefs took a 13-2 walloping in the opener but evened matters in the second encounter when rookie Floyd Brown, just up from Trenton of the Interstate Pennsylvania, shut out the Bisons with four hits and won 5-0.

The Buffalo Bisons Orioles took advantage of the Bisons 50-50 break to increase their fourth place lead over them to 7½ games with a double win over the fading Toronto Maple Leafs. The Birds swamped former 1-0 as lefty Carl Fischer hurled a three hit job and outslugged the Leafs in the wind-up 10 to 6.

Princess Margaret Seven

The Head, Sociand, Aug. 21 (CP-Havas)—Princess Margaret, seven years old today, celebrated the occasion by a children's party at the Balmoral Castle to her mother and father, and elder sister, Princess Elizabeth.

Her cousin; Hon. Gerald Lascelles, son of the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood, also celebrated a birthday today, his 13th.

Aajmaa Jrs. Enter Next Round By Defeating Peterboro 8-3

Win Two Games in Play-downs on Successive Night

Showing too much class in every department the Belleville Aajmaa Juniors made it winning straight", in successive days, as they downed the Peterborough juniors 8 to 3 at Coleman Flats in the second and final game of the first round junior O.A.A.A. play-downs the Bellevile kids trimmed the visiting Peterboro crew night previous and winning the series two straight. The Belleville Aajmaa meet the Cahen Juniors in the next round with the first game scheduled to be played in Belleville next week.

The classiness of the young Petes the Aajmaas out-classed them in both tussles and were by far the better squad at winning on their merits. Cosch "Red" Townsend coached Lum Carson on the pitching duties of the night and the slight righthander hurled a sterling game and although they only had one run chalked up against him a costly circuit blow by Foster, the Petes, right fielder. The other two runs garnered by the Belleville Lock Jaws were of the gift nature and the result of some dumb ball on the part of the locals' inner works. Otherwise the Belleville kids were given splendid support in the clutches, Carson Adams, Tapp and Ams featuring their plays. Tapp was kicking in with six assists and two put outs while Adams had nine. The visiting Peterborough nine was guilty of seven glaring errors many of which entered into the ultimate scoring of the locals.

Called Two Moundsmen

The golden-armed Aajmaas cuffed the efforts of the Peterboro moundsmen for a total of 15 safe blows, including four doubles. Craig, after hurling Thursday night, was sent back to try the iron-man stunt, but he was demolished in the fifth by Favour of McCarthy, who stemmed the tide of the Belleville offensive until the eighth. When they broke out again to score a brace of runs. The Aajmaas collected nine runs and 11 hits off Craig and three runs and four hits off McCarthy, while Carson was limiting the visitors to four hits, all scattered. Craig struck out two and walked three during his score-inning stint. Favour struck out Carthy whiffed two and walked three in two and two-thirds innings of pitching. Carson only struck out three but his control was superb as he only walked two. Conroy, Courney and Craig collected a brace of hits each, while Carson hit a homer for the visitors, while the visiting Peterboro outfielders assisted his own cause with three timely hits. Amo and Reynolds each collected four hits of safeties while Rowbotham hit the pellet for four bases of hits Amo, Tapp, Reynolds and Rowbotham hit for doubles.

How Runs Scored

A walk, an error and two hits gave the Aajmaas two runs in the third, while three singles netted them another in the fourth. A walk, two singles and Reynolds' double gave the homesiters two more in the fifth, while four hits resulted in another tally in the sixth. The Aajmaas were retired by the homesters in the eighth on two hits, Romsky's sacrifice with the bases loaded and a force play measure. Foster hit for the circuit clout in the eighth for the only initial counter in the sixth, while hits from the bats of Conroy and O'Leary, coupled with some throwing of the ball around unnecessarily by the Peterboro players, gave the locals their final bid, as Carson struck out the last batter in the inning and made the next two pop to Tapp.

The line ups—Belleville Aajmaas—Steve Romsky, c; Adams 2b, Romsky as, Amo lf, Moon cf, O'Neil 1b, Tapp 2b, Reynolds rf and Carson p. Peterborough—Courney 1b, Conroy as, Creighton c, Foster lf, Jamieson 3b, Anderson rf, Miles cf and Craig and McCarthy p.

LATTA DEFEATS FOXBORO BY 10-4 TO EVEN SERIES

S. Hastings Loop to be Decided by Sudden Death Game

Foxboro, Aug. 21 (Special)—All is even in the B. O. League playdowns today as the up and coming Latta team defeated the strong Foxboro squad on the latter's diamond yesterday afternoon decisively, when they pasted "Bud" Wilkins' offerings for a total of six safeties to pound out a 10-4 victory.

The victorious Latta nine could do nothing wrong in the game yesterday and every player on the team played the class of ball, which just could not be beaten. Even after time the Foxboro batters got on base only to have succeeding hitters hit the ball into the Latta infielder's hands for easy outs. The runners left crushed on the base paths tells the story very adequately for with thirteen on the path site Foxboro nine just could not hit to the plate.

Latta Hit in Pinches

On the other hand the Latta squad, although exhibiting the loose 13 to 13, made every hit count and when runners were aboard every batter seemed to have a rabbit's foot secreted somewhere on his person, judging from the placing of their hits.

Latta won the game in the second innings, when to start things away Parks smashed out a double only to be followed by two walks, a single and still batsman as Wilkins put himself in a hole by a monstrous loss of control. Another single followed by two pops in which the fielders elected to try for the runners at the plate ended in all but squash the morale of the Foxboro club as Latta scored seven runs to cover from the setback.

Latta's other tally in the fourth but Foxboro came back with three as they blasted Marsh from the mound by four consecutive hits, Callaghan relieved him and pitched-batsman ball until the eighth when Gay connected for a triple with the bases loaded at Marsh's mound to finish the game. One run was scored with Younge on the count and then Gay singled to score Gay from third. In the meantime Latta scored three more in the seventh, bringing their total to ten.

The fifth and final game of the series will be played on the Foxboro diamond on Monday afternoon at 4.30 with the series all tied up at two games apiece and a fight to the finish between two very evenly matched teams. A "crescendo" of tussle Latta were undoubtedly the better team but the Foxboro squad at the same time were away below

Trenton Grahams Even Series Defeating Point Anne by 8-7

Error in Ninth Allows Trenton to Score Winning Run

Surprising their most ardent supporters the Graham team, champions of the Trenton Softball League, eked out a narrow margin of a 7 to 8 victory over the Point Anne squad in the Cement Village last evening thereby making it "all even" in the best of 3 series for intermediate O. A. S. A. playdowns in the "B" series. A third and deciding game will likely be played in Belleville, each team having won one game on their opponent's diamond.

Skipper Bateman sent his ace moundsman, Lorne Bateman, to the hilltop while Burtt was Manager Smith's choice for Trenton's hurling assignment. Although Bateman struck out seven, Burtt's two, both pitchers yielded ten hits apiece. With the scores all knotted up in the ninth and Anderson perched on second for Trenton, Whitehead, Point Anne second baseman, missed Long's easy roller, that should have been an out, and Anderson, scampered home with what proved to be the winning run, as the "crescendo men" failed to score in their half of the ninth.

Point Anne scored three in the initial frame and added a fourth in the third, but the Trenton squad rallied to knot the count in the fourth, when they scored four runs on four hits coupled with an error. Trenton bagged three more in the eighth, but Point Anne rallied to score twice and the squad entered the ninth with the score standing seven all, when Whitehead bobbled and the shouting was over and the home town lassuli ceased. The Trenton squad hit consistently the delivery-ies of Bateman as the first seven in the batting order collected hits. The Anderson brothers and Long counted a brace of safeties each, while Ellis and Emmerson hit in the clutches. Nicky Sero led the homesters with four hits potent bat as he had a perfect day at bat with four hits, netting a ma.mouth circuit blow in the third. Genereaux and Dickey counted one hit each, while Green and Dickey hit singles to complete the Point Anne hitting powers.

The line-ups—Point Anne—Genereaux lf, Dickey rf, Bateman p, Gaulin 1b, Sero as, Green c, Whitehead 2b, Morse 3b and Tummon cf. Trenton — Miller c, Gray 2b, D. Anderson as, Long 1b, Emmerson and Derry rf, Ellis cf, W. Anderson lf, Forester 3b and Burtt p.

LION OF NORTH EASILY DEFEATS TORONTO MATMAN

Put Stranglehold on Opponent And The Referee

SECOND BOUT GOOD

Indian Grappler Introduces New Method of Securing Fall

"Ho Ho", laughed the strutting "Lion of the North", at one period of the main bout of the amateur wrestling bouts held in the Arena last night as he stretched the ropes over the neck of George Hambly classy Toronto wrestler, then turned on Jimmy Simpson, Toronto referee and treated him to the same strangling dose "Two at a time, Ho Ho". And the crowd stood up and cheered the breast-beating Tarzan as he strutted about the ring. But Ho Ho "Lion" Paladino in his name, finally downed the courageous youngster from the green City in spite of the fact, that the clean cut kid from the environs of the Don displayed a fine knowledge of the grunt and gurgle racket and gave the Lion of the North a fine argument for the hardest tussles of his career before saying uncle.

The Toronto youngster however, won the plaudits of the crowd with his clean cut tactics as he beat the staggering strutter from the northern part of the province. He stopped the grunt with the strong name in lightime in the first fall and then when the Lion spread when the Lion spread him on the mat after nineteen minutes of furious going. The Lion of the North finally came back to win the third fall and bout, after some real milling and strutted to the dressing room a victor but still the bane of the large audience.

Almost Stole Show

Pete Pernokis, the flashy Greek artist and Bert Crowthall, Toronto "bad-man", almost stole the show with one of the fiercest most aggressive bouts ever witnessed in the Arena. The boys let go with all they had from bell to bell and at times had the customers standing in the aisles yelling for more. The bout went three falls before the Green gurgler took the measure of his opponent who all through the bout earned the jeers of the crowd with his unsportsmanlike tactics. These boys put on a fine show on that account and deserve praise in any man's town.

One of the first real knockouts of the season came in this city occurred in the preliminary go between Jim Tymoski, fiery Ukrainian mat-man and Ernie Hughson, dusky son of the wild and woolly West. Hughson, who has a record of seven wrestling had gone by when the sound of the fighting bull suddenly flopped the Balkan on the canvas and after some objections from the referee and some hidden nerve centres rose to his feet, while his opponent remained on the mat in all ruby material at our airport, who are desirous of playing with Belleville next fall we are told to assist your club in every way possible. Manager Connie Godfrey is reported to have told local club official, we understand.

Like a bolt from the blue all of the officers of the Belleville Yacht Club resigned in a body at a special meeting of the club held the other night, but it proved to be like the proverbial storm in a tea cup, fizzling, however, as a new and enthusiastic executive was elected to office. President Maurice Callaghan was unanimously returned to office as Commodore, while Secretary is Vice Commodore; Cliff Gibson, Rear Commodore; Raymond Zufelt, Treasurer and Alderman Ernie Baldwin, Secretary. The newly elected officers immediately launched plans for a mammoth regatta for Labor Day week-end but with both power boat and sailing races featured and to be simultaneized with a gala dance in the clubhouse at night. A few of the minor differences were amicably ironed out and we feel the club has launched on a new era in which the nautistic sports return to its former glory in the waters of the Bay of Quinte," was Commodore Callaghan's comment today. In the meantime the club's weekly sailing events will be continued and every effort made to induce the sailing craft to return to the popular sailing meets.

Red Townsend's Aajmaa Juniors were made the goat for the Peterboro kids last night and should have won by a much larger margin

Slowly but surely the football season is rolling downd. The next big civic venture locally will be the Belleville Pals, the week after next, and then we can cock forward to the fall classic coming into its own. Rugby football has advanced by leaps steadily in the Central Ontario zone since the inception of the Lake Shore intermediate O. R. F. U. group three years ago. We understand the Lindsay Rotarians, 1936 group champions, may again function, despite rumors to the contrary coming out of the Kawartha River town. Jack Lamb, their flashy quarterback for the past few years, has been appointed coach. The group officials have already approached the R.C.A.F. authorities relative to the Flyers sponsoring a team in the Lake Shore group, thus elevating the league to six club loop. Wing Commander Godfrey was approached and stated he would consider the matter and announce his decision today. "If we do not have a team in the football picture, all rugby material at our airport, who are desirous of playing with Belleville next fall we are told to assist your club in every way possible," Wing Commander Godfrey is reported to have told local club official, we understand.

Ivan Michaeloff, well known Toronto wrestling promoter, was in the city yesterday in the interests of the amateur grappling bouts. Mr. Michaeloff visited the Arena in the express purpose of doing some cuts this fishing in the city of Quinte and was rewarded for his efforts by catching a fine mess of bass. He intends to stage a return wrestling and other sporting events in Belleville and queried us relative to the possibility of staging a six night bicycle race in the Arena. Motorcycle Johnny Ross of Toronto, who is holidaying, and is an old Belleville resident, dropped in and introduced us. Getting back to the actual wrestling show, the amateurs are surely living the fans what they desire—action personified.

All three bouts saw the grapplers never spare the rod as they entered into the contests with plenty of gusto. What the amateurs lack in finesse they more than make up for in fighting spirit. Wrestling is a game after all is what the patrons desire and these three bouts are surely giving them plenty of it. Amateur wrestling bouts are gaining in popularity.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

He and back lastly. There was nothing afterward about which Jane decided. The hand that held the cigarette was long and slender with the fingers those of an artist. His narrow blood head had the classical set, cold cheeks, nose slightly aquiline, the cheekbones high under the fatigued eyes of the sick. No, there was nothing frail or effete about the face, nor in the grace of his body. One thought of the quick play of a father, the fabled disdain of an aristocrat whose pinned hat, taco jabot and cuffed jumped nervously.

Lorna, looking at him beside Jane, hated Jane more than ever. He could take it all; hear it in any woman into a bowknot, to be worn a while as a trophy, then cast aside.

The Princess said to Jane in her throaty voice: "You have not yet seen the dress you must have, the Rowlands party. The Spring Frolic, which I designed only yesterday, ah, that is the dress for your hair and eyes." She waved, and her gilt in breath, in the fine silk trailing silks melted behind the screen. Jane leaned limp with parted lips watching them go. Heavenly things that she could have from. And the world seemed suddenly like an indifferent soap bubble, enclosing her.

A girl slipped out dreamily. Pale yellow, accords to the curve of her young body, cut in points at her shoulders, tapered to her feet, and went thinly on to a pointed train. Around her neck pressed a cloud of chiffonous grey tulle, through which she glimmered.

"Irene Paule, please!" Madame's hands. "For you, belle Madame! His eyes met hers again, almost intimate.

"I've never seen anything love-lier," Jane said softly. And she thought of the emeralds with a sinking at her heart. Tony's face rose between them and her. Little Jane Carey of Pond du Lac, disposing as Mrs. Anthony Kaye.

Lorna, singer her neckline, remarked: "You should wear rooms stones with that, my dear." A jab to the dark, evil almond.

Jane's hand tightened on her bag, where the monogrammed ring lay as a weapon against her that Lorna might use. It needed only a word to Tony, and that quick he would free to better her. Why had she ever said Tony had given her the ring? The one token old Mrs. Potter had ever given her infant.

Lorna made her feel hard and defiant. "I see you're armoured with this dress," she said, and rose. "I think I will want some of your collection." She turned to the Princess, who took her hand.

"To you I'll be a joy to design for. You will hear that I make only gown very related of very rare women. I will tell you a secret," Italia smiled, with a sudden lighting up of her strong face. "There is no such thing. No absolutely beauty. Also absolutely pure. Do not try to be either, or you will make yourself sick."

Jane walked thoughtfully out between Lorna and La Paule and Lorna. She was sure that the Princess would understand why she had rushed from the room.

The late afternoon was still very bright and warm, and her hair burned under her small hat. "Do let's go somewhere for another cocktail," she said. "It's such a bore ever to go home."

"Wherever you wish." Le Paule looked toward Jane, into the hyacinth blue her eyes, so sweetly, so widely apart.

The boy was like a parade that you wanted to follow. Jane suddenly realized that she did not want to go back to Keystone with Lorna. She had not rid herself of that breathing through him either, a dream leap from the new ghostly garage on Pond du Lac, and a plunge into strange waters that could never be about unless she kept her head above surface.

"They went, on Lorna's decision to the Waldorf. In the Empire room, she felt that same thrilling plunging sensation with the orchestra beating on her nerves.

They were clipping out a tango to the throb of guitars. La Paule murmuring at intervals, rose to dance. In that mood where nothing else counted. She didn't want to think, she didn't want to see. Her lips were full and luscious in her small, creamy face.

Jane watched them off, Henri la Paule's narrow feet close to the floor, his narrow head bent to the vivid flower that was Lorna. In rags stillness, Jane knew they went on as if they were stepping on a glassy surface.

Jane looked forward on the table, unaware of the attention she created in her smart white costume. It hadn't been so long ago that the hideous hat blazed her picture as the girl Anthony Kaye had plucked from Nowhere, the girl whom no one had ever noticed.

Then as la Paule and Lorna swayed to a close, a group of four young people rather ostentatiously brushed by. They settled at a table at the next table, and a voice sounded that whirled Jane around, the color drained from her cheeks. It was Bertram Cotter's voice—of Mrs. Potter's son. Fond du Lac rushed back—

"Who's walking on your grave?" Lorna slid into her chair, her eyes smooth green, as if they had been streaked.

La Paule, with a finger to his feathery mustache, watched the color flow back to Jane's face, and his clever, magazing gaze roved to nearby tables.

"It's just hot in here, isn't it?" Jane tried to smile as she raised her Old Fashioned cocktail. She must have made a mistake, she dared not look at the next table.

The stare struck her like a stone flung into the pool that was her heart and back in the Pond du Lac house that stood on a hill in Pond heart, widening into ripples, smashing on the facing invalid she used to visit for her father's sake, the staggering boy who patronizingly would have made love to her during his vacation.

The stare was round upon her. She forced herself to look. Yes, it was Bertram Cotter, a few years heavier, almost too sleekly got up in brown that clashed in with the brown of his hair, and the eyes that were globed upon her were definitely he wasn't sure. He beckoned to the headwaiter.

CHAPTER X.
DISCONCERTMENT

You could never get away from your past, no matter how much you lied about it and denied it. Jane girl, standing straight and still in the gay crowded Empire room of the Waldorf. A moment ago life had seemed so glamorous so threaded with adventure. Now Bertram Cotter had to turn up, a pointing finger from the Pond du Lac, Jane Carey she had shed forever. He brought with him memories of her father, of the long road winding by the garage and around the curve, that had ever beckoned to escape.

It wasn't fair that of all the spots and hours in New York Bertram Cotter should have chosen to come here. He could be for more dangerous than the Comte la Paule who sat beside her, sipping his cocktail. La Paule had seen her fresh and untried that first afternoon in the city. He might so easily have recognized her as a little cheat, prying her way in. Yet he had said nothing—if he did remember. But Bertram was another matter. "You can prove I remember who I am or where I came from," Jane told herself. And she held up her bright smooth head, secure in her smart hat, her charming white costume. Very different from the girl Bertram had known.

Bertram's gaze shifted, returned, lingering with a shade of envy on the loveliness of the party of three. The headwaiter, familiar with tabloid photographs, had named the romantic mystery girl as the present Mrs. Anthony Kaye. With her, Miss Howland of Tuxedo Park and the Comte la Paule. Names that Bertram remembered retained, and the young man with him, and the two debutantes, commented upon at length.

Queer what a striking resemblance there was between this Mrs. Anthony Kaye and the girl he had been so taken in Pond du Lac! The same wide-set eyes that gave her a dewy, dawn look, the same misty gold of hair. He had always thought that Jane Carey could be a beauty if she had half a chance. But the exquisite woman at the table beyond couldn't possibly be Jane. A victim of amnesia, the headwaiter had said, and Bertram vaguely remembered now having read of Tony Kaye's sensational elopement with a girl about whom there had been much publicity.

He continued to stare, attracted and intrigued.

"Who's your friend?" Lorna shrugged around to give young Cotter a languid appraisal. She took in his harmonized brown, and his air of consequence. The lad seems to think he knows you or something."

Henri la Paule leaned over to Jane, his narrow blood face suddenly sharpened. "If he annoys you, I shall ask him to go out with me a moment."

"Please don't." Jane laughed a little nervously. "I probably resembled his sister."

"Well, let's go." Lorna rose, standing at the young man whose face she, at least, did not intend to forget. It was rather strange, after all, his staring like that.

La Paule stood up beside Jane. "I shall see you again soon? You will come to my studio," he murmured. His pale blue eyes promised things he was not ready to say.

Only when she was in Lorna's roadster, did Jane give way with a breathless sense of escape. Kayestone and Tony seemed very far away. She took refuge in silence that Lorna only broke as they swung back through the iron gates.

"You'd better not tell Tony that Henri joined us at Kaiku," she said sweetly. "He hates Henri, you know."

Jane didn't answer. As she looked back on the day, it seemed ugly and meaningless, beginning with the stupid lie she had told about the mountains and ending with the sight of Bertram Cotter. Only the princess Tchaiev stood out, as someone she could like—perhaps some day a friend. Things piled up and up until they toppled, overwhelming you unless you were strong enough to throw them off.

In this mood, she didn't care when Lorna invited herself to dinner and to spend the night. It was what Tony wanted. Lorna knew so well how to serve him his high food humor. Just as she knew how to ride the devils along his black brows. Her small vivid person lit the big hall hung with Kaye portraits—portraits of men who had lived down at young Anthony's insistence with life.

He was crisp and dark—in a white dinner coat, a festive red rose on his lapel. As she rushed as Jane hadn't seen him since that wild night when he had snatched her from one adventure to plunge her into another. And it was Lorna, he noted, red haired Lorna, with her sly green eyes and knowing young mouth.

They dined on the terrace, back from the city heat by the river. Like the maidens going to church, Lorna's hair tossed flaming against the candle and star shine.

Old Matthews filled their glasses, moving anxiously at each time in the shadows. Honey dew melon, broiled salmon, squab on canapes and hot rolls.

"We had a marvelous day," Lorna said. "You shouldn't trust your wife to me in shops, Tony. I'm not used to shops or in love. I'm bad influence."

"Is she?" Tony leaned forward to ask Jane, the cynical little head fastening around his gray eyes. "And, by the way, Lorna," he continued, "what on earth did you mean by ringing me up this morning and asking me if I'm more sincere? I'm not good at riddles."

For a long moment, Lorna's eyes met Jane's telling her triumphantly that she knew now that Tony had nothing to do with the monstrous ring that had fallen out of Jane's past. That memory, she allowed Jane a second of swift fear before answering curiously—Misconstrues were just an idea. I got—nothing really. I probably thought they'd look well on your Alice-in-Wonderland."

They looked down at her plate, food raspberries and peaches with maraschino. To challenge Lorna at anything would get her nowhere unless she was ready to explain more and why then had come into her possession when she had assured Tony there was no clue to her past.

Lorna went on as if unconscious of any strain. "Speaking of unscrupulous ladies, the Princess Tchaiev is a graveyard of European sins. D'you mind your wife quoting gossip from her?"

"Depends on the source." Tony paused disgustion, his gray eyes amused. His glance invited Jane to snap out of whatever held her silent. "What's the difference between European and American scandal?"

"Over there sins make you a reputation. Over here, they make you a joke," Lorna said lightly. "What do you think?" And she smiled at Jane.

Jane's lovely face winged out at them from its aureole of gold. "I think there are only two sins—betting things at any price, and getting them at any price, especially if in getting them, one hurts anyone."

BARBER SHOP AT PICTON ENTERED

Percy Baily Loses Close to $500 in Tobaccos And Equipment

Forcing an entrance through a window to the right rear of the premises, thieves made a getaway with an extensive haul of cash, tobaccos and barbering and other equipment, from the store of Percy Bailey, Main Street, Consecon, Picton, Ont., early Sunday morning. The loss was estimated at $500, with only dollars and a few dimes from the cash register, while four pairs of shears, two pairs of electric clippers, shaving brushes, an electric fan, electric vibrator, pipes in large quantity, and cigarettes and tobacco were removed from the shop. Entrance was effected through a door in the rear of the shop.

Using a ladder, the thieves cut a screen from a window approximately ten feet above ground level in an alley way running alongside the rear part of the building, before entering the window. The intruders dropped to the convenient radiator and from there to the floor.

Apparently unafraid of molestation the intruders took their time wandering nonchalantly about the store removing a package here and another there and then going to another and repeating their action. Provincial police are investigating the case in the store is represented in the robbery, their attention given to more valuable things the thieves disconnected clippers, vibrators and electric fans and allowed them to stay. The cash register was forced open and the money taken.

The robbery was discovered early Sunday morning by an aged relative of Mr. Bailey. Police were immediately notified and an investigation is under way.

Increased British Marine Urged by Talbot-Smith

In His Book "Merchant Ships 1937" He Says Numbers Count

FEWER BRITISH SHIPS

London, Aug. 23.—(CP)—Establishment of a Ministry of Marine is advocated by Paymaster Lieut.-Commander R. C. Talbot-Booth in a foreword of his reference book "Merchant Ships, 1937".

Declaring there were 1,000 fewer British Merchant vessels afloat today than in 1914 and the average size of ships was greater, he said "in times of national emergency it is numbers that count, not size, and even with the new standards being during the war we were brought up within a few weeks of starvation".

He said the Empire link across the pacific was almost broken. Japanese and United States ships were driving British ships from the seas and lying cargoes under British noses. State assistance and subsidies might be permissible in principle but when rivals were using them Great Britain must take up equipped weapons.

"Unless a Ministry of Marine is instituted without delay, British will be in a bad way," he concluded. "If it were necessary to control British shipping in time of war, it is equally necessary to control it in times of peace or economic war and there need be no fear of unnecessary interference with the legitimate trading aspirations of individual companies."

Japanese Gunboat Sunk And Destroyer Damaged In Landing Operations

Eyewitness Views Scene From Deck of Tanker

50,000 LAND

Japanese Predict Shanghai Will be Quickly Cleared

Shanghai, Aug. 23 (AP)—An eyewitness stated tonight he had seen one Japanese destroyer badly damaged and a Japanese gunboat sunk by Chinese bombers as the warships covered the landing of Japanese marines near Woosung.

Michael Hermann, an oil chemist, said he viewed the landing from the deck of a tanker.

The Japanese destroyer, he said, was hurried from the scene in tow of a sister destroyer.

The gunboat keeled over at an angle of 45 degrees and went down.

Chinese Figures Vary.

Japanese said they had put 50,000 officers and men ashore; Chinese officials said not more than 15,000 had landed; independent estimates ranged between these figures.

Chinese reinforcements were regular army divisions brought directly from the hinterland, and Japanese said their entry would open a new phase in the devastating Shanghai conflict, which has raged for eleven days on almost equal terms.

The precedent of the Shanghai area would be cleared quickly of Chinese troops.

The Chinese offered stiff resistance to the landing, their machine guns taking a heavy toll of the Japanese boats loaded. More than 20 Japanese planes immediately bombed the Chinese shore lines.

Correspondent Injured.

New York, Aug. 23 (AP)—Anthony James Billingham, 33, New York Times correspondent, was seriously wounded in Shanghai, formerly was a corporal in the United States Marine Corps in China.

As a member of the Marines' Intelligence Service, assigned to headquarters in Shanghai, he spent nine years gaining first-hand information on Oriental affairs before entering newspaper work 20 months ago as a correspondent for the Times.

Province to Embark Reforestation Scheme

Toronto, Aug. 23.—(CP)—Principle of the suggestion of the Orillia Board of Trade, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today.

The time is ripe for a reforestation scheme," he said. "But I believe it is more particularly necessary in Northern Ontario where we are beginning to utilize our forest resources on a big scale.

In any such scheme as many experience men as possible should be employed. "In fact we would have to import men from Southern Ontario for we have not yet did in the North because we can't get men with forestry skill.

"To give temporary employment to ex-servicemen throughout the province, the Original Club of Toronto and the men of the Trees Association announced during the week-end they would petition the government to adopt such a scheme, to be applied particularly in Northern Ontario. Veterans' organizations also favor the plan.

Under the plan favored by the Original Club, the government would furnish the land and the Provincial Government would supply the trees and subsidize the counties on an acreage basis to an amount sufficient for the labor cost.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Planets and the weather! Many think that the planets affect the weather—but upon what basis? Physically a heavenly body may affect the weather by gravitation, electricity, sunspottism or by radiations. These different physical agencies, if they affect the weather, must change the atmosphere in some way. All have been studied and their effect has been found to be negligible. But those who do not believe in the conclusions of the physicists may investigate the matter statistically; that is, note for sometime the positions and phases of the planets and moon and the attendant and succeeding weather. The doubter may then draw his own conclusion.

RETRACED STEPS BUT MONEY GONE

$40 Taken From Top of Bureau at Tourist Home West of City

An American tourist was minus $40 Sunday, partially due to his own error, Constable Arthur Ritchie and John Gish, Long Island, N.Y., obtained a night's lodging at a cabin tourist camp on the Trenal Road Saturday night. The cabin assigned to Mr. Ritchie and his party was of the double cabin-type, with a door connecting both halves. Mr. Ritchie withdrew some $40 in currency from his pocket and placed it atop of a bureau drawer.

When the pair arose to get an early start on their return trip to New York on Sunday, Mr. Ritchie forgot his money. Upon arriving in Trenton, however, Mr. Ritchie became conscious of the fact he had left his money behind him and retraced his steps only to find the money was missing. The door connecting the two halves of the double cabin was ajar and the person to occupy that portion were also missing.

The proprietor of the camp stated three other United States motorists had occupied the other half of the cabin in question, but they had left early Sunday morning and without registering. Provincial Constable Everett Smith investigated and after learning of the incident, assured Mr. Ritchie there was little hope of expecting restitution as no names or addresses of the second American party were available.

HANDICRAFT WORK PUT ON DISPLAY

Many Useful Articles Made by Scholars at Playgrounds

Displays of the handicraft works of the children to attend the Belleville playgrounds during the past summer months will be held at the Y.M.C.A., Campbell street, on Tuesday, Throughout the past two months special classes in handicraft have been conducted by the supervisors at the two local playgrounds, with some very remarkable articles being manufactured by boys and girls themselves.

One of the newer works of handicraft introduced by the playground supervisors this summer was metal work, the boys especially becoming adapted to this interesting art. Pieces of copper, brass and lead were supplied the children and samples of proposed works displayed. Letter openers, pipe stands, cigar trays and other useful articles to be used in the home have resulted after many hours of tedious work on the part of the student. Each piece of metal is pounded out by hand and the finished articles are a credit to the creator.

Needle work and crepe paper work will be featured by the girls from both playgrounds, while woodwork and woodcraft have seen some remarkable articles made by the teenage boys with only the use of a hammer or jack knife as tools of workmanship. The general public is not only invited to attend this annual display of handicrafts, but urged to personally attend the display and encourage the work of handicrafts among the children of the community.

Some of the articles made entirely by the playgrounds kiddies are worthy of art and the adult are asked to come out and see the result of the summer hitions of Belleville youths in handicrafts. A few of the creations made by the children attending Belleville playgrounds this summer are on display in Walker Hardware window, but the major part of the display will prove surprising, as the talent shown is remarkable, state member of parliament for Kent, is a brother.

TOURIST HOME AT WELLINGTON ENTERED, ROBBED

$16 in Cash And Three Valuable Rings Are Taken

INGENIOUS METHOD

Probably Pair Who Staged Holdup at Zwick's Island

Masquerading as tourists and using ingenious methods, two thieves stole fifteen dollars in cash and three valuable rings from the residence of Thomas Tinkiepaugh conducted by Mrs. M. Tinkiepaugh, of Wellington on Friday evening.

After getting the hash, the thieves with sheer effrontery chatted with guests of the house for a few minutes then jumped into their car, which was described by neighbors as being a grey Chrysler of recent make, and drove rapidly away.

Appearing at the 'Fairview House' shortly before supper time the men, described by Mrs. Tinkiepaugh as being dressed in light grey suits, entered a meal, and paid for it. Taking the money, Mrs. Tinkiepaugh who uses her pocket book as a cash register, placed her purse on a nearby china cabinet. The men left and ate in their car, which was parked in front of the house. A little later, one of them described as being a stocky build, short and of dark complexion, returned to the house and asked for a baking soda "as my friend has a touch of indigestion." The proprietress immediately went upstairs to the bathroom and procured the medicine.

One Goes Upstairs

A few minutes later the taller of the duo, fair complexioned and about five feet, eleven inches in height, appeared and asked if he could use the bathroom. Receiving permission he went upstairs, where he remained for a period of five minutes. Jumping in the car, the men chatted in a friendly manner with a Miss Smith of Toronto, a guest of the house and other guests for a few minutes before driving rapidly away.

Some fifteen minutes later, Mrs. Tinkiepaugh remembering that she had no change in her purse, asked for the loan of some money from Miss Smith to pay a passerby for the livery boy. Miss Smith went upstairs and discovered that a five dollar bill and five dollars in silver and rings, with platinum setting and a ruby ring had disappeared. Alarmed she rushed downstairs and informed her hostess, Mrs. Tinkiepaugh dashed for her purse and discovered its contents, a five dollar bill and six one dollar bills, were missing.

Police were immediately notified and the case is being investigated by County Constable James Lovelace.

COOL WINDS ARE WELCOMED

Change in Atmosphere Makes Change of Garb Necessary

Cool winds sweeping out of the north seek commercial citizens scurrying for light coats and sweaters over the week end, as the chill breeze swept through light dresses and other clothing. Early Saturday night shoppers were conspicuous by her spring coat while heavy sweaters laid away for the coolness of autumn were hurriedly extracted from their summer hiding places.

During the night lowering temperatures caused sleepers to seek the warmth of extra blanket while windows were closed to keep out the breezes which carried a real autumn tang. But in all, as one resident puts it, "It was a fine sleeping night, and much more preferable to the humid dampness of the few nights previous."

Residents in summer cottages, more exposed to the winds than were those living in the city, report a hurried call for extra bedding. The wind swept off the Bay probably of the fall, and stated we were forced to put up close windows and reach for more bedding. However we did not mind it although it did seem a little premature."

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

"That, my dear, is inevitable," Lorna was saying herself, "this one of the platitudes of the world. The heartless genius of grabbing." "You're a little wretch," said Tony, and his glance flickered from Lorna to Jane. Chill settled upon him rather bored him.

In a brief pause while coffee and liqueurs were being served, Jane pushed her chair and stood up. She didn't trust Lorna's generosity. She didn't trust Lorna.

"We didn't bet you, Tony, that we met the Comte le Paule at Princess Cobweb's, and had cocktails with him at the Waldorf." And she looked straight at Lorna who had warned her to say nothing of le Paule.

Tony's face hardened to suspicion, and he bent his frown upon Lorna. "You didn't bet me," he said coldly. "The fellow's as rotten as his portraits."

Lorna shrugged her shoulders. "I told you Tony would be annoyed," she said as if Jane were not present.

"But why not go on now and have dinner somewhere? I'm in a good looking boy kept staring and staring at her. I thought he was coming up to speak to me. Some green eyes were mocking, mischievous. She knew that Tony would be.

His green deepened. "What's all this? What boy?"

But Jane was ready for this. She had been bracing herself to it through dinner, rather than risk Lorna saying it. "Oh, I don't know, back. "I don't see why I shouldn't be stared at by strangers. I was escorted with spirit. She seemed quite fascinated by you, too, Lorna." It was true, but Jane hated her sickened her as she spoke, for while he was talking to Lorna he never feel safe.

Tony looked at her, thin lipped in displeasure. "Being stared at by strangers is hardly a cause for congratulation. I've told you that often before!" His voice sharpened. There was a hint of suspicion that someone would recognize this unknown girl while she was passing as his wife, and then there might be very ugly complications.

"If he had wanted me, wouldn't he have spoken to me?" Tensely, Jane watched. He had clear to relief. But she felt she could not conceal her nerves much longer. It would be unbearable to see Lorna and Tony together at this beautiful night. She drifted over to the stone balustrade, gazing down at the mauvelike, silver trumpets are along moon painted ivy. Behind her, Tony's voice lowered into low voices. They didn't notice when she slipped on to the lawn, and around back of the room.

Sitting by an open window, it seemed hours to Jane since she had left them alone. How grateful Tony must be now that he hadn't yielded to a passing desire, hadn't tempted her to love him those days that Lorna had deliberately urged away! But how could he have wanted her even in brief madness when he cared for Lorna? Perhaps he was only finding out now that she did care. Yes, that was a part of the reason for this experiment! Jane had lain herself to, never realizing that it would tear the very heart out of her in the end. The future of the forbidden for a girl like Lorna setting it.

Where were they on this dreamy moon-washed land of Kayestone that would seem day be Lorna's in was very late.

Jane couldn't rest. She flung off her dress and stood white and beautiful in the dim moonlight that had once been Mrs. Kaye's. She stretched up her arms, and looked at the long lines of her young body, the silken black of her lashes against her white skin, the bitter red of her lips. What did it matter whether Bertram Cotter had recognized her; whether Henri la Paule remembered her—whether either of them saw her as a girl? A hopeless interloper pretending to be what she would be. Nothing could ever accept Tony...

She had slipped on a blue chiffon nightgown, and a filmy chiffon coat when she heard voices on the stairs. They were coming up the last, supposing no doubt she had gone to bed.

"Goodnight." Lorna's voice soft with vibrating lit.

"Goodnight." Tony's voice constrained.

Jane stood motionless. Suddenly without warning, her door opened. Tony stepped in, and then closed another door closed down the hall. Jane stared at him, her lips framing a question.

In the rose shaded lampshine, he loomed tall and dark. His eyes moved away from Jane in her transparent chiffon. "I hoped you'd be asleep," he said, "and I could steal in and out. We're supposed to be married you know. Still on our honeymoon."

"So you had to do this—for Lorna's benefit?" Jane was trembling.

"Sorry." He shrugged wearily. "It's a rotten business. We'll talk it over tomorrow." His hand was at the doorknob, cautiously like a lover stealing away. And he was gone.

Jane couldn't stop trembling. "I can't stand it," she cried aloud. "Since I'm supposed to be his wife, I'm going to hide right now. That I'll know." She snatched up a blue crepe de chine robe.

It was black in the hall. The noise of her heart drummed thru' darkness. Jane felt for a switch. In the flare of light she saw that the door of Lorna's room stood slightly ajar, and the door at the end of the hall leading on to a balcony was open. Then she clicked off the light.

The balcony led around to Tony's suite of rooms. And there was a low uneven sound of voices mingled from the balcony door.

Jane drew closer to the patch of moonlight, like the lie and of the hall. More than ever now, she knew that Lorna came between her as she stepped to the balcony. Lorna must have watched and waited and found out that Tony had gone back to his room. Then she—

Lorna's voice was suddenly quite clear in the hushed night—"But you didn't stay with her! Oh, Tony, glad you ever, ever, ever, Tony! You don't love her—I know you don't."

Hardly realizing what she did, Jane walked out on the balcony. She didn't see her at this the end.

Lorna looked no bigger than a child in something white and clinging soft, with her head in the dull blue dark brooks of a dressing gown.

"You've been such a fool, Tony darling. I always loved you, and I thought you loved me. I thought you knew!" her voice tonight. "I mustn't see you again after tonight. But I do love you, Tony, I do."

Then Tony, looking up, saw Jane standing straight and still there in the moonlight. She came slowly forward.

CHAPTER XI.
UNWELCOME CALLER

It had been too late to draw back into the darkness. Once they saw her, so Jane came on, her heart thumping beating. Those quick glimpses of them had been enough on that stone balcony below the moonlit stretches of Kayestone—Lorna a blur of white, her head bowed, Tony's face in the dull blue cade of Tony's dressing gown.

In the dim light, Jane stumbled. Lorna swung around, frightened, defiant, and Tony looked up, his expression changing from bewilderment to anger. Then he saw Jane, understanding that she should come upon him this way.

"I had to talk to you tonight," she said, and under her dark hooded lashes, she went on bitterly. "It shouldn't be a surprise, I suppose, to find Lorna here."

"Go back to your room. I'll join you in a moment." His frosty eyes forbade a scene.

"No, she's right. I shouldn't be here.—Seems—she spoke quickly. "But now that you have found us, what are you going to do? I've always cared for Tony. There was a childish catch to her voice.

"You've never cared for anyone except yourself," Jane's tortured nerves suddenly snapped. "You're self and cruel, both of you. But you needn't worry about what I'll do—" She swayed a little, a breeze stirring the light blue of her negligee, ruffling the closed cropped gold of her curls. "What is to me?"

Tony's hand gripped her arm, his fingers driving in. "Be quiet," he ordered. "You're hysterical."

"Perhaps I am." She pulled away from him against the low stone wall of the balcony, her eyes big and blue in her white face. "But you can't stop me." Her voice rose. "You've done what you wanted to, haven't you? You love you, and you love her. What does anything else matter? I don't matter. I know. Why don't you tell her the truth. Tell her I'm not—"

Before she could utter another sound, Tony bent, lifted her in his arms and strode back along the balcony to the door of the hall. She struggled, her eyes closed under the stormy black of his brows. Why hadn't he let her put an end to this farce, tell Lorna she wasn't Tony's wife. Just a game that she had brought to a close.

In the hall, he set her on her feet, stepped on the lights. "You followed him like a child to her room, her lovely head drooping. She fell asleep after an explanation.

He pushed the door of her room to, standing very close to her. "Do you mean by starting all this scandal?"

Jane felt herself giving way again. "Leave me alone—all of you—and let me." She covered her face and flung herself on the bed before the sobs came. "I don't know why I said anything—I can't." The life she had attacked so recklessly, seemed to have turned on her with a savage force. She only wanted Tony's love. Tony's life to be crushed, and everything else forgotten.

She trembled to feel his hand on the bright soft clusters of her hair. "I'm poor kid, I didn't mean to be so beastly, but you were making a holy mess of everything, and that was enough as it is." His voice gently he smooth the crumpled folds of chiffon that were on Jane's shoulders. "Poor young body. There was a dull irritation, like a pain in his own heart.

"I hate Lorna," Jane sobbed. "You could have had her without our doing this sort of thing. If I'd have known that you and Lorna have acted the wry you did tonight."

"I know," Tony said slowly, acerbly, and for once all his arrogant reckless ways of life didn't protect him. For a second, looking down at Jane, he wondered why Lorna ran through his blood like fire. Then she maddened and tantalized him to the point of gambling for her. If he could only be sure that Lorna cared—

"You'll be better off, my dear," he said. The helplessness of this girl he had practically adopted, struck him again. Thank God, he'd been decent. Not listened to those fierce inner whispers of desire. The hours of mystery around her was magic as in a fairy tale.

He tried to sound lighter and reassuring. "It's all right, child. We'll go to Paris, pretend we've been divorced, and I'll come back alone." His lips twisted ruefully, tenderly. "Our plan anyway, wasn't it? And I'll see you don't suffer. Anything in the world you want."

"Not suffer!" Jane jerked away from his hand, and sat up, controlling her sobbing breath that was like a laugh. "Why should I suffer? I only wish I'd told her the truth at first. I wanted to make her see so find out what you have found out for yourself. I—I hate you. I'd do it."

Tony swung away from the bed, hand dug in his pockets. "You've said too much already," he said shortly. "We've got to go through with it as we planned, I'm afraid. Now, go to sleep, child."

Jane got off the bed, drawing her chiffon about her. What else might have thought of that." Her tone was weary. Well, it was over, as she knew it would have to be. She would have those foreign cocktails and Lorna and Tony had dreamed of in Pond du Lac, but Tony was to be her.

He marched up and down the room, tall and dark in his dressing gown. Then he stopped in front of Jane, his grey eyes fixed intently on her. "You'll never understand Lorna and myself," he said heavily. "We've fought each other ever since we were kids—tried to hurt each other. She's my own kind. We're of the blood. I wish to God you hadn't come here, Jane." He added. "You make me feel like a brute." His voice softened. "I'm sorry, Tony. I won't give you any more trouble," her voice trembled. "The sooner we're both healing. I'm not for sure he had taken her hand, his fingers closing over hers. "We can't sail until after Lorna's birthday, but I'll arrange it for any more talk. I can trust you, can't I?"

Jane smiled faintly. "Yes, you can trust me." Then when he had gone, she knew better than to trust again.

It was dawn when she slept. She woke to a tapping on her door, and lay steeped in a vague misery that slowly became fear. She struggled and got her back to consciousness. By then the tapping had become a steady beat.

She lay on, her eyes still closed, her arms out along the soft sheets. Soon this would be a dream—this house room where Tony's presence had lived for so many proud contented days, this chiffon negligee, like an English castle clothed in ivy and Pond du Lac. She had let the stately traditions through which she and Tony had so light heartedly planned. And now remained a future in foreign lands of the adventuress Jane Carey, the gold digger. Plenty of money (Tony would provide generously) Paris—London—the most girls in her place, consider themselves lucky.

Someone knocked again persistently this time.

"Come in." Jane's eyes were wide and blue on the door.

It was Lorna, in boyish white silk pyjamas and tailored dressing gown decided as her slight waist. Lorna looked as if she hadn't slept either, her red hair careless around her small pointed face, her eyes brooding green.

"I don't suppose you'll ever forgive me," she began in her direct way so mistakenly for her frankness. "Tony tells me you've decided on a Paris divorce. Jane straightened, watching her pitiful. "Yes."

Lorna looked at her curiously. "I wonder if you care a terrible lot really. Tony married you in a hurry—well, you weren't quite responsible, were you? And Tony's so attractive and lovable.

The legend again of amnesia that Jane had given him appearance. "Is it matter if I care?" Jane's beautiful eyes were scornful.

"Everything matters. You are married, aren't you?" Once more Lorna's direct look like a light on and off. "Of course I don't like to meddle with your secrets—" Uninvited, Lorna sank into a chair. Out of her dressing gown pocket, she languidly drew out a long ivory holder, a cigarette and lighted it. Malcolm. "Look her, let's not beat about the bush. Tony's not happy, and he's not happy. I'm not happy. I'm not happy. I'm

HUMAN ELEMENT AND THE CAR

More and more attention is being paid to the human reaction in driving. The Montreal Star in an editorial along this line says:

"An interesting contribution to the unending discussion of the problems arising from highway traffic—nearly always with special emphasis on the accident part of them—appears in an article in the Canadian Medical Association Journal by its editor, Dr. A. G. Nicholls, who urges that more attention be paid to the human element in any search for relief from the daily casualty lists.

"Dr. Nicholls is certainly right. Billions of dollars and the best brains of the most expert designers, mechanics, and engineers of a dozen kinds have been spent in the last quarter century on designing motor vehicles and laying out roads for them to run upon. The result has been what was to be expected: such improvements in both road and vehicle as would have seemed almost magical a generation ago. Unfortunately, the improvement in the mental equipment and the physical endurance of the vast majority of drivers of these machines has signally failed to keep pace with the mechanical progress of the machines they operate.

"True, the average driver has a smattering of knowledge about the mechanics of his car—'smattering' being an exaggeration in a multitude of cases—as well as a hazy idea of what he should and should not do while running it, or rather perhaps what the traffic police will not let him get away with. He is seldom possessed, however, of even the physical stamina or reserves required for the demands he makes upon them.

"It is upon this point that Dr. Nicholls lays needed emphasis. Setting aside all question of drunken drivers—whose obvious unfitness to be in charge of any moving machine needs no discussion—and who already come under the operation of innumerable punitive laws—there are innumerable cases of drivers holding licences whose mental and physical make-up is such as to render them—often unknown even to themselves—potential "killers"; any one of a dozen recognized forms of defective vision, including colour-blindness, dulled hearing, abnormal emotional reactions, mental disturbances due to physical derangements, etc. One of the commonest of dangers which a surprisingly small number of motorists realize, but which causes many a head-on collision, is the hypnotic effect of a smoothly running engine or a straight modern road. Attention inevitably tends to slacken with the unbroken outward flow of the ribbon-like road toward the driver's eye. It is perilously easy, in these circumstances, to veer gradually off the road or even to pitch head-on into some perfectly visible obstacle."

HUNTING FOR THE WILL

Search for the missing will has always been one of the most thrilling of interests for mankind. Countless stories have been written on this theme and others will continue to be written to the end of time or as long as man takes an interest in human experience or fiction as it defects life.

In Philadelphia there is said to be somewhere as will be a twenty million dollar fortune of Henrietta E. Garrett. In the quest for it the woman's grave is to be opened. A guard has been maintained at the grave since the possibility that the will had been hidden in the coffin was first considered. There was a will filed by administrators for only $62,500. Mrs. Henrietta Garrett Ferguson, a large beneficiary under the will signed in 1921 said she witnessed a later will in 1924 and that "someone dissatisfied with the will could have hidden it in the coffin in 1930."

A lost fortune, a cache of gold, a missing will, a lost relative are all themes in that romance which the people love. In life probably the search is perhaps not so thrilling as in fiction.

It so falls out that what we have, we prize not to the worth while we enjoy it: but being lacked and lost, why then we rack the value; we find the virtue that possession would now show us while it was ours.—Shakespeare.

It is pleasant to observe how free the present age is in laying taxes on the next. "Future ages shall talk of this; they shall be famous to all posterity;" whereas their time and thoughts will be taken up about present things as ours are now.—Swift.

GOOD SAMARITANS ARE THE SALT OF THE EARTH, those chaps who are always looking for a chance to perform a good deed. Their reward is a clear conscience and the glow of well doing, besides the promise of recognition in the world to come. Preparing a column every day is a joy, but it takes time, and when a chap comes along and offers to fill the column for a day, why you just feel the Good Samaritans are not all living in the past tense. Hence in the column today we introduce you to a forceful writer, a man with strong ideas, a man who takes nothing for granted and advocates progressive measures in all walks of life. Like all reformers and would-be public benefactors some folk regard him and his ideas as rather ahead of the times, but gosh all hemlock if nobody starts anything why nothing will ever get started. ONTARIO'S POISONOUS WATERWAYS
By JAMESON BOOK

As a nation, we Canadians have the very best intentions in the world, but our various and multitudinous governments are doing little or nothing of a constructive nature. It is admitted on all sides that we have many serious problems that need solving in the worst way, and it is a national disgrace that things have been allowed to drift and drift until we are now what we thought the other fellow, to be, lethargic and decadent.

It is impossible for us to have prosperity or any building or other boom while our problems of Railways, Municipal Taxes, Western Disasters, Municipal and Provincial Defaults and many other serious defects besides Water Pollution go unremedied, and nothing much can be expected until our citizens wake up and take a more serious view of their citizenship and responsibilities. Other countries are forging ahead while we in our smugness (and this includes the United States) are enduring a fairly low standard of living, which is gradually getting lower. We used to high-hat immigrants coming to us, but that has all changed during the past five years while we were sound asleep. Our Canadian brethren are now the emigrants and are improving their lot thereby in other countries. We are a sick nation but it is not expected that anybody will do anything about it. We will just continue to play politics. Maybe the historian of 1975 will write of the years 1975 to 1999 as "The Rise and Fall of the United States" and how we were dragged down admiringly with them. And Dear Reader, or Sleepy Reader as the case may be, what are you going to do about it?

However we still have our major industry the Tourist Traffic. The overheated Americans love to come north in summer to enjoy our cool nights and unsweetened days. Here they can rub and play by innumerable bodies of more or less clear water. If we give them good service they will continue to come in increasing numbers, but if we annoy them with all manner of petty rules and regulations and have our dirty fishing water for them to play in, they will leave us and the former peace of Indian days will engulf us—it is coming gradually anyway. Look at our great waterways with no planning and our thousands of miles of graded railways with tracks and ties taken up and sold.

The Bay of Quinte for instance is, or should be, a beautiful sheet of clear water abounding with game fish, and its shores should be a most attractive place for tourists and cottagers to camp. Instead of this however, it is becoming more and more polluted until it will soon be positively unsafe to bathe in. Campers and Tourist Camps throw their garbage in the Bay and the various canning and other factories throw in their litter and rubbish of every description. Not a day goes past but the shores of this campers become littered with canning factory "swells and leaks", old tin cans and bottles from campers, banana and orange skins from tourist camps, and at times tons of weeds dredged up by the storms, weeds that would never be there, except that their growth is well fertilised and promoted by all the dir tand garbage thrown in on all sides.

The City of Belleville's well nigh 18,000 people supply the Bay with a constant, or fairly constant stream of untreated sewage. No doubt the Hospital, Ontario School for the Deaf and the Aircamp add their quotas. With a little further pollution from Trenton Frankford, Tweed, Madoc and other towns and villages, the Bay water is in a fair way to become soup. We of course get our drinking water from the Bay, and "they" say it is very good. So is the ice harvested in winter. The fish do not thrive very well one can say. Bay water, many dead ones being cast up on shore daily, to add further to the tourist's discomfort. Maybe the fish will become acclimatized in time or spread wings, it must be difficult and nauseating to swim through.

This is only one of the problems that need urgent attention, and would get it, if the citizens of this fair Province got any service at all from those bodies and individuals they waste so much energy electing.

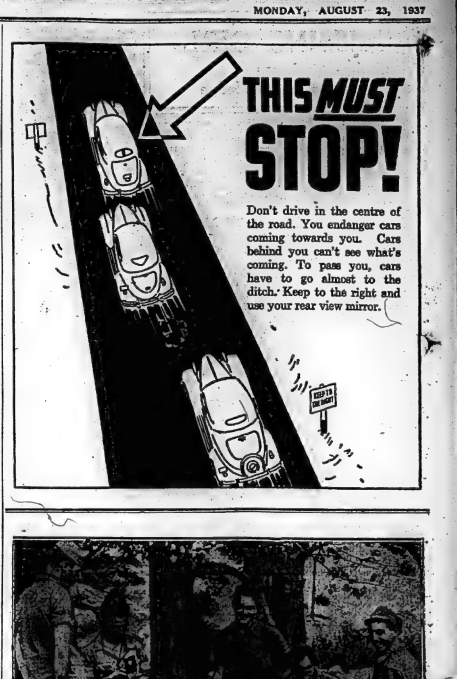
Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I was sitting and thinking, saying, Gosh shang the luck.

Comes, come, buck up, courage, what's a trouble? Everybody has 'em, I said, O me and Puds Slivkins has bought a 5c cone this afternoon and I wasn't hardly half ways through mine when the rest the ice cream slopped and fell out of the cone rite on the paystand, and I couldn't very well pick it up and put it back again because it didn't look so clean any more on account of being vanella flavoring all the dirt, and besides there was no more flavoring, even in case it had of been clean, so I just had to set along and sing insult to injury by watching Puds eating his.

Well, I must admit that was a trial almost amounting to a tribulation, pop said. But, fortunately for us, man is the only animal blessed with any considerable degree of reasoning power, and when I say man I include boy, and out of the power of reason comes that greatest of gifts, philosophy. Now you dont have to be much of a philosopher to realize that a spoonful of ice cream is too dinky a matter to worry about in a world full of real worries such as old maid stenezes and inherited sinus troubles. So cheer up, Benny, dont you? he said, and I said, Yes sir, G, sure.



Good, pop said, and I said, But I practically perfect if I had 5 more cents—by another ice cone, and you will live practically forever. Now do you feel better? he said and I said, Sure, O.

Good, pop said, and I said, But I feel practically perfect if I had 5 more cents—by another ice cone, and you will live practically forever. Now do you feel better? he said and I said, Sure, O.

Good, pop said, and I said, But I feel practically perfect if I had 5 more cents—by another ice cone, and you will live practically forever. Now do you feel better? he said and I said, Sure, O.

Go on in and get washed up for your sake, pop said.

Which I did feeling against it.

SAFETY CAMPAIGN BRINGING RESULTS

Weekend Death Toll Only Six, Smallest in Many Years

(By the Canadian Press)

October weather and a continuance of the Highway Department's Safety Campaign have seen today as factors in Ontario's week-end death toll of six, smallest in many weeks. Traffic police reported a definite falling off in highway traffic, that through the summer had reached new peaks of density.

John M. Lee, 36, Toronto, son of George W. Lee, North Bay former president of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, was killed and three others, including his mother, were injured when their automobile crashed into a parked truck on a highway near Toronto. The driver faces a criminal negligence charge.

In the Frood Mine at Sudbury, Earl Mitchell, 23, was killed when a dynamite charge he was placing, by a chute exploded. He was known as an expert chute blaster and was single man.

Two American tourists were killed in automobile accidents. Near Hamilton, Dr. W. L. Schofield, 42, Athens, Mich., died and his wife was hurt, when their car crashed into a ditch. Near St. Thomas, Hazel Ransom, Detroit nurse, was hurt fatally and three others were injured in a two-car collision.

Four weeks after his brother was killed under almost identical circumstances, James Davis, Nixon, Ont., died after being hit by an automobile on No. 3 Highway near Simcoe. His brother, Frank, was killed by a car in Scarborough Township.

Identification of Raymond Scarrow, Brantford youth, was made several hours after he was killed by a Canadian Pacific Railway yard engine at Brantford. It is believed he attempted to board a train when he fell beneath the wheels.

U. S. AUTHOR TITES REPRIMAND FACTIONS AFTER SHELLING

Because it had not been definitely proved which side had fired the shell that killed a sailor aboard the United States flagship Augusta, above, both Rear Admiral Harry Yarnell, right inset, and Oswald-General Clarence Gauss, left, have sharply reprimanded both the Japanese and Chinese forces. The Augusta was struck on the afterdeck by a shell while anchored off Shanghai. The United States and British commanders have refused to limit the movements of their ships as requested by the Japanese ship, and have also refused to force Japanese ships from the battle area as suggested by the Chinese. Indemnity will be demanded if the circumstances justify, according to reports from Washington concerning the shelling of the American ship.

HON. D. MARSHALL TO RUN IN PEEL

Premier Asks Mandate to Continue Collection of Debt Arrears

Brampton, Ont., Aug. 23.—(CP)—Succession duties arrears in 44 estates now being investigated by the Ontario Treasury Department amount to between $20,000,000 and $70,000,000, Premier Mitchell Hepburn told Peel County Liberals here Saturday when they gathered to nominate Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, for the forthcoming provincial general election.

As the campaign warmed up with the date still unannounced, the Ontario Premier asked a renewal of the people's mandate for his Liberal Government and said the succession duties investigation was "one of the chief reasons we are calling this election".

The money he said was due the Province would be collected if the Liberals were returned. But "if these people can take these case to the courts and procrastinate, there is a possibility a lot of money will be taken out of our jurisdiction" he said.

Of Mr. Rowe (Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader) he elected, his hands will be tied." Mr. Hepburn said. "He has the same old gang around him and he won't be able to go ahead and collect these huge sums. We are going to uncover the greatest scandal that has been going on."

Sympathetic to Labor

Defeat of his Government would be a victory for John L. Lewis, United States Labor leader, chairman of the Committee for Industrial organization, and "may herald the beginning of a reign of terror such as they have had in Chicago, and are still having in other parts of the United States", Mr. Hepburn said.

"I am sympathetic to labor," he proclaimed. "I believe in the right to strike and the right to collective bargaining. When I am wrong, Peter Heenan (Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests) will be the first to tell me. As long as he supports my stand on Labor I will continue to pursue it. I still believe I am on the right track."

Ontario was not facing a power shortage, the Premier said. The Hydro Commission had options on large blocks of power exercisable at any time.

Doctors were called and she was removed to hospital while police checked her story. They discovered she was not known at the address she had mentioned and physicians expressed belief the girl was suffering poisoning.

TRIO SLEEPING

ored Chrysler with the first two numbers of the license plates positively identified as 7-62. Both the men were masks and the gunman had on a pair of gloves, Dreaming, no fingerprints could be taken, while the other thug carried a large hammer and a baseball bat, the implements used to wreck the truck, so that it could not be used in pursuit. Both men were between 25 and 26 years of age, the gunmen wearing a brown fedora hat with a blue shirt while the second man wore a grey spotted cap and blue shirt. Each would weigh about 140 pounds according to Mr. Gladstone but the gunman was the smaller of the two.

Mr. Gladstone and his son with a chum of the younger Gladstons came up to this city Saturday night and today intended visiting friends in the district. They decided to camp out for the night as the truck is equipped with a wide platform with a tarpaulin covering. They journeyed to Zwick's Island and parked just under the brow of the hill on the south side of the island and prepared for the night. The back of the truck was left open to allow air to circulate in the vehicle. All were asleep about six o'clock Sunday morning, when the elder Gladstone happened to wake up to see a masked man standing at the rear of the truck. "A nickle plated revolver was in his hand" said Mr. Gladstone to the Ontario Intelligencer, "and I knew it was a holdup but I was not going to give up my money without a struggle."

Man Spoke Gruffly

"The man spoke gruffly but in a quick voice" continuing Mr. Gladstone "demanding my money. I told him I was only poor and did not have any." At this point the boys woke up and sensing the situation the younger Gladstone threw his purse down to the end of the truck containing about 30 cents, while Mr. Gladstone at the same time made a movement to get out of the truck by the side-way. "Don't move I mean business," said the gunman and as Mr. Gladstone continued to leave the truck a shot was fired, which went through his clothing and slightly grazed the left forearm, which was later dressed and cleaned by Dr. C. S. Cronk. Mr. Gladstone at this point, seeing further refusal might bring death to all of them threw his purse to the gunman containing $5.

Immediately the other man appeared armed with a club and a large hammer and demanded the keys of the car, which were promptly given. While the gunman covered the three, the other man lifted the hood of the truck and knocked the top off all the spark plugs and also broke the right window from the driver's seat by pounding it with the heavy hammer. They left the scene for their car, which was parked about twenty yards from the truck and also facing east on the Zwick Island road, one of them getting behind the wheel, while the other stood on the running board to cover their getaway. The boys in their impetuosity to capture the thugs raced down them and they were forced to turn back. Not heeding the warning two shots were fired both missing their human marks but hitting the truck on the right fender. The youths then decided to run for the police and went over the top of the hill believing that to be the shortest way but were balked by the marsh at this point.

Informed Police

They retraced their steps and Frank Gladstone ran down the road to the Provincial Highway and along the Bay Bridge road to the police station to give the alarm. In going over the hill the car disappeared and the youth was unable to state, which way the car went, north or south after leaving the island road. The local police, Sergeant Arthur Harman, being on duty notified Toronto of the number given him by Gladstone but investigation proved the number was not correct as the car bearing the number given was found in the garage of its owner. The youth, however, was positive of the first two numbers on the car 30 and every car of that number will likely be stopped for examination by Provincial Police and Traffic Officers, who were soon notified.

Mr. Gladstone was not seriously injured and was able to proceed with his son and companion to Kingston after medical attention had been given. "It was a ticklish situation," said Mr. Gladstone "and I am glad we escaped with as little damage. They sure meant business and would have gone to any length to secure our money." The boys although pale and full of adventure were glad that it was over and admitted they were pretty scared. "I thought I was to go through another fifteen minutes like that again," said Master Wallace. The truck was repaired in a local garage shortly after the holdup

Weddings

MOLGREEN—HEATH

Brown—The home of Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Heath, Bethel, was the scene of a charming wedding ceremony on Saturday evening, August 21st at 8 p.m. when their granddaughter, Miss Lela Evelyn Heath, only daughter of Mr. Roy Heath and the late Elizabeth Hawkins Heath, became the bride of Donald Ketcheson McLaren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McLaren, Frankford.

The drawing room was a bower of beauty with a huge bank of various hued gladioli interspersed with asters and ferns and made a very pretty setting for the occasion. Rev. James R. Secord, pastor of Rawdon circuit, officiated at the service. The ceremony was performed in the presence of about thirty intimate friends and relatives.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, Mr. Roy Heath, entered the drawing room to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by her aunt, Mrs. Harold Millard, who was gowned in flowered chiffon over powder blue satin. The bride looked charming in a gown of ivory bridal satin, floor length, fashioned on princess lines with yoke and trimmed with insets of Chantilly lace. She wore the silk tulle veil worn twenty-four years ago by her mother. It was caught to her hair in cap effect and banded with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and maiden hair fern.

The groom's sister, Mrs. Algy Englesby, who was married at noon on Saturday, made a lovely picture of honor wearing her wedding gown of white silk net over taffeta and carrying her wedding bouquet of Cophelia roses, with pink rose sprays and white picture hat with lace trimming and long white kid gloves.

The groom was assisted by his brother-in-law, Mr. Alex. Kennedy. During the signing of the register, Master Bobby Elliott, in a suit of white, sang "O Promise Me".

Immediately after the ceremony, the happy couple received the congratulations of their friends and the bride's grandmother and the groom's mother received with the bridal party. Mrs. Wm. McLaren, Frankford, wore a white ensemble, with white accessories, Mrs. Wesley Hawkins, Stirling, black georgette with cut velvet trimming and Mrs. O. U. Heath, black printed triple sheer.

A delicious wedding luncheon was served in the dining room by six friends of the bride, Misses Irene Tucker, Frances McKeown, Marion Walker, Isobel Fraser, Laura Tucker and Hazel Keogh and the girls were white aprons and bands.

The bride's table was centered with the wedding cake and the other tables were decorated with baskets of streamers and bells. Vases of gladioli adorned each table and fruit were scattered about the room making it a bower of beauty.

Mrs. Heath proposed the toast to the bride, and the groom responded and then short addresses were given by Mr. Wm. McLaren, Frankford; Mr. C. U. Heath, Mr. Roy Heath, Mr. Harold Millard, Mr. Harry Heath, Mr. Mark Shortt.

Mr. and Mrs. McLaren left the happy couple left by motor for a honeymoon trip to Belleville, Leamington and Detroit.

The bride travelled in a gown of navy flat crepe with hat of navy duvetyn felt, navy accessories and polka dot veil. They will reside at Bethel.

The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond engagement ring. To the bridesmaids, a floral corsage and to the groomsman, gold cuff links; to the pianist, a silver compact and soloist, a gold bracelet.

The happy couple received a large array of gifts which bore their popularity among them being two substantial cheques.

Bethel—At noon, on Saturday, Lola, had acted as bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Hilda Mae McLaren, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William McLaren to Frank Scott, Anglican church. She wore a lovely frock of Marina blue taffeta, floor length, fashioned on princess lines with white silk crepe sandals, white picture hat and Marina blue kid gloves and carried Johanna Hill roses.

VANASSCHE—ELLIS

At St. Michael's Church at seven-thirty this morning, the marriage took place of Frances Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Ellis of this city, and Valentine Charles Vanassche, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vanassche of Detroit. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father J. Collins.

The bride was given in marriage by her paternal uncle, H. H. Doyle, and wore a gown of white triple sheer with lace. Her tulle veil was arranged with a lace headdress and she carried a bouquet of roses and carnations.

Miss Thelma Wassmund, who was bridesmaid, was attired in navy blue with matching accessories and Omar Burgon was groomsman.

After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mrs. J. Archer, 290 1-2 Front Street.

The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Montreal and points east and on their return will reside in Detroit, Mich.

GOOD MANNERS

by MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

MOURNING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I lost my husband about four months ago. How long should I continue to wear mourning? When should I wear second mourning?

2. Should I wear my wedding ring and my diamond engagement ring?

S.

1. Today there aren't any definite rules about the wearing of mourning, the type and the length of time. It is wisely left to the individual, and there is far more leeway concerning it than there used to be, when most definite rules were prescribed.

For instance, formerly a widow wore a long crepe veil for many months after her husband's death. Nowadays she usually wears this sort of veil only to the funeral, and then either discards a veil altogether, or wears a very short face veil or a veil only on the brim of her hat.

I should suggest that you wear black for about six or eight months, and then for the rest of the year lighten this first mourning with touches of white, a narrow lingerie collar, for instance. And remember that all-white is for brides. Gray, for all-black, and it is a relief to wearer and observer, for both summer wear and winter.

2. A widow wears her wedding ring when she is in the deepest mourning. She ceases wearing the wedding ring only if she decides to marry again. She may do as she wishes about wear ing her engagement ring. She may wear it if she wishes, or she may feel, as many widows do, that the wearing of a diamond, even a diamond engagement ring, is inappropriate in mourning.

SMALL WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I plan to be married soon, in the evening, in church. Since my parents object to the marriage, and refuse to attend the ceremony, I would like to know in what part of the church, the wedding should take place. Also, is it necessary to have someone give the bride in marriage, and, in this case, who should be asked to do this?

2. We plan to have only eight or ten of our closest friends present at the wedding. Will this be all right?

Thank you.

1. The person who is best fitted to answer these questions is the minister who is going to perform the ceremony. So I suggest that you and the groom-to-be go to see him, and get his recommendations about what to do under the circumstances you set forth. I am so sorry, and I am sure that he will be, too, that there must be this cloud on your marriage, and I hope that even yet your parents will relent and will come to this important occasion of your life to give it its unclouded sanction.

The minister may suggest that you have the ceremony performed in the chapel of the church.

In some denominations it is necessary to have someone give the bride in marriage, and in many denominations this is merely a matter of the bride's choice. Ask the minister about this. Since your father will not present you in marriage, you may, if that is required in your denomination, invite a man friend of the family or an older man whom you have known well for some years.

2. Yes.

I'm not saying you did it. I won't accuse my own son of theft." Jason Will spoke with effort. "But the money's gone. It was in your keeping. I guess you better go, too." He crossed the room and looked out of the window.

"Father!" Rodney Will, angry at the accusation, sick at heart, made a final appeal. The old man turned to silence him.

"You started going wrong when you took to leaving town over the week ends. How do I know you were calling on a girl? Maybe you were gambling maybe . . ."

"That's enough. Some one has been filling your mind with suspicion. You will find some day the truth of all this and you will be very sorry." And Rodney left.

The next evening he told the story to Mary, a story which meant an end to wedding bells and a end to teat her faith. Mary did not falter.

"We'll have to show him he's wrong," she said. "Tell me all about it from beginning to end."

It was a week later when a young woman who gave the name of Millicent Clayne arrived in Millcrest, looking for work. She visited the factory of Jason Will, called and asked for a job. She was cashier and was given encouragement.

"We're needing a little help," Dale said. "You see the old man's son has gone. I'll say a word for you." And he left to speak to Jason.

Millicent got the job. Resentful of the attentions of the cashier she did her best to gain his confidence. In time they were considered friends.

"That son of Mr. Will's, why did he leave?" she asked one day. "It would seem to me this business would be a fine thing for a young man."

"He is a good thing," said Art. When old Jason dies the man who has charge here can make a fortune. Young Will could have had it but he will they say he dipped his fingers into the cash drawer for something."

Millicent nodded. "And that made it so much nicer for you!" she cried. "I'm sorry for the young man from being rich now. I stand in with the boss, as you say."

"Well," Millicent sighed. "I never knew young Will, but he must have been stupid to give up a chance like that. Maybe it's all for the best. Any business man will need a smart man; one who knows how to work and will do more, perhaps, than he could. My, I wish I were a man." And the smile she gave him meant she wished she were a man like Art Dale. The shrewd closed.

"Listen girl, you did right to come here for a job. There is nothing like working. I notice a slight promise and for a man who [illegible] how to make good. Millcrest is a fine place for much but they don't figure on what can be done when old Jason died. I helped get you the job, didn't I? Well, you stick by me and we'll be rich. Will you do it?"

That's answer was an adoring gaze. "But," she said at last, "it may be a long wait."

"I've thought of that too. Old Jason is a tough one. But the son's going to say is breaking him up." He took her hand and, encouraged, went on.

"If it comes to the worst and the will is too long we can make a clean up right under old Jason's nose and skip. What do you say?"

"You are wonderful, Mr. Dale, but do you think we could?"

"I know it. The old man leaves everything to me and trusts me absolutely. He would take my word against that of his own son as to Millicent's eyes widened yet they seemed still full of admiration.

"You mean?" she said.

"I mean I had to get the kid out. That makes it clear for us," and he leaned forward.

"But what about Millicent." Old Jason stood in the door of a closet and Millicent, white-faced and exhausted with the ordeal leaned back. Dale looked from one to the other, wet his lips, and tried to speak.

"It was a pretty trap," he said at last, dand sprung by an expert. Well, what are you going to do?"

"I'm going to send a wire to my son," old Jason answered, "that he needn't fly 'round him."

"There is no need," Millicent said. "I've sent it already. You see, I am Mary Clay, the girl he is going to marry."

ARTILLERY SHELL

A second projectile pierced the United States side of the frame one block from the Whangpoo river-front near the settlement's southern border. The shell failed to explode. It crashed through a brick building shattered on the concrete bottom floor.

A third shell struck the teeming Ward Road prison in the northern sector of the international settlement, throwing the 6,500 prisoners into renewed terror. Evacuation of the prison started Sunday but was blocked by Japanese protests many of the convicts were natives of the Chinese army.

Billingham was seriously injured. He and Abend were on a shopping trip to Wing On's wing, the shell exploded, they suffering a slight foot wound, fought a way through a four-yard thick brick building to a semi-conscious companion. Billingham collapsed in the street and was taken to the county hospital there.

Correspondent Injured

He was suffering from severe shell shock, four shrapnel wounds in the legs, and his left arm and hand were mutilated. They were riding in an automobile during the shell shock the department.

Morris J. Harris, Chief of the Shanghai bureau of the Associated Press, marked up his third escape from flying projectiles. He had just left Wing On's with supplies for the Associated Press office when the shell exploded. He had come unscathed through the fighting at the 14 buildings during the fire that killed thousands of civilians.

Among other foreign casualties were:

Klaus Ekhart, 16-year-old German, dead; Blanche Tenney, Shanghai-born American, slightly injured; Valeria Glaser, Polish, seriously injured; A. U. Brunner, a Swiss, seriously injured.

Japanese warships and Chinese and batteries were heavily engaged yesterday, where the Whangpoo meets the Yangtze. Chinese dispatches of Japanese claims that 30,000 Japanese troops and been landed during the night. Chinese artillery and warplanes were said to have repulsed a Japanese attempt to land regular army divisions, with heavy losses to the invader.

Artillery Duel All Day

Japanese claimed more than 50,000 reinforcements had been landed in the rear of the Chinese army at Woosung, 12 miles to the north, while their warships facing the Yangtze River shelled Chinese fortifications.

The sound of the artillery duel reverberated monotonously throughout the day. It was the Orient's 11th day of war and the northern and eastern sections of the city as well as the rich industrial suburb of Pootung across the Whangpoo River were in flames.

So fierce were the raging fires that all land operations in the fringes of the city were virtually suspended. Troops were driven from their positions by the flames.

The exploding shell struck Nanking Road about a mile from the famous Shanghai Bund.

The source of the projectile was a complete mystery. It could have come from either Chinese or Japanese guns, as both are in action along the Whangpoo's banks that, by an unusual twist of strategic flanders, the batteries of either could have landed a shell in the international settlement.

Carnage Horrible

Among the eyewitnesses of the blast was Al G. Huebner, of Marinette, who was within half a block, when the shell hit. The explosion shattered the windshield and windows of the automobile in which he was riding.

The carnage was horrible. Headless bodies, arms and legs were scattered in macabre patterns all through the area. Like the new Wing Emporium, which was struck by bomb with similar horrors Aug. 14. Sincere's and the Sun and Sincere department restaurants, roof gardens, and dance halls, widely patronized by Chinese.

Some military experts advanced the theory the projectile might have been a 120-pound eight-inch shell which Japanese warships off Woosung were known to be firing today to protect the landing of reinforcements.

The foreign experts explained the slightest variation in the elevation of the guns would have thrown a shell into the heart of Shanghai instead of the intended objective.

The 50,000 fresh troops from the Japanese homeland were reported by the Japanese consular office to have been landed in the face of intense fire from Chinese land batteries in areas within 30 miles of Shanghai.

15 DROWN AS BOAT CAPSIZES

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 23—(AP)—At least 15 persons were believed to have been drowned today when the cutter in which they were returning from the traditional lotus-blossom festival at Agami capsized off the bathing beach 18 miles west of here. Some 30 persons were rushed to hospitals.

STARVED FORTY DAYS-TO SAVE MONEY FOR FAMILY

The man who gave the name of "George Jones" after he was found in a state of collapse in the streets of an Oklahoma city business establishment, is shown receiving administration of glucose from Dr. W. P. Bohlman. The emaciated man had $1.80 in his pockets when found and inside his shirt was a note addressed to his wife, whose name was not disclosed, in which he implored pardon for his feelings and sufferings during forty days of starvation.

EPIDEMIC TOTAL

Dr. C. A. Harris, London's Medical Health Officer, said the majority of the patients' ages range from 17 to 24 years. All swimming pools were ordered closed in the Western Ontario city to prevent the spread of the disease.

Forty-one cases had been reported in Ontario Health authorities since June 1, Dr. T. A. Lomer, City Medical Officer of Health, reported. One case was reported at Peterborough, while one at Copper Cliff was believed to be the only one in Northern Ontario.

Hope In Cooler Weather.

Medical authorities at Toronto said last week when postponement of school opening beyond Sept. 1 was suggested that cooler weather might save the serious situation. Temperatures dropped from 10 to 15 degrees Sunday.

Officials at Gali, were hopeful there would be no additional cases next week. Seven deaths had been reported since the outbreak and in the municipality district there were known cases. Niagara Peninsula had 27 cases with one death.

Provincial health authorities cooperated with municipal officials and Hon. Jay J. A. Faulkner, Minister of Health, said that he would recommend postponement of school opening in such municipalities in which it was considered warranted.

Health officials in Western Ontario planned to confer on the situation, while Dr. J. L. McKay of the Government Health Service declared that theatres, churches and baseball should be closed if the schools were closed.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE BELLE

"Riding on Air" Joe E. Brown and Guy Kibbee in Hilarious Comedy

Although the middle initial of Joe E. Brown doesn't stand for entertainment, his newest picture, "Riding on Air," on the Belle screen Tuesday and Wednesday, matches daily, certainly does. For the film is crammed with humorous situations, thrills that will have the spectators holding onto their seats, and the best Joe Brown performance to date—latter is something generally unexcelled by any comedian today on our screen.

Joe E. Brown is a clown incarnate, touched with that rare genius for grotesquerie that gives all great pantomimists their immortality. A wry nature bequeathed him with a flexible face to match his inborn talent, and in "Riding on Air" he has a picture which offers him a subject worth his mettle.

As Elmer Lane, the small-town correspondent for a big town newspaper....a character popularized through Richard Macaulay's stories in the Saturday Evening Post..... the born comedian and star contributes through as ludicrous a series of adventures as ever befallen a comic hero. He is by turns hero, scoring the year's biggest scoop..... for his rival paper.

When, during the climax, he takes to the air to solve the mystery of a large factory where the workers are threatening to strike, the audiences find themselves alternating between laughter and gripping heart-beats. The finale of the picture offered a better example of thrill-comedy.

Guy Kibbee, who helped to provide no small measure of fun in "Bartowsen Buckaroo," is cast again supplies a full quota of laughs with his portrayal of the confidence man who manages to make Elmer the goat of his newest scheme. Florence Rice—daughter of Grantland Rice—lends talent and charm to her portrayal of the small town belle who sees the heart of Elmer beneath Elmer's comedy visage. Vincent Hewitt, as "Jack Arnold" of the Myrt and Marge radio program, Anthony Nace, Harlan Briggs, Andrew Tombes and Jonathan Hale contribute their share to the general excellence of the well-chosen cast.

"Riding on Air" should more than satisfy Joe E. Brown fans and attract new ones to his fold.

Soap Box Derby

A special extra attraction on the same program are the films of the National Soap Box Derby at Akron, Ohio, with Belleville's own George Wilson, Canadian champion, an entry in the derby. The Belle Latest World News, and Lalapalooza, the first of the popular multiple-reel headline series, and a funny all-star comedy, "Oh! the Horses," will be exhibited on the same program.

The Singing Marine

"The Singing Marine," a gay, star-studded laugh and whistle hit featuring Dick Powell, Doris Weston, Ruth Hershey and Allen Jenkins, will be presented at the Belle tonight for the last times, with extra interesting reel of World News Events and a clever colorgraph.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Barbary Coast" "The Littlest Rebel" Star at Both Theatres Where and West Meet and Mix and Make News

The "Barbary Coast," America's last frontier of untamed emotions, lives again in all its stark, rowdy realism in a production of that name which is now playing the Capitol Theatre as hit No. 1 on a glorious revival programme with Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson and Joel McCrea in its leading roles.

"Barbary Coast" offers Miriam Hopkins her greatest role as Swan, a beautiful girl who invades the gold-mad city of lore-hungry men and becomes hard and cold as the diamonds with which she is decked by Chamalis, the powerful, ruthless owner of the notorious Bella Donna cafe, over whose roulette table she reigns.

Into this struggling mass of humanity wanders Jim Carmichael, a fine, clean-cut young chap, who has made his strike. He and Swan fall in love, but the man meets a bitter disillusionment when he discovers her connection with the Bella Donna.

Death and destruction stalk the scene and Chamalis' jealous rage nearly turns the lovers' romance into horror before the lovers are free to face the future together.

Robinson is seen as the brutal Chamalis and Joel McCrea, plays Jim.

"Barbary Coast" is robust, hearty, thrilling entertainment. See it by all means.

"The Littlest Rebel"

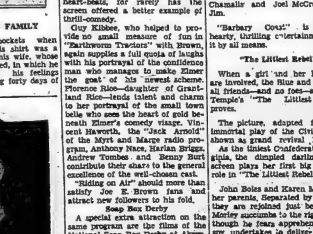
When a girl and her happiness are involved, the Blue and Gray are all friends—and no foes—as Shirley Temple's "The Littlest Rebel," proves.

The picture, adapted from that immortal play of the Civil War, is shown as grand revival, hit No. 2.

As the tiniest Confederate in Virginia, the dimpled darling of the screen plays her first big dramatic role in "The Littlest Rebel."

John Boles and Karen Morley are the parents, Jack Holt and Bill Robinson, they are rejoined just before Miss Morley succumbs to the injury. Before though he fears apprehension as a spy, undertakes to deliver the child to her aunt in Richmond.

He is trapped by a Yankee officer, Jack Holt. But Holt, surrenders to Shirley's charm, and first tries to help them through the line. When their plot fails, both Holt and Boles are in hot water.



How the little girl uses her charms as "President of the Union to save her daddy and her dearest friend, is revealed in the tender dramatic climax of "The Littlest Rebel."

Bill Robinson, the colored genius of tap dancing, is again Shirley's inseparable companion in this picture. Between them they manage some left and charming exhibitions of footwork.

JAPAN PREMIER KIN TO CONDUCT BALLET MUSIC

Viscount Hindemaro Konoye will conduct the ballet music. He (right) brother of Prince Konoye, Premier of Japan, is shown at Hollywood bowl as he discusses a forthcoming ballet production with Michio Ito, the ballet master. Konoye's shocked Japanese aristocracy a few years ago, when he resigned from the Japanese House of Peers to devote his entire time to a musical life.

Bobby Feller of the Indians Year's Biggest Bust As He Fails to Gain Needed Control

In 79 Innings Has Allowed 61 Hits And 65 Bases on Balls.

CUBS GAIN

Dizzy Dean Wins First Start Since July 4th

(By Syd Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It doesn't even take a good look any more to show what's wrong with Bobby Feller. Just a peek at the standings will tell you his record, like Babe Ruth's figure, belies just the wrong stance.

With his speed and youth, he may still become the sensation of his baseball generation, but up to now, he seems well on the way to going down as the biggest bust since Al Merkle detoured from first to third.

For all the good he's done the Cleveland Indians this year, he might just as well have been back on the farm, and for all the class he's shown by warming the bench full of headlines they gave him, he might as well have been a butcher in Bangkok.

And it's all because Master Bobby, game by game, is living out baseball's bewhiskered old saying, "every walk means a run."

Follow the Lead

Overlooking for the moment the fact that the Cubs' worries have been momentarily sidetracked by a four-game win streak in the senior League race, take a look over Feller's figures for the season.

He's been in 15 games for 79 innings, has allowed 61 hits, given up 65 bases on balls and fanned 87.

Steering that course, which resembles nothing so much as the zig-zagging of a streak of lightning on the loose, Feller has come close to either walking men on four for each inning he's pitched and for each batter he's fanned. His 65 strikeouts in 79 innings show that he's really "got something there" in that smoke-ball of his, but on the other hand, 136 batters have jogged to first.

His inability to get his pitches within sailing distance of home plate was never so obvious as yesterday. Although he allowed only two hits in the five innings he worked, he walked seven in two frames, five of them in a row, which does not exactly come under the head of control.

Beaten by White Sox

As a result, the White Sox cracked him and the Indians for 3 in the first game of a doubleheader. The Tribe came through to win the second, but by that time the record books showed Feller's fifth defeat against three wins for the year, with one of the season's querest performances.

Meantime, Chicago Cubs, who were supposed to be falling apart, rolled along on a twin win over the Reds, 6-1 and 3-2. Since the Giants' doubleheader with Brooklyn was rained out, the Cubs rested on a four-game lead as they headed out to tangle with their arch-rivals.

The Cardinals came back and took the Pirates in the double "Buggy Ride", 13-0 and 8-7. Dizzy Dean had his first victory since July 4 and hit his first homer of the year in the nightcap. The Dodgers beat the Bees 12-3 and 7-6 before rain ended their scheduled doubleheader.

Joe DiMaggio belted homer No. 36, Lefty Gomez fanned ten, and the Yanks whipped the Athletics 4-1 in a five-inning meeting. Their nightcap was postponed by rain.

weather. The Tigers trounced the Browns twice, 11-4 and 4-3. Senators and Red Sox were washed out.

Yesterday's Stars.

Bob Weiland and Dizzy Dean, Cardinals: Weiland pitched three-hitter and hit homer and single driving in four runs in 13-0 opener win over Pirates. Dizzy hit homer, two singles, driving in three runs and scoring three times in winning own ball game 8-7 in nightcap.

Lefty Gomez and Joe Dimaggio, Yankees — Gomez pitched three-hitter, fanned 10 and Dimaggio hit homer, single and double in two runs in 4-1 win over Athletics.

Luke Hamlin, Dodgers — Fanned five and allowed four hits in whipping Bees 8-1.

Ted Lyons, White Sox, and Earl Averill and Mel Harder, Indians— former pitched five-hitter to take twin bill opener 5-2; Averill's homer in eighth won nightcap 3-2 as Harder allowed five hits.

Charley Root and Augie Galan, Cubs — Root turned in six-hitter to beat Reds 6-1 in opener; Galan's triple with bases loaded in ninth won nightcap 5-2.

CORBIN LOCKS IN PLAYDOWNS

Earn Right by Defeating Bell-Sargents on Saturday 9-6

Corbin Locks will represent Bellerville in the intermediate "A" series of the O. A. A. play-downs this year, winning that responsibility by virtue of a 9 to 6 victory over the Bellerville Sergents in a third and final game in their city series played at Coleman Field Saturday night. The Corbin Locks are scheduled to meet the Peterborough City loop winners in Bellerville on Wednesday next in the first game of the first round of provincial softball play-downs.

Extra base hits determined Saturday's issue, that as the Corbin boys came from behind and won Johnnie Bawden, the Corbins' ace moundsman, subdued the Sergeants and hurled splendid ball with the exception of the second inning, the Sergents got to his deliveries for four big runs and assumed an early game lead. Bawden's mammoth circuit hit in the eighth tied the score and from that point on the issue was never in doubt. Keddie Schreiber was Manager Barnett's choice for second duty for the Bell-Sargent and for seven frames Corbins, but was certainly in favor Schreider completely baffled the ire of Sager after Rigby tripled following Bawden's homer. The Corbins out-hit their lockmaking rivals 17 to 15.

Bawden, Rigby and Hanna collected potent base for the winners, each collecting three bingles, while Elmer, Cole and Lubell slapped out a brace of hits each for the losers. Bawden showed inclinations to be wild in the early stages as he walked three in the first two frames, but failed to keep another free ticket as the Corbin played heads-up ball once they knotted the score. The Bell-Sargents were guilty of some rather loose and poor softball and played spotty ball after leading with a four-run lead. Errors by Hanna, Elder's homer in the sixth, proved the winning point in the game for Corbins.

MAX SCHMELING 'SAW SOMEZINGS'

German Heavyweight Eager to Fight Louis Again

Pompton Lakes, N.J., Aug. 23 (AP)—Max Schmeling, the beetle-browned German "saw somezings" when he got his first glimpses of Joe Lewis in the movies is seeing things again.

Max parlayed what he saw once before into one of boxing's most sensational bouts of the past decade, his 12 round knockout of the Brown Bomber in the 10th. After watching Louis go through his training calisthenics for his bout with Tommy Farr at Pompton Lakes yesterday he proclaimed to friend and foe alike, something I am made eager than ever to fight him I can't lick him again."

Schmeling, who set out to rewin the heavyweight title he lost to Jack Sharkey still insists he wants the title but nothing else.

"I want Louis," says Max. "I'm only after the title. I want to fight him this fall but next year is all right, too."

There are many who believe Max will get his crack at the champion this fall and that the date of the bout will be announced Friday — if Louis wins from Farr Thursday.

NEWARK BEARS NEED ONE GAME

Possible All Mathematical Chances Can be Removed Tonight

(By The Associated Press)

The amazing Newark Bears, the classic collection of youthful ballplayers that spread-eagled the International League, can stamp and deliver the circuit's 1937 championship to Col. Jake Ruppert and his farm overseer, George Weiss, tonight.

Only one contingency stands in the way of the Bears. Should they lose to the Buffalo Bisons and the second place Montreal Royals take two games from the Baltimore Bisons, then the pennant clinching with its attendant celebration must be postponed.

After the Rochester Red Wings had halted the Bears, Sunday afternoon by a 9 to 4 count, Montreal's pennant ambitions yesterday when he hurled a nine-inning three-hit relief bit. The Buffalo Bisons handed the Toronto Maple Leafs 6-3 in two innings on a single by Jimmy Ripple and Ollie Carnegie's double. Pete Sivess stopped Baltimore Orioles shut out the Syracuse Chiefs in the first game of a double bill and then Bill Cook put them in the lead in the second game 2-1.

TONYPANDY TERROR CLIMBED ABOARD BAER FOR REMARK

(By Gayle Talbot)

Associated Press Sports Writer

Long Branch, N.J., Aug. 23—(AP)—There's a lot of off-hand opinion around here that Tommy Farr, the short tempered Welshman, is liable to give Joe Louis a lot more trouble Thursday night at Yankee Stadium than Joe has in mind.

Farr made a lot of friends yesterday when he offered — even insisted — on climbing aboard Max Baer. He wanted to slug Max, and he would have if they hadn't pulled him off. Farr wasn't a phony! The Tonypandy Terror was sore at Baer's whistling remarks Max made about his punch, or lack of punch, and he wanted to start something then and there.

The boys like that. Here was a guy with a lot of money coming up Thursday night, more than he ever saw before in his life, and he was willing to risk losing it for the unalloyed pleasure of hanging one on Baer's whiskers. If his manager, Ted Broadribb, hadn't jumped between them, Farr would have.

Exports Improved

He might have broken a knuckle, or had that ear that's all cut up opened wide. Neither Tommy nor Max had gloves on when the tough hombres from Tonypandy butted heads with the play boy. Farr quit Baer in a few things that would get the average man bit. If Max hadn't held his temper, Mike Jacobs wouldn't have a fight card today to end all headaches.

"That's how I like it," said the Welshman after a shower had cooled off just a little. "I kind of mean it coming from ex-Umpire Woodley, who has nodded here two years ago by giving some terrible decisions in a Kingston-Petes' playoff game? Looks like shikems come home to roost, or maybe those who live in glass houses get plenty of stones. Rotarians play in Bellerville today."

The Liftlock City cribs says we've "cracked umpiring assignments in Peterboro this season. That's really funny, for two reasons, first, we never had a Peterboro appointment in the O.B.L. ibl season and second, we've been pressured into service to umpire the Petes' road games in Kingston, where, we fear, the Liftlock City athletes are not too anxious to poke their noozles with the pugnacious Kingston and his henchmen around. People who live in glass houses shouldn't take a bath, Cecil my friend.

Few recognized the fact that Tony Pacaweal, Kingston ace mermen, has worked a perfect alibi beginning last week, pitching no hit no run ball for nine innings. It was during the 12 inning frame when the Fonthead Oshawa 3-2. From the third frame until the final out in the 12th, Pacaweal never allowed a hit, making nine full innings of hitless ball with no runs scored against him in that period.

The Bellerville Kiwanis Juniors would appreciate it if some philan-

with Ken J. Colling

This evening the Napanee Olbards are playing in Kingston and providing the Ponies win they will be tied with Oshawa for first place in the O.B.J.L. necessitating a sudden-death play-off game for that berth. Of course if Walt Gorwa's gang win, that ends that and the O.B.J.L. play-offs will commence with Peterboro at Kingston on Wednesday. But in event the Ponies win there has been talk of having the Oshawa sudden death game at both Napanee and Peterborough. If the C.O.B.L. executive is interested in reviving baseball interest in Bellevile why wouldn't it be a splendid idea to stage the sudden "saw-off" game right here in Bellerville? This district at our Exhibition Park was never in better condition and such an important game would attract a goodly following on a Wednesday afternoon. Newton Thompson secretary of the C.O.B.L. informs us there is to be a league meeting held in Bellerville tomorrow evening during which all matters pertaining to league play-offs will be discussed. If the Oshawa-Napanee-Kingston game will have been 24 hours, at least if the Ponies have won would it not be a good idea for members of our Parks Commission to attend Tuesday night's meeting and invite the powers that be to stage Wednesday's sudden death game to be played here?

With his mighty pen flourishing busily the Peterboro sports scribbler had the following to say regarding the Bellevile-Peterboro junior O.B.A. series, that is after lauding the work of Umpire Don Thomas the day previous. He says: "Guiste scribe takes a rap at us as we used to sandwich ride him and other Bellevile guessers—though he picks his spots and has ducked umpiring himself in Peterboro — in C. O. B. A. contests. He says Manager Woodley returned the Peterboro ball game here the other e'en and called Umpire Don Thomas a bum and Woodley informed Peterborough interests it would be no dice insofar as he was concerned as a possible official for the return game Saturday."Don't you fret on that coming from ex-Umpire Woodley, who has nodded here two years ago by giving some terrible decisions in a Kingston-Petes' playoff game? Looks like shikems come home to roost, or maybe those who live in glass houses get plenty of stones. Rotarians play in Bellevile today."

Understand the Corbin Locks, who knocked off Bellerville-Sargents 9 to 6 on Saturday night and earned for themselves the right to represent Bellerville in the Intermediate "A" series provincial play-downs of the O.A.A. are seriously considering moving their home game to the Fair Grounds for the provincial play-downs. The Corbins meet the Peterboro intermediates in their first play-off series here on Wednesday. Johnnie Bawden was the hero of Saturday's win as he pitching in the latter stages and his circuit blow incited the Corbins to come from behind and win.

Don't forget rugby football practice, under the tuition of Coach Willie Hughes, really commences in earnest tonight at the Collegiate campus. Incidentally we hear the R. C. H. "Irish" will definitely be represented in the O. R. F. U. this fall.

The Peterboro Auburns seem to be quite confident they can defeat all and sundry opposition in the Central Ontario Lacrosse League without even so much as a struggle. It seems the Auburns have three postponed games with the local Rovers, and on Saturday agreed to play one sudden death game in Wellington not only to count for the championship but to decide who will include two more possible play-off games. In twenty minutes the loser of Tuesday night's game at Wellington Arena in C.O.L.L. while the winner will meet Oshawa in the group finals. On paper it appears as though the Auburns are either awfully good or at least they think they are. In the advance suggestion was made by the Auburns and quickly snapped up by the Rovers, as it is a straight case of five to one odds in favor of the locals.

Rovers have to have the Point Anne "cementmen" and Orahamsville of Trenton play a third and deciding game at the Fair Grounds, here on Tuesday night, are being made by O.A.A. Convener Harry Rollins today. The Cement Village lads contend the Trenton bunch battled players out of order in Point Anne and are seriously thinking of protesting, however.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE CLOSE

Toronto, Aug. 23.—(CP)—Buyers avidded the stock market today and the session was a dull affair with aggregate turnover below the 300,000 share mark. While the Industrials and the Western Oils held steady to strong the selling was a little better than the buying in Base Metals and the close was off narrowly for both Golds and Base Metals.

The Winnipeg Electric issues, Bell Telephone, Brazilian Traction and Union Gas all posted moderate gains and in the Steels the close was up narrowly for Hamilton Bridge Pfd., and United Steel. The Hiram Walker stocks added 1-4 to 1-2.

Massey-Harris Pfd., off 3-4, was the weak spot in the Implements and miscellaneous issues to ease off included Simpson B, General Steel Wares, Great Lakes Pfd., Bathurst Power A and Abitibi Pfd. Canada Steamship issues added 1-4 to 7-8.

Oalners of 5 to 9 cents among the Western Oils were Calgary-Edmonton, Home and Okalta, and Trans-Canada added a few cents.

Selling of Consolidated Chibougamau was in sharp contrast to the recent heavy liquidation and the price closed around 48 cents for a net loss of 4 cents. Preston was offered in considerable volume at a drop of 10 points to 1.17 but recovered in late trading.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Aug. 23.—(AP)—The stock market today was under feels rallying motions in today's early dealings but then lacked power and initial improvement was relinquished in most cases.

While a handful of stocks maintained modest gains near the final hour, many leaders were on the losing side. The pace was exceptionally slow from the start, transfers running at the rate of about 850,000 shares.

Probably Indian Chief Owns Few Oil Wells

Lo, the poor Indian. Seated nonchalantly in the tonneau of an expensive limousine, with a liveried colored chauffeur at the wheel high with importance, a sombrero-hatted full-blooded Indian puffed majorly on a large black cigar as his carpicked his way through the heavy traffic at the Front-West Bridge Streets intersection shortly before noon Saturday.

Two plaits of heavy black hair, hung down each side of his bronzed face. The flat slightly squillin nose and high cheek-bones designated the Indian to be one of the Southern American tribes. He wore a faded shirt of "dungaree" while from the "ten-gallon" veiled sombrero hung silver cords.

The "Chief" did not deign a glance sidewise although a lot of curious eyes followed his passage through the streets. The car bore an Oklahoma license plate and it can be readily imagined, that the dusky brave was one of those fortunate Oklahoma Indians, whose government grant of land proved to be the origin of a few "gushers" oil-wells.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

The local market has again resumed its lethargic state, brought about in large measure by the seriousness of the conflict in China. A week or so ago, the list had given evidence of coming to life on the upside proclerated in good measure on reports that the wheat crop would be somewhat better than anticipated as well as the fact that business conditions were holding up remarkably well.

About all that can be said for the market at the moment is that the technical position of the list is sound and that holders of stock will have to exercise patience. The better grade issues, on any appreciable setback from prevailing quotations, should offer interesting opportunities for appreciation over a moderate period. The one with funds at the moment is able to acquire a fist of diversified common stocks returning an adequate yield. An official declaration of war seems inevitable, in which case Canada may be forced to prevent exports of war materials to the combatants. In such an event Japan might retaliate by placing an embargo on all Canadian products, thus causing a temporary dislocation in a few of our primary industries. At the moment, lack of transportation to the East is holding up shipments. We are neither alarmed nor rash enough to predict possible market movements resulting from one of many possible steps which several countries may take, but we believe it is reasonable to look for no immediate action on Canada's part to bar exports nor on the part of the United States to invoke their neutrality law.

Hiram-Walker-Goodeham & Worts, Ltd.

One of the larger units identified both with the Canadian and American liquor industries, the operating record of Hiram-Walker-Goodeham & Worts, Ltd., has been more consistently favorable than that of its leading competitors. To what extent the company's operating and merchandising policies may be credited with its achievement is not known, but the more obvious facts are that the company has an exceptionally well diversified list of products, including Canadian, domestic and Scotch whiskies, gins, brandies and cordials among which are a number of brands of outstanding consumer popularity.

Reflecting the success of the company in the domestic market and the stimulus given to the sale of Canadian products in the United States by the 50 per cent reduction in duty on such imports, the consolidated sales in the fiscal year ended August 31, 1936, reached a new high record of $54,720,000. This was a net increase of $7,000,000 over the year before. After all charges, amounted to $4,796,120, equal after preferred dividends to $8.57 per share on 660,000 shares of common stock, this latter figure being the common stock earned $4.58 a share. The record of last year, however, appears likely to be surpassed this year. Operating profits for the three months to May 31, 1937, increased over $2,000,000 and net available for the common, after preferred dividends, amounted to $4,941,619, or the equivalent of $7.49 a share on the 724,004 common shares, contrasting with $5.02 a share on 660,000 shares of common stock in the corresponding period of 1936. On the basis of this showing earnings for the complete fiscal year will probably be between $8 and $9 a share for the 724,004 shares of common number of shares outstanding after giving effect to conversion privileges.

Impressed By Terror Valley

The local senior executive certain local financial houses have returned from a visit to the West. While in that territory they took the opportunity to visit the oil area. They were greatly impressed with Turner Valley and with the manner that the Royalite Oil Company is handling the development work. The geological situation clears they expect that the market develop for the Western Oils.

MARKET COMMENT

Last week's market witnessed some foreign selling by our market, this emanating from London as a result of the flare-up over the Sino-Japanese conflict. Favorable conditions in the Canadian business picture were overlooked, although in time the constructive influences will find reflection in the price of securities.

The substantial improvement in net earnings of Brazilian Traction in July as against the same month last year, attests to the improvement that is taking place in the South American republic and warrants the opinion that the directors will declare a satisfactory dividend at the year-end.

Earnings of International Nickel Reaches a Level of $5,000,000 Per Month

Informed sources advise the writer that the International Nickel Company of Canada Limited has established earnings at a rate of approximately $5,000,000 per month, and, as a result, net profits are more than $5,000,000 every thirty days. Further increase in this connection may be looked for as the management brings their plans to completion. This Company earned $1.71 a share on its common stock in the first six months of this year as compared with $1.12 a share in the same period in 1936. Such an improvement is impressive. On the other hand the balance sheet figures reveal that International Nickel improved its Net Working Capital position by $12,362,237 in the same time. These gains will stand the shareholders in good stead as time passes on as the dividend payments to the common shareholders can be stepped up rather aggressively from now on. Some insiders can see the day coming when $4 a share per annum will be disbursed to the equity holders.

Field News From Turner Valley is Good

The bulk of the news from the oil fields of Alberta has been highly constructive in character and probably will continue to be for many months to come. New wells with good production have been brought in and more are scheduled to follow. The piping system of the Royalite Oil Company is used to bring the crude into the refinery, and Imperial Oil Limited are making plans to use this production to the best advantage. In the meantime the stock market pays little attention to this excellent news because of the unsettlement that Premier Aberhart has brought about by his recent proposals.

Gachin Holdings Limited

New Issue. Incorporated Aug. 11th, 1937

Sponsors

Gachin Holdings Limited has the same management—J. J. Carrick Limited—as Gachin Gold, which is an outstanding success and has paid regular dividends since 1933.

Vendor's Stock

No vendor's stock or promotion stock has been issued or will be issued. All shares are treasury shares.

Investments

Gachin Gold was organized in 1932 when gold stocks were depressed, and there has not been such an opportunity since 1932 to buy gold stocks as the present time.

Policy

(a) To acquire large or controlling interests in other companies, especially those whose stock is selling below break-up or liquidating value. Gachin Holdings Limited has already purchased a substantial block of shares of a gold mining company with Kirkland Lake interests—Canada's richest gold camp—at less than 50% of its break-up or liquidating value.

(b) To purchase senior and junior gold shares with the object of further appreciation and capital return.

(c) To finance into production mining companies whose properties meet the necessary requirements of our statistical engineering and research investigation.

Management

Gachin Holdings Limited is fortunate in having as its fiscal managers J. J. Carrick Limited. It was through their efforts that Gachin Gold has paid 7% on its preferred shares from incorporation, and on June 30, 1937, paid 15% on its common shares. We do not know of any other mining company in Canada that has this record of dividends on both preferred and common shares.

OCTOBER 6 CHOSEN AS ONTARIO ELECTION DATE

Chief Issues of Campaign Announced by Leaders In Pre-Election Speeches

Nomination Day Will be Held on Wednesday, Sept. 29

DISSOLVE LEGISLATURE

Liberals Elected in 1934 Holding 70 of 90 Seats

Toronto, Aug. 24. (CP)—Ontario voters will go to the polls Wednesday, October 6, Rapery announced, the date of the Provincial general election was no longer a secret today.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced the date last night after a three-hour council of war with his Cabinet. The announcement found the election campaign already well warmed up, the leaders and workers to all parts girded for the fray.

Conservatives have at least 30 nominees in the field. The Liberals have nine of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, which plans to contest most of the 90 seats, in four. Formal nominations day is Wednesday, September 29, seven days before polling.

The Liberal Government of Premier Hepburn could legally sit until the fall of 1939 if it so chose, but as long ago as last winter the Premier indicated he would seek an early opportunity of testing public opinion in matters of each policy adopted by his administration.

Three-Fold Program

Mr. Hepburn declared in announcing the election that many of his Cabinet colleagues favored Oct. 13 rather than the 6 as election day, but this would have clashed with the annual meeting of the Ontario Conservative Association. To have delayed polling until the week following would have been to run the risk of bad road conditions in Northern Ontario.

Chief issues before the electorate, according to Premier Hepburn in election addresses, are threefold. They are:

1—The Hepburn Government's opposition to the entry into Ontario of the John L. Lewis committee for industrial organization. This policy was formulated in the Oshawa General Motors strike and led to the requested resignations from the Cabinet of David Croll, Minister of Welfare, Labor and Municipal Affairs and Arthur Roebuck, Attorney-General. They disagreed with the Premier's stand.

2—Action by the Administration in cancelling Hydro-Electric Power commission supply contracts with four Quebec Power Companies, later negotiating a new deal with three of them, and enacting legislation designed to make the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission "judgment-proof" in the courts.

3—The government's treasury department inquiries into succession duty payments by estate. Premier Hepburn has announced that the findings will be placed in the belief the province has been defrauded of inheritance taxes.

Rowe Leads Conservatives

Hon. Earl Rowe, still a member of the House of Commons for Dufferin-Simcoe, leads the Conservatives into the field. In his addresses he has attacked the administrative record of Premier Hepburn. With regard to the general three-point platform he has said:

1—The Conservative party is opposed to Communism in all forms in connection with labor disputes. It stands for the right of free association, allowing every worker to organize in any union of his choice.

2—It charges the Hepburn and Liberal government in nullifying Hydro contracts has led to an imminent shortage of power in Ontario.

3—"When I am in power every dollar owed to this province will be collected," declared the elect in run in Centre Simcoe, that in which the Premier would oppose Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Provincial Minister of Education.

Lengthy Speaking Tours

Premier Hepburn and many of his ministers have already been nominated for re-election. He will be opposed in his home riding of Elgin by N. R. Martin, Elgin dairy farmer. Hon. Peter Heenan will have heavy speaking programs that will see them appearing in Cochrane almost every week night and afternoon from now until polling day.

The Liberals were elected June 19, 1934, having 70 members to the Conservatives' 17 returned. With the exception of the Liberal win from Kenora-Rainy by death, the party standing is the same as immediately after the election. The C.C.F. holds one seat, while an Independent Liberal and a United Farmers of Ontario representative make up the 90 seats.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Long summers! It is pretty well established that the earth has gone through at least four ice ages. Indeed, it is on the warming side of the last one which began to retreat about 250,000 years ago. It has been estimated that the period between the ice ages are much longer, perhaps five or six times, than the ice ages themselves. During the warm periods, which may be considered as summers, there are no ice sheets at all. The climate of the earth was more or less uniform and like a long summer when "richer forests like those of the middle United States grew within 13 degrees of the Pole".

INFANTILE PALSY TREND UPWARD

Illinois State Health Department Issues Report

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 24.— (AP)— "The highest prevalence of infantile paralysis in twenty years, with the upward trend in prospect until the end of September, was reported today by the State Public Health Department.

Dr. Frank J. Jirka, Health Director, said 193 cases were reported to date this year compared to 89 in 1936.

Cases were reported in all parts of the State, although incidence was more concentrated in Chicago and vicinity, where 35 cases were reported last week.

WIDE SEARCH FOR CHILD ABDUCTOR

Three-Months-Old Child Snatched From Carriage

Chicago, Aug. 24—(AP)—Police officials of every suburb and town ran into the search today for a three-months-old girl who was snatched from her mother's baby carriage in view of hundreds of shoppers.

The child, Diane Carol, disappeared from the carriage outside a big grocery store while her mother, Mrs. Dorothy Lazar, 22, was making purchases yesterday.

Mrs. Lucas waited nearly an hour before notifying police. She said she thought her husband, Herman, 31, had taken the baby as a joke during a 15 minutes absence. Police found the father at home unaware of the abduction.

Investigators expressed doubt that the infant was taken for ransom. They said the parents were in moderate circumstances. Police Sergt. Michael Bergen advanced the theory the girl was taken by a childless couple or by some mother whose family had lost a child.

Mrs. Lucas suggested another theory when she told police a former friend of her husband had threatened to break up his home before their marriage, Aug. 8, 1934, but the woman was sought for questioning.

"The Hepburn administration has failed, as an examination of the records will show. I propose from time to time next fall to discuss with the people of this province the shortcomings of the Hepburn government but to define the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party in these and other questions.

Will Reveal Party Program

"Mr. Rowe said in an interview he would soon reveal his entire election platform. The party is united and we are massed in attack formation," he said, "along with every right-thinking Liberal who represents Mr. Hepburn's dictatorship.

"The Conservative leader added: "Never has the Province, of Ontario been so misgoverned nor so heavily taxed. Never has the honor of the province been so disgraced nor the Intelligence so oppressed. Victory for the Conservative party is assured."

SIX KILLED AS PLANE CRASHES

Giant U. S. Navy Flying Boat Drops in San Diego Bay

San Diego, Calif., Aug. 24.— (AP)—Disaster struck a giant U.S. navy flying boat last night, killing six of the men and a loss of $150,000 craft as it crashed into shallow San Diego Bay.

The patrol bombers dropped with minor injuries but three officers were killed and the plane almost demolished by the impact.

Its hull submerged, the wreck was quickly surrounded by navy and private ships as giant searchlights illuminated the bay.

The dead were listed as: W. C. Fry, Jr., lieutenant junior grade; W. Wallace, lieutenant junior grade; W.M. Freshour; R. Fall, aviation chief machinist's mate; S. M. Purdy, radioman, second class, and T. F. Bryan, radioman, third class, naval aviation pilot.

Two survivors were J. W. Blackman, aviation ordnanceman, second class, and T. P. Dougherty, aviation machinist's mate, second class.

The ill-starred plane, PBY-1, whose stater flying boats have flown in mass formation to Honolulu and the canal zone in the past year, was undergoing a "routine night practice flight" for a forthcoming hop to Panama, in September.

As it swooped down for a landing after being the air several hours, the seaplane struck the Narwhal, also anchored among ship ones used in filming "Moby Dick".

HON. EARL ROWE FORESEES VICTORY

Says Conservatives Accept Challenge of Premier Hepburn

Warkworth, Ont., Aug. 24.—(CP) —Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, expressed confidence today his party would be returned in the Oct. 6 provincial elections and accepts the "challenge" of Premier Hepburn who announced the date last night. Mr. Rowe, who spoke here last night, said he was "delighted" that the election date had been set.

He issued the following statement:

"I welcome the announcement by Mr. Hepburn that the election will be held Oct. 6.

Says Issues Clear Cut

"The Conservatives of the Province accept this challenge. The issues are clear cut and I am confident of victory for the Conservative party. The scandal of Hydro repudiation, the operations of the labor, the corruption of the civil service, the disgraceful administration of the Liquor Control Act, the dangerous political interference with the administration of the power finance and the abandonment of British principles, by the government are the true issues that demand the condemnation of the people of the province.

"The Hepburn administration has failed, as an examination of the records will show. I propose from time to time next fall to discuss with the people of this province the shortcomings of the Hepburn government but to define the policy of the Liberal-Conservative party in these and other questions.

Will Reveal Party Program

Long Haired Mexican Chihuahua Dog Seen

He is two years old and he weighs only nine and a quarter pounds. Yet he is in the pink of condition and will show fight at the slightest provocation. Weighing only two ounces when he was born, he was carefully nurtured and soon became a healthy growing youngster. There he will be the proud possessor of a number of dog-lovers for this long-haired Mexican Chihuahua dog is the only one of its kind in Ontario.

A tiny nose sniffed the air and his inquisitive eyes saw an aristocratic dog family turned his head by dislike.

"Mickey is not naturally fierce," smiled his mistress, "but sometimes he doesn't like strangers—which is of which may have been true but the reporter's eyes were straightway busy in those regions of men's trousers where the majority of men carry their money.

CONSTABLE SAVES HIS OWN DOG

Strong Convictions Held Over Those Who Tie Cans to Dog's Tail

Tying a can to a dog's tail may be some people's idea of a joke but it comes to a serious question of cruelation of turpentine, and six large cans of the tomato variety were added to the south end of a dog which happens to be your own—well that is a different matter. At least so thinks Constable Wellman of Hastings village.

The policeman was standing in the main street of the village the other day when a large dog speed by him and disappeared in the race way behind one of the stores. Then the cans jangled along the street in the rear of the animal, whose countenance looked familiar to the constable.

Recognizing it as his own dog, Wellman followed it and arrived in the nick of time to haul the heavy-coated animal out of the water.

"The dog would have drowned had I not been around" said the man, and a dangerous steam in the official eyes boded ill for the guilty one, who is known to him, declared the policeman.

5 BOYS FORCED TO LEAVE BOAT

Eventually Were Picked up And Brought to Shore

Sunday morning last five boys went sailing on the bay and when a considerable distance from the harbor the boat commenced to leak and rapidly filled with water. They were forced into the water and clung to the boat for some time. Quick action, until shortly before noon when they were picked up by Mr. Keller in his motorboat. Keller's boat developed engine trouble and another motorboat came along and took the boys to shore. Keller soon fixed the engine and returned to the harbor, where he arranged to convey the boys to their homes in two cars.

All the boys could swim, but they thought the distance to shore was too great for them to endeavour to cover. They were very cold and somewhat exhausted when picked up.

The boys were—Allan Moore, age 16, Emily Street; Fred Archer, age 14, Emily Street; Jesse Wood, age 15, Emily Street; David Bockus, age 14, Cannifton Road and Gordon Morgan, age 14, Cannifton Road.

DELAY OPENING TORONTO SCHOOLS

Toronto Board of Health Recommends Delayed Reopening

Canadian Press replied today to a query whether the term "public school" in the ban to be placed on the reopening of public and separate schools in Toronto until September 7th instead of September 1st as originally planned did not include collegiate, high and vocational schools in that city, that "school ban not clearly defined, but believed here almost certain to include all schools, public, vocational and collegiate."

Yesterday action was taken by the Toronto Board of Health at an emergency meeting to defer the reopening of the schools in Toronto until September 7th, on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic which has been out in that city and in other places. This recommendation of the Board was sent to the Board of Education and the Separate School Board.

Belleville Chairman's View.

"Personally I am in favor of postponing the opening of the schools in Belleville until Sept. 7 and a general consensus of opinion of the Board of Education seems to be of the same opinion, but we must first ascertain whether or not the Board will lend its grant from the Department of Education, with whom we are in communication at the present moment," H. J. Allin, chairman of the Belleville Board of Education stated to The Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon when questioned regarding the possibility of postponing the opening of our schools until after Sept. 1, as has been done in other centres throughout the province.

"There is no need for alarm by Belleville, however, regarding the matter of infantile paralysis, as the chief Medical Officer, Dr. C. H. Cronk, assured me today that 'all precautions are being taken in Belleville', but if we can postpone the opening of our schools for one week without losing our grant from the provincial government, the chances are we might be doing the city justice under the prevailing conditions existing in other centres, where," added Chairman Allin.

NO ONE NAMED

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 24.—(CP)—With his retirement but one week away, Inspector A. Ontosoro, O.P.P. Headquarters have today developed information on someone has as yet been named to succeed Frank V. Pattison, veteran collector here, retiring at end of this month on pension.

In view of lack of permanent appointment, it was expected an interim acting collector would be named.

HIGH ARTISTRY OF BOYS AND GIRLS IS ON EXHIBITION

Samples of Work Done at East And West Playgrounds

That the youth of Belleville do not confine their activities to the mere use of the City Playgrounds apparatus and appliances during the long summer months is shown in the splendid display of manufactured articles being shown at the Y.M.C.A. this afternoon and evening by the supervisors under the jurisdiction of Superintendent George Laughlin.

Under the initiation and experienced eyes of a group of competent instructors included among whom are Jack Sweetman, Lorraine McOmmis of the West End and Jack Cousins and Jean Ostcher of the East End Playgrounds, the children of the city have demonstrated a marked ability in the realm of handicraft, the finished showing in a number of cases originality of design and a perfect finish for the manufacture and decoration for the many useful articles which have received throughout during the past two months.

Scholars Aptitude

The exhibition now on display at the Y.M.C.A. is a tribute to the aptitude of the scholars of the city for the manufacture and creation of these articles, and to the ability on the ability of their instructors. These groups have spent many hours with their various pupils in the realization of this all-important work and their instruction and patience are clearly exemplified in the finished articles and paintings turned out by the pupils. The exhibition is worthy of the patronage of the older residents of the city, as the display will not only be surprised at the completeness and actual usefulness of many of the articles displayed, but they will gaze in wonder at the talents displayed, and the artistic beauty of design and originality of many of the finished products.

Sculpture

For instance, cakes of common white soap, have, under the magic knives and artistry of youthful scholars been transformed into things of real beauty, showing in bold relief against the whiteness of their backgrounds are animals, in various poses, heads of well known people and many other subjects.

Outstanding in this particular phase of handicraft, are, a greyhound with a magnificent pedigree showing clearly: a fine replica of a Sloop Yacht's hull, a racing dog in full attitude, and a bust of Mickey Mouse.

Many and varied are the useful articles which have been transformed by the ability of these young artisans, from common everyday objects to things of use and beauty.

Fabrications in Brass

Pieces of brass have been hammered into various shapes such as book-ends, bookends, ash trays, bath trays, picture frames, and letter-openers.

Multi-colored flowers of wax-covered paper adorn shining baskets which if closely examined have been ingeniously cut from an ordinary table napkin.

More than ordinary ability with the paint brush is evidenced in the many pretty objects which have been cut out of plywood and painted in various colors, and in the many haired terrier games almost lifelike from the painted cut out on the table. This splendid piece of work is from the hand of Master Don Grant of the West End playgrounds. Other fine pieces of work are those of Master Donald Bell, Mickey Mouse and other popular characters in cut-out form gaily painted besides a large number of animals and other objects.

Work by Girls

The adaptability of the girls is clearly shown in a fine display of beaded work. Rings and bracelets of many colored beads, and various combinations; flowers with beaded petals and leaves, and many other works of beaded beauty add a distinctly colorful touch to the exhibition.

Lovers of black and white will find their tastes satisfied by the fine display of silhouettes. Landscapes, animals and other subjects done in black and white, with white centres or ground, on glass and on cloth serve as a variety to the gay colors of other painted objects.

The humble clothespin transformed into a gaily colorful toy through the magic of gold paint, colored paper and a little bead for eyes will also draw well deserved attention.

Originality of Design.

Originality of design is clearly shown in cutouts of wood and linoleum. Many clever works of the carving art are shown here. Fly-swats and gun pins the ability of the youthful wood carvers have resulted in many fine useful articles.

A collection of original drawings from the pencil of Mary Williams, a young lady artist, occupies a table by itself. Originality of subject and a general knowledge of perspective, mark this young girl as being one of the coming artists.

Some fine replicas of "Topsy" and whose clothes were made by young feminine fingers completes a highly interesting display.

'NEW DEAL' PLAN TO END CRASHES

Windsor Magistrate Sends Three Men to Jail

Windsor, Aug. 24 (CP)—Termed a "new deal" by Magistrate Arthur Hanrahan in an effort to reduce the number of traffic accidents in this city, three Windsor men received jail terms of ten days each on reckless driving charges in police court today.

The three were Joseph Dawson, William Kavanaugh and William McKay. All pleaded guilty.

Dawson was involved in an accident Aug. 16 when his car struck a bicyclist, inflicting bad bruises and dragging him 50 feet before stopping. Kavanaugh was driver of a car which struck Reginald Marigold Martin, 16. The girl suffered shock and bruises. McKay was involved in another minor accident.

In passing sentence, Magistrate Hanrahan noted that in other cities it had been a regular practice to impose jail sentences for reckless driving, although Windsor officials have not been doing so. In Hamilton, he said, the regular penalty on such a charge was a jail term of 30 days.

Says Sex Debauchery Spells Moral Doom

Buffalo, N.Y., Aug. 24 (AP) A Michigan clergyman, once a physician, told Buffalo's Inter-Denominational Bible Conference last night that the average 16-year-old girl of today "knows more about sex than her grandmother did after she'd had her first baby."

The mystery of sex and sanctity of the home are driving the nation toward moral doom, the Rev. Dr. M. R. De Haan of Grand Rapids, Mich., said at the annual Bible retreat at Evangeli-cal Park.

"People don't want children any more.

"Oh, yes; one child is all right. But three or more! That brands you as some sort of an unfortunate being."

As Mr. Picobac turned in to ask for his mail, he found Herb, tobacco grower by instinct and hired man to the highest bidder, seated on the end of the post office steps.

"Hello, Herb," cried Mr. Picobac genially. "What are you sittin' here for? You're not out of a job, I hope."

"This is the first time I sat down for weeks," Herb spoke up. "A hired man ain't supposed to sit down."

Mr. Picobac nodded cheerfully. "A good man like you just naturally don't get a chance to do much sittin', Herb," he said. "A tobacco man is always a busy man."

"Only chance I ever get to sit is when I come to town," said Herb. "I'm waitin' for the bus, that's all."

"Well, Herb, I don't mind telling you I enjoy sitting down once in a while myself," confessed Mr. Picobac mopping his brow. "It seems to rest your hands and face. Your bus ain't due for a while yet. Let's you and me load our pipes from my new seal-tight Picobac pouch and sit down to a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke."

HOSPITAL BUYS "IRON LUNG" TO TREAT VICTIMS

Toronto Schools Will Not Open Until September 7th

DEATH TOLL 16

(By The Canadian Press)

Death toll in Ontario's infantile paralysis epidemic today stood at 16, while at Toronto and London, the two centres chiefly affected, efforts to stamp out the scourge were redoubled. Since early June when the disease first appeared nearly 300 cases have been reported throughout the province.

Toronto's Public and Separate schools will not open until Sept. 7, rather than Sept. 1, it was decided at an emergency meeting yesterday. Under consideration was the suggestion theatres and bathing places be closed.

Seven deaths have occurred since the outbreak in Ontario's capital. Twenty-four new cases were reported yesterday, bringing the total since June 10 to 134. Child specialists planned to confer on the situation. An "iron Lung" respirator is being purchased to treat victims.

Western Ontario recorded another death overnight, that of Lloyd Lavery, 13, at Moorefield in Kitchener District. Mr. and Mrs. Pemberton Lavery moved to Moorefield, two weeks ago, shortly before the boy took sick.

Nurses Asked to Register

Graduate nurses were asked to register for service in London to help stem the epidemic. Miss Hilda M. Stewart, Victoria Hospital superintendent of nurses, reported a shortage of help resulting from increase in the number of cases. Almost 40 cases were in the hospital, the last five as suspected victims.

Purchase of an "iron Lung" was authorized by the hospital as trust and health officials moved to bar children from the movies, declaring pools have remained closed this week and theatre managers were co-operating in refusing admission to children.

Throughout the Province went a general appeal to persons, who had recovered from the scourge to give their blood for serum to treat current sufferers. Donors were called for from Public Health Institutes and offered the usual fee. A ready response was reported from many centres.

Outbreak International

The outbreak took an international turn with word from Buffalo that officials there, having discovered several cases, were taking steps to prevent further infection from Canadian sources. From Port Erie, on the Ontario side of the Niagara River, came word there was only one case and it was under quarantine. The disease was not epidemic there.

Hamilton reported a new case overnight as did Simcoe. Both victims were children. There were six cases in Norfolk County, one in Simcoe County, one in Woodstock, two in Port Dover and one in Townsend, Oldest child of the 44 had been reported since the outbreak.

Niagara Falls had its third case, the 26th in the Peninsula, while at Oakville, between Toronto and Hamilton, a first case was reported. Quarantine was being strictly enforced in all these places.

CHILD RESCUED BY JESSE BAKER

Tot Stated He Was Pushed Off Ship by a Playmate

Trenton, Aug. 24 (Special)—Ralph Howden, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Howden, Quinte Street, was rescued from drowning by Fire Engineer Jesse Baker on Saturday after he had been into the water twice. Engineer Baker noticed the small boy struggling in the water while he was investigating a fire of unknown origin on the barge, White and Friant. Jumping into the water, Mr. Baker hauled the tiny tot to shore. The little lad related that he had been shoved off the dock into the slip by a playmate.

Dr. Huyck Talks

An interesting address of the Kachakee of Rotary was given by Dr. F. H. Huyck of Kingston, at the regular meeting of the local Rotary Club in the Dilbert Hotel last night. Dr. Huyck is District Governor of District 171. Past President Claude V. Graham who is acting as president in the absence of Ben Joyce introduced the speaker.

Mrs. H. Weller Wins

Golf honors of the ladies' weekly tournament were taken by Mrs. Harold Weller yesterday afternoon when she defeated the field by playing a bang-up game on the last three holes. Miss Leah Bleeker became the holder of the Nugent weekly trophy by outwitting Mrs. Welley last Saturday. Mrs. James Shurie acted as lay hostess at the lunch after the matches. This afternoon, the Trenton ladies are the guests of the Picton ladies.

District Governor Visits Belleville Rotary Club

Belleville Rotary Club entertained the District Governor of this Rotary District in Sidney's meeting in the Hotel Quinte and found him a very personable chap. He is versed in the laws and usages of Rotary and a firm believer and practicer of the chief aims and objects of Rotary International. Dr. Phil Huyck, of Kingston, who wears the honor robes of Rotary Governor very modestly but efficiently was introduced to the club members by President Fred Douglas as a native of Wentworth, who had received his early education in Belleville and on his youth he lived in Camnilton and walked back and forth to school in Belleville every school day, winter and summer. Past President Owen Hertiy added to the biography by stating that he and the doctor had graduated from the Model School at Madoc, both became teachers and the doctor became principal of that institution and continued so until the Madoc Model School was abolished by the Whitney Government—then the doctor took up medicine.

Addressing the Belleville Club the District Governor drew attention to the similarity in democratic principles of government between the Dominion of Canada and Rotary International, explaining the various cogs in the Rotary wheel of legislation and how each fitted into his own place and functioned so as to become an integral part of the whole. Rotary International's principal purpose is to promote mutual understanding among the nations of the world, create good fellowship and unitedly work for peace on earth and good will to man. Already barriers of race prejudice have been broken down through understanding following friendship formed by association and the rapid growth of Rotary in the various nations of the world promised a mighty and efficient force for peace and good will. It has been predicted that before long there will be 5,000 Rotary clubs in China, 2,000 clubs in India, and a similar growth in every part of the world. International Rotary has brought Canada and the United States closer together in bonds of friendship and old-time suspicions and distrust have been wiped out. In the United States Rotary has brought the North and South closer together and helped to bind up the wounds, opened by the four years' Civil War. Now the Northerners are no longer "those damn Yankees" and the Southerners are no longer "Johnny Rebs" for through Rotary they have found each other "brothers under the skin."

Dr. Huyck related some interesting experiences in connection with his visit to Nice, France, for the Rotary International Convention and also Switzerland where he attended a preliminary convention of Rotary executives. Motoring along the Swiss-French frontier their car was repeatedly held up by Swiss and French guards and passports examined while the French guards measured the gasoline in the tank to ensure that no smuggling of gas was taking place. This was an interesting comparison to the freedom of the road in Canada. Instances of the spread of Rotary goodfellowship were related including the incident of 300 French and 150 Germans sitting down at a banquet and discussing amicably various matters of mutual interest. The fact also that hundreds of French, schoolchildren spent vacations in Germany while hundreds of German schoolchildren did the same in France is a hopeful augury for a future made pleasant by international good fellowship.

Rotary, it still in its infancy according to the speaker, who envisioned a great world-wideud increase in membership and clubs and an effective movement for international good will and peace.

Appreciation for Dr. Huyck's inspiring and instructive address was voiced by Past President Owen Hertiy and President Fred Douglas. Past President Jamieson Bone and John Deacon conducted the community singing. Past President Bert Boyce acted as sergeant-at-arms.

Past President Mackenzie Robertson was given a rousing Rotary banquet and discussing amicably welcome after an absence caused by illness.

What Local Theatre Managers Say About Coming Attractions

AT THE CAPITOL

Musical Hit with Charles Ruggles, Kenny Baker and Phil Harris

Mix a girl who steals a doughnut because she's hungry, a store detective who follows the girl, a boy who puts another person's name on his songs because he needs a job in a department store's music counter, a merchant who believes in horoscopes and refuses to make a move without the stars being in their proper aspects, a mermaid's sweetheart who has waited fifteen years to marry him; cast it with Charles Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs, Kenny Baker, Phil Harris, Ben Blue and Marjorie Gateson and you have one of the season's most amusing musical comedies, "Turn Off the Moon," which opens at the Capitol on Wednesday.

"Turn Off the Moon" opens with Elliott Dinwiddy about to celebrate his store's twenty-fifth anniversary. Ruggles, the merchant, believes his destiny is controlled by astrology and regulates his life according to his horoscope.

This consistency to the stars is the one factor that has postponed his popping the question to his secretary (Marjorie Gateson). Now according to his astrologist, all that is to be amended. A boy and a girl will cross Ruggles' path before midnight and the minute Dinwiddy has brought their romance to a successful conclusion the stars will be in the proper aspect for his own proposal.

In the meantime Eleanore Whitney as a hungry, out of work actress steals a doughnut in Ruggles' store and is pursued by the store detective into the arms of Johnny Downs, song plugger in the music department. We next find the two, as Dinwiddy finds them, in Honeymoon Cottage. The merchant decides here are the lovers he is predestined to help. Eventually, with the aid of the police and fire departments, a hilarious Ruggles and Ben Blue drunk, a night in jail, paying the boy's secret to go home and making the girl's secret leave and the discovery of an astronomical mistake, all comes out as movie endings should.

The musical portion of the film brings on Kenny Baker, Phil Harris and his orchestra and three songs you'll hear a lot: "That's Southern Hospitality," "Turn Off the Moon" and "Jamming." In addition it introduces American newest dance craze named after the last mentioned song.

Mr. Ruggles gives his usually superlative performance. Miss Whitney proves Bill Robinson's statement that she is the fastest dancer in the world and also proves a capable toe dancer, and with Johnny Downs produces a well-rounded highly entertaining comedy which everybody must see.

Added Attraction

As an added attraction we are showing "The Three Maxims," a sensational thrill packed circus drama that the whole family will enjoy starring Tullio Carminati and Anna Neagle.

Shown for the last times today two grand revival hits of yesterday, with a complete change of program. As hit No. 1 "Barbary Coast" with Ed. G. Robinson, Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea and as hit No. 2 Shirley Temple, John Boles and Jack Holt in "The Littlest Rebel."

"Riding on Air" Joe E. Brown also National Soap Box Derby Scenes At Akron, Ohio

There are many screen fans who maintain that Joe E. Brown is one of the screen's finest pantomimists when given the opportunity to display his rare comic abilities to advantage. Such contention is substantiated in "Riding on Air," the mammoth - mouthed star's latest screen offering which has its initial local showing at the Belle today and which will also be presented tomorrow (Wednesday) daily at 3.30, 7.10 and 9.15 p.m.

"Riding on Air" certainly falls into the classification of better Brown films. Based upon Richard Macaulay's popular Elmer Lane stories—which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post—the new picture takes its place alongside "Bright Lights," "Earthworm Tractor," "Alibi Ike" and other top hits of this star's long and successful career.

In it, Joe E. Brown proves beyond all doubt that where pure, unadulterated pantomime is called for he is excelled by no one in pictures, unless it be by that acknowledged master pantomimist, Charlie Chaplin. In the sequence in which he finds himself battling some air smugglers while trying to repair the wing of his radio-flown airplane, he provides, without resort to gag lines or comic dialogue, a hilarious quarter-hour of merriment as the screen has offered in many a day.

A DRIVER'S PLEDGE

Has it ever dawned on some persons who used the highway that whether they have given it or not, there is a virtual pledge binding them to safe driving on the roadways? Taking a permit means just that.

So to drive as to preserve the courtesies of traffic and travel, never to take advantage of another driver or force that driver into a dangerous position—always to help out a driver if he happens to be caught in a situation where a little yielding will save him and not hazard the other who give a bit—always to have the thought before him or her to drive so safely that no one will be harmed or injured through his or her thoughtlessness or carelessness are some forms inferred in that pledge.

Anyone can think of so many other forms which a pledge could take and which the rights of oneself and others demand.

If motorists do not actually make this pledge to officials or any society they might make it themselves and it would be so binding as no doubt to help to keep down the awful traffic toll.

At present the Motor Vehicle Department is running a series of horror pictures in the newspapers in order to impress indelibly upon everyone what terrible results follow recklessness in the operation of cars or carelessness, or allowing the thought to wander from the main task which is driving.

To make a pledge keeps it before the mind. It would not be unwise if such a pledge were asked and signed.

NATIONAL THEATRE

England will have a national theatre. The plan is nearing realization. A site has been purchased by the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre for $375,000 from the Office of Works in London and it is proposed to erect on this a building capable of seating 1200 persons. An endowment of one and three quarter millions of dollars is being sought.

The National Theatre is not primarily a profit-making venture for its objects are according to Lewis Casson, husband of Dame Sybil Thorndyke, one of the greatest of present day actresses, educative and stimulative.

Mr. S. Morgan Powell of the Montreal Star tells of the reaction of the British leaders to the National theatre plan. He quotes Sydney Carroll, critic and dramatic authority as saying, "To say that a National Theatre will encourage the production of more tripe by the commercial manager is all nonsense. The theatre has to contend today with radio, television, music hall, cinema, dog racing, casino, cabaret, ice palace and heaven knows what. A National Theatre will be free with the baneful influence of taxation, it will be free from many oppressions, and much competition of the kind that now worries the ordinary theatre manager into bankruptcy or the madhouse. It can foster the interests of our national drama and the actors in a way that no other playhouse can aspire to do, and as a training ground for the actor the idea merits the financial support of every film studio in the country."

Mr. Morgan Powell sees much scope for the Dominions in such a British theatre. He says the theatre could play for nine months in London and tour the British Provinces and the Dominions for three.

SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS

Modern science has shown so many avenues of progress that its gifts are being accepted without proper credit. In many cases these benefits are taken for granted.

But there is one outstanding development of science and credit for that goes to Russia, that is the canning of human blood (shortly after the death of the body), for use in transfusions and treatments in the living.

In an article in the British Lancet Professor Yudin, chief surgeon to the surgical clinic of the Skliforovsky Institute in Moscow says that remarkable results are being attained in surgical treatment of cancer with the transfusions of corpse blood to cancer patients both before and after operations. He declares that the scope of surgery has been widely improved by improving the prognosis of operations, even in most difficult and dangerous cases. He has great hopes from this development of science.

So strange and fantastic is this development that people can hardly realize what it means. Yet transfusion of blood from the living would have been thought unusual not so many years ago. What this has meant in the saving of life is well known. Where the use of blood from the dead counts is in the larger volume which can be used. Dr. Yudin speaks of the possibility of enormous doses of blood as one of the reasons for the rather remarkable results from such cases where cancer operations have been performed.

FARM CAT

Beside the barn she drowses in the sun,
The placid guardian of all she sees,
And watches where her kittens roll and run
And pounce and play in youthful ecstasies,
She seems the picture of a quiet dame
With not a thought beyond the corn-crib mice,
But she could tell, perhaps, of other game
And feats that would not be considered nice.
The wrens that nested in the big blue spruce,
Where did they go? The bluebirds in the lane?
The missing gosling that the old gray goose
Still hunts for? And perhaps she could explain
About the squabs that never learned to fly
The chicks and ducklings vanished into air.
Calm in the sun she blinks a drowsy eye;
A growing family is such a care!

THOSE BEARS AND WOLVES which lie in wait (or is it weight) for travellers on the road to Toronto, have a certain fascination for this writer although we have never been behind a driver yet who went slow enough for us to get a good enough view of this miniature zoo. We gather the place is called "Cream of Barley", which may be good food for man or beast, but have been informed that a cereal of that name is made in a mill close by the zoo. The animals stop the tourists and the makers of "Cream of Barley" do the rest, apparently, for there are tables and benches and every facility for tourist or picnic parties.

WHEN I DIE I WANT YOU TO PLACE MY BODY IN THE OFFICE OF THE MERCURY, START THE PRESS AND KEEP IT RUNNING. SHOW THE MOURNERS THE NEW LINOTYPE AND HAVE A NEGRO CHORUS SING THE ROCK OF AGES.

Newspaper men take queer quirks and are entitled by the bizarre nature of their calling and their knowledge of life behind the scenes to be different from ordinary folks. Hence the above instructions from Thomas Vaughn Bodine, 67, gun-toting editor of the Paris, Missouri, Mercury, need not astonish. He died last week and two days later his body lay in state from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. alongside the desk where he had worked for half a century. Instructions were carried out to the letter: 350 mourners were handed his obituary fresh off the clanking press. The new linotype machine purchased to celebrate the Mercury's 100th anniversary, three months hence, was Editor Bodine's great joy. He had started to use it to write his memoirs.

MISSING GIRL

By Maryse Rutledge

"I swear that wasn't it." Bertram laid his hand on the soft crook of her elbow. She shook it off as if it hadn't bothered her too much. He grew red. "I—I did think I knew her," he insisted, "thought the girl I mean never could have gone blank. Old Tom Carey, her father, was quite a character, and my mother was rather interested in Jane, this girl. Mother he died, she did come to New York though, and no one's heard of her since. It—funny—" Bill, a cautious gleam, came into his eyes. Let well enough alone.

Lorna wrinkled her small aristocratic nose. "I'm afraid Allen didn't like your arrival. And you certainly made no hit with Tony." She chuckled at the thought of Tony's dark furious face. They'd quarrel and make up tonight probably. Life with Tony would be that way — the savage Kaye temper smoulder-ing and breaking out to be managed and tamed by the touch of her hands and lips—when she chose.

Bertram reached for his glass. "Oh, we'll get on," he said confidently. He'd visit this cute red haired girl in her home and office a few parties on his own. They'd have fun.

"Wouldn't it be extraordinary if she was the girl?" Lorna said suddenly. Her mind began to peck about in the dark. Too amusing if Tony's mystery lady had come had a dark thrilling past—just a garage for a background.

"Forget it." Bertram got up to pour himself another drink. It didn't seem so far fetched as that, except for the amnesia part. He felt a little fuddled. Better go slow with the liquor. "Alike as two peas," he mumbled and grinned. "Like who's coming."

Jane was walking across the lawn toward the swimming pool, looking for Bertram. He had brought pugnacity back to her, thoughts of her father, and the home that seemed so bitterly sweet now that she had denied it. The past came flooding back—the tragic discovery of her life with her father — how they had read and talked and dreamed of far away works as cars sped past around the curve of the road.

He had never wanted her to have the best of everything. And the thought with a passion of sadness of how little he had had; of his penniceness to her mother when he had lounged beside Lorna. "Now I am me," he said with forced geniality, "why worry? I don't mind telling a few people. He poured himself a drink. "That red headed girl, for instance—your friend Lorna Howland—"

"She isn't my friend." All her hatred of Lorna edged her voice.

"You know her," Bertram pursued, and gulped down half his drink. His tone was familiar, a trifle condescending as it had been in Fond du Lac. "Tuxedo, isn't she? Have to be lots of tuxedos in my ring me in on."

He hadn't changed, Jane thought with keen horror, or his love so long ago for Bertram's mother, old Mrs. Cosier who hadn't had the courage to brave her family and marry him. It was almost like an illness in her this desire and urge to talk to Bertram about Fond du Lac and his mother.

The guests were scattered over the grounds. Tony was playing tennis. Suddenly Jane saw them — Lorna and Bertram, lounging by the swimming pool. Yes, Lorna would do that, she would get hold of Bertram, and ask sly clever questions. Jane slowed her steps.

But Lorna didn't wish either to talk to Jane just then. Running, she arched and dove into the pool, scrambled out glistening and tossed her head on her bathcap.

"Stay around. I'll see you later," she called gaily to Bertram and dashed for the house.

Bertram straightened and steadied himself. He'd been a little discreet with Lorna, he inwardly admitted to the liquor, but he wanted to stay in. It wouldn't be any too good if he turned Kaye against him, showing his wife up as a nobody.

"Oh, hello!" He looked self-conscious as Jane came up quietly, hastily ought to apologize again, Mrs. Kaye. I didn't mean—"

"But you see, I am Jane Carey," Jane said.

CHAPTER XIII.
ALONE WITH TONY

"I'm Jane Carey." It was brave, it was forlorn, and it seemed to drift like a wisp in the fine thin air of the swimming pool to be lost among Kaye-side's tended acres. Bertram looked at her, beautiful clothes, all the surface gleam and grooming of herself as the Anthony Kaye, left behind away from her. She stood again, like proud city fi-nancier's daughter, her eyes so widely set and turpilan like the dusk; kyeshire, the misty gold of her cross cropped curls once long and plaited about her head. All the firmness and toughness she had ever gathered from her father were dying in her heart. She saw Bertram as a brown blur against the cool green the sad canvas chairs, with the stone urn setting behind, and the voices of female players carrying faintly across.

Bertram jerked aside with a boyish gesture of his shoulders. "Why the h— did you have to tell me?" he muttered. Gone glimmering with this admission went a few hopes of his own bred from this girl. "Tony's dark furious face and Lorna Howland's amused attitude were indications enough. No one would touch him for exposing the romantic Mrs. Kaye as a little garage girl who must have put something over in a world that prided itself on never being taken in.

Jane looked at him in surprise. "But that what you came for—because you thought—"

"I wasn't sure." Bertram looked increasingly uncomfortable. "Look here," he burst out. "I don't know how you managed it, Jane. When I saw you yesterday afternoon, and when I thought that you had been living wandering about Park Avenue, with your mind a blank, I couldn't make it out. You were a ringer for the Jane Carey, but the rest of the story didn't fit in. Well, it's none of my business."

"Why did you come here then" Jane asked suddenly.

"Perhaps I wanted to be sure." Bertram hovered over the bottles and melting ice on the table near the green canvas chair where he had lounged beside Lorna. "Now I am sure," he said with forced geniality, "why worry? I don't mind telling a few people." He poured himself a drink. "That red headed girl, for instance—your friend Lorna Howland—"

"She isn't my friend." All her hatred of Lorna edged her voice.

ALONE WITH TONY

"I'm Jane Carey." It was brave, it was forlorn, and it seemed to now your mother is — oh, lots of things. You're not to talk of her." she said with a glance at his clasped goodlooking face. "I mean when you thought I can't help you here. You'll find Tony—rather difficult."

"I'm not Trudy of Tony. Mind if I have another slipper?" He clapped back to the table. "Here's to you, m' dear. Over girl." Bertram turned around lifting his glass.

"Don't—don't make a fool of yourself," Jane cried suddenly, sharply. "You've had too much already." She could see so clearly what would happen if he left with Lorna again him in his vanity.

Jane knew so well where the money came from—old Mrs. Cosier, bed-ridden, giving him all he wanted to spoil himself with. In this easy going rich crowd, he would go the pace, and while they kept their heads, he'd lose his.

"Who d'you mean?" Thready pumpkin hose in Bertram's face, and his usually pleasant brown eyes, swimmy. "You leave me lone and I'll hurt you, too. Used to be crazy 'bout you", he muttered.

Jane turned away with a helpless gesture. If he grew quarrelsome now, he would make a scene.

Voices drifted around the bathhouse of roses, and a group descended on the pool for a late dip. Jane turned to face Tony, his tennis shirt open at the throat, his black eyebrows barring the high slant of his nose. He looked coldly from her to Bertram who said, jovially—"Hope you don' min'. Kaye, Merin'-we-cuppie, and apologize to Mrs. Kaye."

"Has Mr. Cosier remained on as your guest?" Tony's voice was as cold as his grey eye.

Bertram pulled himself together with an effort, and some vestige of dignity squared his shoulders. "Never, sir, where I have not invited, old fellow," he said solemnly. " Polo-plas—" and he bowed to Jane.

Jane held her breath as the other guests of Kaye-side gathered around the rose in bathing suits and shorts. Bertram blinked at their splendid bodies.

"Thought you were going in, Tony." Rita Vernon, a tawny willowy than ever in skin tight jersey, she dipped and gurgled.

Tony moved up a pace. Jane. "Please remember under the circumstances," he said, "that I want no scandal. Do you or not know this man?"

"You heard him say he had made a mistake." Jane gazed at the colored flash of bodies and tennis skirts flicking the water. "Lorna asked him to stay. I would hardly know him out."

Tony muttered something under his breath with a black look at Bertram who had folded up sleepily on one of the canvas chairs, a gesture of departure entirely forgotten.

2 PLANES BOMB BRITISH BOAT

Warships And Planes Ordered to Protect Merchantmen

Marseille, France, Aug. 23—(CP-Havas)—The British 5,000-ton British freighter Nosemjulia today sent out a radio message that she had been bombed by two airplanes.

The vessel was northeast of the Balearic Islands, giving its position as 43 degrees 7 minutes latitude and 6 degrees 21 minutes east longitude.

The planes bore the numbers 822 and 836, and black circles with white crosses, and two black bars, the message said.

The ship is owned by the Nosemjulia Steamship Company of London.

It was sailing near the waters of war-torn Spain where several bombings and torpedoings of commercial vessels have occurred lately.

The Nosemjulia's message, picked up by a Marseille station, read: "We are being bombed. Position 42 degrees seven minutes north, five degrees 22 minutes east. Signs two planes numbers 822 and 836 black circle with white cross two black bars."

No further message was received immediately, leaving in doubt the fate of the vessel.

In view of recent raids, the French and British governments have ordered their warships and planes to aid merchantmen attacked on the high seas and counter-attack if necessary for their protection.

KIDNAPPED MAN TO TAKE ACTION AGAINST ABDUCTORS

Cowansville, Que., Aug. 23—(CP) Back home again in his hotel suite, stocky Samuel Grise, general superintendent of Brook Silk Mills, declared today he was "taking action immediately" against the two score men who seized him on the golf course here yesterday and raced him by car to the International border 30 miles away.

Brought back by police from Richford, Vt., where he was released from his captors by immigration officers, Grise dressed in white flannels and polo shirt said he had "nothing to say just now" about his brief abduction.

"I have been done a personal injury," he said in a quiet voice, while his wife lay back in her smoking a cigarette amid a group of friends, who remained up to welcome him home and I'm taking action immediately against the men."

Grise abducted in view of his startled wife and two small children playing golf said he recognized most of the gang of men, who seized the mill executive and fled in seven motor cars.

Seven Men Detained

The seven men detained by immigration authorities at Richford after Grise was released from their car are known to the mill superintendent, a native of New York City and "warrants will be sworn out."

When and on what charges the warrants would be sworn was a matter for his lawyer, said Grise.

His was reluctant to talk of his capture or the motive for the abduction. "Naturally," he said, "there was a motive but I'm not doing any talking right now, what they wanted to do however was to get me across the International border."

Equal reticence was shown by Mrs. Grise, who exhaled a mouthful of smoke before denying she had told newspapers anything about the seizure of her husband as they walked to the fourth tee with the two kiddies.

Police said one of the men was a weaver, dismissed from the mills for insubordination last Saturday. A lawyer for Grise, a United States citizen, said the men were being held at Richford pending a hearing.

"Let's teach Temperance!"

— Overheard in a barber shop

1st Customer: . . . well, what do you mean by temperance education?

2nd Customer: I'll tell you what I don't mean! I don't mean telling children a lot of exaggerated stories so that they're scared out of their wits when they see their elders drink a glass of beer!

1st Customer: Oh, admitted that old-fashioned sort of propaganda is all wrong! But I still think something should be done . . . what is your idea of temperance education?

2nd Customer: It should teach people that there are a great many things in this world that are good servants, but bad masters. It should teach them to be able to use any of nature's gifts temperately. It should show them that not to use something, because they are afraid of using it to excess, is a confession of weakness . .

1st Customer: That's all very well in theory. But let's get down to brass tacks. What would you teach them about drinking?

2nd Customer: Well, the first job is to get people to distinguish between moderation and abstinence, between necessary control and prohibition.

1st Customer: At least, I'll agree you can't make people sober by law . . . we tried that one!

2nd Customer: Yes, and our second job is to destroy one of the very wrong ideas left over as the handiwork of the prohibitionists . . . to get out of the people's heads the idea that the purpose of drinking, or even the necessary result of drinking, is to get DRUNK.

1st Customer: Right! Most of all the abuses come from misguided efforts to substitute law-control for self-control.

2nd Customer: And finally, we'd advance temperance education further if we'd make everyone see that drinking, like eating and smoking, is really a social custom . . . a thing least likely to be abused if people drink wholesome, mildly-stimulating beverages in public government-controlled premises. That is the British way of handling the problem. History proves it's still the best way!

● This advertisement is inserted by the Brewing Industry to the end that a better public understanding of certain aspects of the problems of temperance and local option.

THIS MUST STOP!

When you drive too slowly your attention wanders—so does your car. When you're on a main highway—keep moving at a steady pace. If for any reason you must drive exceptionally slowly — keep well over to the right so that normal traffic can pass easily and without danger or use the side roads leaving main highways unobstructed. A slow, inattentive driver is often just as dangerous as a recklessly speeding driver.

Healthful Living Aids Beauty To Avoid Facial Lines, Fatigue

By HELEN FOLLETT

What the beauty class likes to hear about concerns demonstrable eyelashes, dazzling nail polish and rosebud nipples. The members sink into a state of apathy when teacher chats about health and hygiene. All right. But those pretty night owls and those girls who rush through life and don't eat properly will wish later on that they had paid heed to dull subjects.

There is Mrs. N. for instance. She is only 30 but she looks every day of 40. She got in with a speedy crowd, has to get grand meals and works like a horse to entertain her friends. The result is she is always tired and the activities of the children give her the jitters. If she would organize her life, cut out non-essentials, learn to be calm with the young 'uns she wouldn't be getting deep brown lines between her eyes and she wouldn't look like the breaking up for a hard winter.

Too believe that a freshly-oiled finger-wave, a touch of rouge and a hasty smear of lipstick will disguise fatigue She is mistaken. What she needs is a good scolding and plenty of sleep.

Arm swinging will lighten up chest muscles so that the overdeveloped angle at bust will diminish in measurement! Massage is not safe. If it is heavy enough to reduce, it is also enough to injure delicate glands.

Spotting the flesh with a strong salt solution is an effective practice. Ice rubs are recommended. A pair of Indian clubs used faithfully, each day will take away the sag and softness, tighten slack fibres.

DECORATION DAY HELD AT MARMORA

Legion And Centre Hastings Orange Association Conduct Service

Marmora — Sunday was jointly observed by Marmora Branch No. 227 of the Canadian Legion and Number 1 District Centre Hastings Orange Association as Decoration Day. The Legionnaires assembled at the Memorial Hall and headed by Marmora Canadian Legion Band under Assistant Bandmaster G. Woodhouse marched to the Sacred Heart Cemetery, where the graves of the following ex-service men were decorated. Frank Berglund, John O'Neill, A. F. McCallum, William Murphy, Lawlor Shannon, Joseph Reynolds, James Morrison and five others, whose names are unknown, besides the graves of Matthew McFarlane and Charles Devine, civil war veterans. A short service was conducted by Rev. Father G. Martin who also gave an inspiring address on the symbolism of flowers and how we should not cease to think of those who have died. The parade then proceeded to the Public School Grounds, being joined at the intersection of Burnhill and Matthew Streets by members of the Orange Order. Here a flag covered table served as a rostrum. "Son of My Soul" was then sung with band accompaniment. Rural Dean A. S. Caldwell offered prayer and spoke briefly and fine. C. W. Hollings worth read a portion of Revelation 7, which was followed by the singing of "Blest Be the Tie that Binds." Major Rev. E. Ranson of Toronto, another speaker, gave a very appropriate address in which he stressed the fact that death does not end human influence or our memory of human lives and it can also take the soul of man.

Concluding prayer and benediction was then offered by Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth. Marmora Protestant Cemetery was then visited and the graves of former veterans and members of the L.O.L., L.O.B.A., and L.T.B. were decorated as follows—

Annual Flower Show Held By Tweed Hortic. Society

Tweed, Aug. 24—Tweed Horticultural society held its annual Flower Show and supper at the pavilion on Friday afternoon. The display of flowers was the smallest in the society's history, called. This was due to the extremely dry weather during the month of July when practically no rain fell. Flower gardens suffered greatly as a result. The keen interest and competition of other years was lacking. Many classes of flowers had no entries whatever, and most of the others not more than one or two.

The Sweepstake's ribbon was awarded to Rev. R. R. Nicholson with twenty-four firsts, seven seconds and one third for a total of 142 points.

R. H. Connor had a total of 85 points with thirteen first places.

The judging was done by Mrs. Benisted of Belleville, a recognized authority on flowers and particularly the gladiolli.

BASEBALL TITLE S. H. LEAGUE WON BY LATTA

Defeat Foxboro in Fifth And Deciding Game 11-5

HEAVY HITTING

Winners Score All Runs in Sixth And Eighth

Foxboro, Aug. 24 (Special)—Latta did almost the impossible yesterday when after dropping the first game in a three game series to Foxboro by a very close margin, they came back with the champion Foxboro club for two straight loves to win the title and climaxed their comeback yesterday in taking the fifth and final game by the decisive score of 11-5. They created a record, that surely will take some beating.

Score Four In Sixth

Playing under the baseball heading the seven hit hurling of J. Marsh, the Latta club after spotting their foes a three run lead up to the sixth and trailing three runs so they decisively answered with scoring offensiveness to score four runs in the sixth to go on top. Foxboro came back to tie the score in the seventh but Latta went wild in the eighth to score four more and from then on Foxboro simply just faded away, Latta having simply breezed home in the easy victory. In going the route Marsh allowed seven safe hits and struck out five and walked two. "Bud" Wilking allowed the Latta batsmen only six hits but was hit hard when needed. Gowe in the eighth, fanned four and had only one. The first five frames Wilking had the Latta hitters eating out of his hand with only two hits being collected off his delivery until the sixth, when a couple of hits and a hit batsman coupled with an error and an infield out netted the visitors four which seemingly demoralized the Foxboro outfit as in the seventh they booted the ball for a couple of errors, which with some good baseball on the part of the infielders and six clean hits netted seven more runs for the visitors. All the fairness to Wilking he certainly was responsible for the loss and had he been given better support in the pinches a different story might have been told.

Better Team Won

There's not a doubt but on the play the better team won as they fought back in the face of a lead, that looked big as a mountain, and kept pounding away till they got it. Latta now goes west to town in a big way as the Foxboro team second to none will play a blanket during the latter part of the game, and the Latta fans are extending the victorious Latta nine in their winning of the trophy for 1937, and the Intelligencer joins in offering congratulations for the bitterness of baseball have consolation in the fact they have during the past season, netted fourth on the object for which the league was organized, that of providing clean and interesting recreation for players and communities alike.

SAW IN SILENCE RISK TO CROWN

Bishop of Bradford Explains His Now Famous Words

Quebec, Aug. 24. (CP)—The Bishop of Bradford, Rt. Rev. W. F. Blunt, said in an interview today he was the author of the phrase that brought the British constitutional crisis into the open "because of the danger silence was to the Crown and the Empire."

The bishop's address was written months prior to delivery in Dec. 7 and originally had another meaning. He explained, but was later altered to refer to the abdication.

Silence Broken

The address, which broke the self-imposed silence of the English press, contained the remark: "The Church of England is not God's servant. Some of us with that he showed signs that he was aware of the need.

When he delivered it, the prelate said, he was "not aware of any gossip" about King Edward VIII and given his position, was not the indifference to religious observance which the Edward seemed to show in public."

Not Soul in World Knew

He consulted no one prior to the contents of the address. "Not a soul in the world knew what I was going to speak about."

The Bishop will leave for Halifax tomorrow, accompanied by Mrs. Blunt, and will attend the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada. He would not speak during the tour on the privilege he placed in the empire crisis, said the Bishop, emphasizing he was not "doing a lecture." This was in reference to Rev. Anderson Jardine, rector of Christ Church of the United States after officiating at the marriage of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

Toronto, Aug. 24.—(CP)—The Toronto share market drifted aimlessly today during narrow gains and losses at the close in higher volume than in Monday's session. The volume was swelled to better than a half million shares by price action in a few of the junior golds, notably Jacola, Chibougamau, Harricana and the Sidpath-Kimbell and these all closed unchanged to higher. MARKET COMMENT

As the war in China progresses, the public becomes more accustomed to reading about it in the papers and the result is a lessening of nervousness in many quarters and a consequent improvement in market sentiment. Just prior to the outbreak of hostilities in China we, in large scale, the business men, gave signs of moving ahead in good fashion. And it would not be safe to say, printing of this, trend was shortly resumed.

The public is in a buying mood but needs some encouragement to make investments. Confining attacks a following so quickly as rising prices on issues and being long such a market is looked for. The recession of the past few or few months has placed many stocks in an attractive buying zone both for investors, on a yield basis, and for traders from an appreciation standpoint.

Earnings' estimates of Consolidated Smelters for the current year are in the neighborhood of $7.50 a share, which, exploding the consistent earnings of the past few years the company is the largest zinc and lead producer in the world and the upturn in prices of both these metals is substantial improvement in earnings. The same holds for Canadian zinc in recent years has been the low covered stock but it is now thought possible the United States tariff may be opened for the first application product. Some shipments have already taken place despite the tariff barrier. Here is a good indication, however, that the market across the line will be in near future be opened to Canadian producers of lead. With the price of lead metals, Smelters' main products, declined, higher than they were a year ago.

Consolidated Smelters is one of the greatest mining and metallurgical enterprises in the world and directly or through subsidiaries is engaged in mining, smelting, refining and exploration operations, and is a leading producer of a long list of subsidiary companies. In addition to being a large producer of zinc and lead, the company is Canada's largest producer of silver. It is also an important producer of cadmium, and to a lesser extent of manganese, bismuth and bismuth, as by-products. The company recently put into operation is first sulphur unit. This unit, a part of the Trail, B.C., plant is ready for early operation and ultimate output is expected to reach 25,000 tons a year. A market for this output is said to be assured in the pulp and paper industry at the Pacific Coast.

Consolidated Smelters has paid $1.50 a share so far this year and dividends are being maintained. Looking forward with confidence to a substantially increased earning power, Dec. 7 and continuing for the full year of 1936.

BRAZILIAN TRACTION

The twenty-two thousand shareholders of Brazilian Traction Light, Heat and Power Company who reside in this country are indeed cheered by the monthly statements of earnings which have reached them so far this year. The profits have been impressive. This is what the company has announced—Aggregate net earnings of $12,200,000 have been reported for the first seven months of 1937, which is a good-sized increase over the showing of $10,800,000 during a similar period in 1936. This increase of more than $1,200,000 is at the rate of about 24 per cent. As the net earnings for July were more than $2,000,000 an increase of about $267,000 over the July earnings in 1936, or about 23 per cent, the increase appears to now above the average for the seven months.

General business conditions in Brazil have improved so much that the company is sharing in the general benefit. Then again the conditions surrounding the foreign exchanges are better—thus the showing in Canadian dollars is higher. A brief explanation of the subject is probably required. The average value of the Brazilian milreis in July, 1936, was 5.96 cents, and current quotations are around 6.60 cents or 64 cents for the dollar.

One of the major ways by which the company gets its profits out of Brazil and into a currency which pays dividends here is through a plan under the agreement dated June 1933, between the Bank of Brazil and N. W. Rothschild and Son, providing for the liquidation in sterling of monthly instalments over 40½ years of certain milreis accumulations deposited with the Bank of Brazil by the participants in the sterling exchange pool. Traction is one of the participants, but the amount of its deposits has never been stated. Until the middle of 1939 this source of funds will exist to pay dividends. Every quarter this has been punctually made to date, as it is an important inducement to shareholders. Payments are guaranteed by the Brazilian Government and the conversion used from milreis to sterling by this agreement was 7.5 cents, which is the official rate in force on the date of the signature of the agreement on June 26, 1933. The average value of milreis in 1933 was 7.27 cents, and at a 6 per cent discount factor it would appear that in this matter the company has been getting the better of it by at something better than the official rate of exchange quoted on the free exchange-market.

The Belleville Kiwanis juniors today are the victims of a most unfortunate circumstance. Business Manager Bill Cook and Coach "Twig" Woodley have spent plenty of the coin of the realm, and more time than could be afforded in an effort to stimulate the interest in baseball, that has been seen registered in some years locally, but their efforts and finances apparently been wasted, but only through the medium of unforseen misfortune.

One week ago the Peterboro juniors were declared winners of the Lake Shore League and, as a club instructed by the O.B.A.A. to meet Belleville Kiwanis in the first round of the junior O.B.A.A. play-downs, with the first game at Peterboro, which Belleville won 4 to 5. At the same time the parent body, the O. B. A. A. declared Ned Vitarelli, Peterboro's left fielder, ineligible, as he was 24 hours over the immediately learning this the Cobourg junior club protested to the executive of the Lake Shore League and therein commences all the troubles, that today have given the management of the Belleville Kiwanis juniors in a rather embarrassing position, and not the fault of the situation can be laid at their door.

First and foremost the Cobourg Club knew naught of the age of Vitarelli, as a matter of fact the Peterboro apparently made a costly mistake in making out his birth certificate, as they signed it May 1st, 1937, making him just 24 hours eligible by 24 hours. At any rate only the O.B.A.A. executive is in fact and the parent body declared Vitarelli over age and instructed the Peterboro juniors, as winners of the Lake Shore loop, to meet the Belleville Kiwanis. But here where the Cobourg kids enter into the picture. Immediately upon learning from the bulletin of the parent body Vitarelli was over age, the Cobourg juniors protested to their own league executive, relative to the game which was originated by a team playing an over aged player, Vitarelli, and upon this left the parent body holding the well known bag and now all we have left is the Lake Shore playoff loop meeting being held in Cobourg tonight, for the purpose declaring which team shall represent their league, while in the meantime the Belleville Kiwanis juniors, who are doing much to attempt to revive the interest in baseball locally, holding the well known bag and leaving many an interested fan

Business Manager Bill Cook and Coach Woodley learned that Lake Shore league representative was to be held in Cobourg last evening and in the interest of baseball locally set out for the Summer Town along the shores of Lake Ontario, but execute were informed the meeting had been postponed until tonight, owing to inability of some clubs interested to be present. Still bad under the collar, the local contingent reverted about and struck a bee line to Deloro, where they spent two full hours, and many long distance telephone calls from the home of E. A. Mitchell, His worship of the O.B.A.A. Messrs Cook and Woodley finally commanded a playoff game in Belleville on Wednesday. "We've expended over $50.00 so far trip to Peterboro and adventuring the return game. The fans of Belleville are irritated and we feel, that, owing to the fact the O.B.A.A. declared Vitarelli ineligible, the Cobourg club has no axe to grind, but they knew nothing of his age until the parent body declared him ineligible. Our local fans deserve some consideration", so says the Kiwanis management's objections to Mr. Elliott and also to Billie Snyder, secretary of the O.B.A.A.

Naturally the local baseball executive was trying to straighten themselves, but all they seemed to incur was a lot of expense in travelling and long distance calls. At any rate we hope we have placed the matter clearly before the fans, and the present postponement and lack of junior play-offs is no fault or the Belleville Kiwanis juniors, but purely the fault of either the O.B.A.A. or the Lake Shore Junior loop, and in the meantime the local kids are holding the bag for something like $50.00 and already have one playoff victory over the Junior Petes. Incidentally after the trouble is settled in Cobourg tonight the Belleville juniors have been assured their sporting interests from the bulletin of the parent body Vitarelli was over age, the Cobourg juniors protested to their own league executive, relative to the game which was originated by a team playing an over aged player, Vitarelli, and upon this left the parent body holding the well known bag and now all we have left is the Lake Shore playoff loop meeting being held in Cobourg tonight, for the purpose declaring which team shall represent their league, while in the meantime the Belleville Kiwanis juniors, who are doing much to attempt to revive the interest in baseball locally, holding the well known bag and leaving many an interested fan

WINNIPEG PLANS A REAL COMEBACK

Winnipeg, Aug. 24 (CP)— With the three Western Interprovincial Football Union clubs rebuilding their already powerful grid machines, Winnipeg Blue Bombers' planned carefully and grimly today to recapture the western championship they lost last autumn to Regina Roughriders.

Kings of Canadian football in 1935, Winnepegs were blasted from the pedestal by Dean Griffing's Regina steamroller in the 1936 Western Conference playoffs, Ridout Coach Jack Jones this year and a new challenge appears in a revamped and confidently expectant Calgary team, third member of the Union.

Bombers hope, however, to represent a potential title team when they meet the Calgary Stamps here under floodlights Sept. 9 in the first game of the 12-game conference schedule. They aim, too, to retain the Grey Cup emblem which went to Sarnia Imperials last year when Regina failed to enter the post-season.

Three Replacements

Three former Ridout Blanket stars of the 1936 Pep machine have left the Queen City, however, and seven gridders are expected to more than fill their shoes.

Chief loss to the Winnipegs is the departure of Russ Rebholtz, former captain and forward passing wizard. Other absentees are Pat Somers, high-stepping back; fielder from Minnesota, and Joe Perpich, substitute outside wing.

Recruits are expected from Nebraska tripl-threat: Martin Gainer, dynamite-plunging fullback from University of Ne-ra- Dakota, and Ole Midgaran from Concordia College, Moorhead. Minn., who will replace the retiring veteran, Ross Aitkman, at middle wing.

Coach Bob Fritz and assistant coach Ben Ota believe Midgarten will start at centre, Ota and Bill Cerrill, inside wings, Gainor and big Lou Mogul, middle wings, and Jeff Micklin and Bud Marquart at outside wings.

CORNWALL EVENTS SERIES

Cornwall, Ont. Aug. 24 (CP) — Kingston Dukes' sloppy fielding helped Cornwall Rovers to a 16-7 victory last night in the second game of their first round Eastern Ontario softball playdowns. Cornwall lost the first game and the third and deciding contest will be played in Kingston Aug. 27.

YACK DECISIONS HOOK IN 10 RDS.

Featherweight Title Transferred When Callura Could Not Make Weight

Toronto, Aug. 24— (CP)—Bouncing Baby Yack, handsome little Ukrainian fighter from Toronto officially since he turned professional less than a year ago, hung precariously to his record today but kept looking upward. He plans on reaching the top of the bantamweight heap.

Two judges and the referee awarded the baby a 10- round decision last night over thumping Henry Cook of Indianapolis, who punched Yack cleanly and hard in the first round but failed to land in the dizzy tenth when the Toronto lightweight, certain of victory in the shoulder, made a torrid finish.

It was a close thing and spectators were split on the decision here in Maple Leaf Gardens were Yack's home town fans predominated. They didn't deny, however, that the baby had weathered Cook's storm in the second round.

Slow starting and knocked down in the second round, Cook came along steadily after that setback to pile up points with sharp counter-punching right. His best weapon, did real damage to Yack's face, the baby mainly stormed and was on the attack nearly all the way. Yack weighted 118 pounds, Cook 117.

The Canadian featherweight title was transferred here when the fight was struck. Champion Jackie Callura of Hamilton, weighed in at 123 1-2 pounds, 3 1-2 over the class limit, and his title went by default under Canadian Boxing Federation rules to Davey Paul of Toronto, 124.

PREPARING FOR FIGHT BROWN BOMBER BOXED EIGHT FULL ROUNDS

Pompton Lakes, N.J., Aug. 24 (AP)—With 70 rounds of boxing against a capable group of sparring partners behind him, Joe Louis closed his ring work today in preparation for his defence of the heavyweight championship against Tommy Farr at the Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

There has been no breaking in the boxing routine since the champion walked out for his first round against Pat Stivers, July 31. The pre-arranged schedule called for 80 rounds in training ring and six today will make that total.

Louis has gone through his training routine without an injury and without annoyances or worries. He has had some tough workouts against a rough-and-ready trio of journeymen, Stivers, Tuffy Harston and George Nicholson. His hitting and timing have been properly attuned when he steps into the ring.

Fair Very Irritable

Long Branch, N.J., Aug. 24 (AP) — Those flashes of irascibility usually associated with "peak form" of a boxer mean something. Tommy Farr is right on edge for his bout with Joe Louis Thursday night.

The Welshman has become increasingly irritable for the past few days. Everything seems to annoy him and his entourage individually and collectively, his bean a target for repeated outbursts. All this is pleasing to his manager, Ted Broadribb, with whom Tommy is hardly on speaking terms.

"Tommy's getting right on edge," Broadribb grins. "That's a good sign. When he begins to abuse even his closest friends, it means he's close to the peak of his form. He won't be very pleasant company for us but we've got to take it. When he acts up this way, that's good news to us."

WINNIPEG PLANS A REAL COMEBACK

Winnipeg, Aug. 24 (CP)— With the three Western Interprovincial Football Union clubs rebuilding their already powerful grid machines, Winnipeg Blue Bombers' planned carefully and grimly today to recapture the western championship they lost last autumn to Regina Roughriders.

Kings of Canadian football in 1935, Winnepegs were blasted from the pedestal by Dean Griffing's Regina steamroller in the 1936 Western Conference playoffs, Ridout Coach Jack Jones this year and a new challenge appears in a revamped and confidently expectant Calgary team, third member of the Union.

Bombers hope, however, to represent a potential title team when they meet the Calgary Stamps here under floodlights Sept. 9 in the first game of the 12-game conference schedule. They aim, too, to retain the Grey Cup emblem which went to Sarnia Imperials last year when Regina failed to enter the post-season.

Three Replacements

Three former Ridout Blanket stars of the 1936 Pep machine have left the Queen City, however, and seven gridders are expected to more than fill their shoes.

Chief loss to the Winnipegs is the departure of Russ Rebholtz, former captain and forward passing wizard. Other absentees are Pat Somers, high-stepping back; fielder from Minnesota, and Joe Perpich, substitute outside wing.

Recruits are expected from Nebraska tripl-threat: Martin Gainer, dynamite-plunging fullback from University of Ne-ra- Dakota, and Ole Midgaran from Concordia College, Moorhead. Minn., who will replace the retiring veteran, Ross Aitkman, at middle wing.

Coach Bob Fritz and assistant coach Ben Ota believe Midgarten will start at centre, Ota and Bill Cerrill, inside wings, Gainor and big Lou Mogul, middle wings, and Jeff Micklin and Bud Marquart at outside wings.

FIGHTS LAST NIHT

Toronto: Baby Yack, 118, Toronto, outpointed Sammy Luftspring, 119, Philadelphia (10).

Philadelphia: Tuffy Montanez, technically knocked out Lew Massey, 137 1-2, Philadelphia, 1.59 of third round.

NEWARK BEARS FLAG WINNERS

One of The Great Minor League Teams of Baseball History

(By The Associated Press)

Gentlemen we give you the Newark Bears, International League champions for 1937 and by any standards last made across one of the great minor league teams of baseball history.

The Bears backed comfortably into the pennant last night when the second-place Montreal Royals split a double header with the Baltimore Orioles. Perhaps the news they were in was too much for them to stand for the Bears staggered through nine innings to lose to the Buffalo Bisons by 9 to 7 and make six errors.

At any rate the Bears are in today with a 25 game lead.

The pennant is Newark's fifth. The Bears first won in 1913. They didn't win again until 1932, but they kept it up in 1933 and '35.

Royals after beating the flock 5-2 in the opener behind Crip Polla's four hit pitching fell before Bill Lohrman's relief hurling and a three run homer by George (Pooch) Puccinelli in the first inning. 6-4.

Toronto Maple Leafs nosed out the Jersey City Giants in the ninth 5-4, and Rochester nipped Syracuse, 2-1.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 24 (AP)—Look for the fur to fly when the Giants and Cubs hook up at the Polo Grounds today..... The smallest turnout of visiting scribes at an important heavyweight bout since Braddock beat Baer will see Louis and Farr..... The dolls are aged because Jim Londos is back in United States..... Looks like the weather man isn't going to give Mike Jacobs much of a break Thursday night.

Our number one pitcher in baseball is Carl Hubbell, with Dizzy Dean second..... As the date of the night nears, it looks more and more like a $250,000 gross for Louis and Farr. Among the ex-champs at the ringside will be Jack Dempsey, James J. Braddock, Jack Sharkey and Max Baer..... Bet you Braddock rates at many cheers as Dempsey when they are introduced from the ringside..... The Giant front office is getting burned good and tired of denying that new Terry contract report and may make it official any hour now.

Chicago Cubs Open Series In New York with Giants That May Break Either Team

Giants Have Advantage of Playing Eleven Games at Home

CARDS ARE TOUGH

St. Louis in Fighting Mood Follow Cubs Into New York

(By Bill Boni)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Giants may have their backs to the wall, but at least it's their own wall.

And that's something even though New York's stand-sitting candidates for a five-cent World Series aren't the ironclad outfielders in their home polo grounds that the sure-fire Yankees are in their ball yard just across the Harlem River.

The Giants have lost more than twice as many home games—22 to 10—as has the Ruppert riot squad. Even so their record there is better than on the road.

The shoot targets in right and left field, familiar to Mel Ott and Co., may stand the Terrymen in good stead as, today, they face an 11-game stand against the Web, that started with a brief but potentially decisive two-game set-to with the Cubs.

Charley Grimm's Bruins go into the opening game, against swell-ticket Carl Hubbell, still holding that four-game lead with which they left Chicago a week ago. A strong finish against the Reds after a poor start against the Pirates kept their margin safe, with additional help from the weather man, who chipped in with buckets full of rain, that washed the Giants out of double-headers with the Phillies two days in a row.

The good news that Skipper Collins might be back in another two weeks smarted a bit, at all events, as they came to town. The Giants, on the other hand, had three of their front-line performers on the doubtful list—Rowdy Dick Bartell, their pepper-pot shortstop, Slick Castleman, who has to pitch in a harness if at all and Sam Leslie, the slugging first baseman.

The Yanks, swinging into the West for the last time and stacking up against the White Sox, are in much better shape to sew up once and for all that American League bunting the boys have been draping around their necks since way back when.

TERRIERS ALL THE WAY

Brantford, Ont. Aug. 24 (CP)—Orillia Terriers, Canadian senior champions, defeated Brantford Native Sons 11-10 in their last scheduled senior Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association game here last night. The wide-open game before a crowd of 1,200 saw the Terriers out in front all the way.

Locke, a junior playing in senior company, tended goal well but Brantford was weak on defence and Orillia had little difficulty penetrating to the crease.

Tricky Wandy McMahon of Orillia was the scoring star of the night with five goals.

4 BIG Days and Nights!

Quite Contrary Mary

By JANE OSBORN

McClure Newspaper Syndicate WNU Service.

"Then there's Mary."

"Oh, Mary's a dear. I don't in his heart mind being a stepmother."

Mr. Barrow was talking things over with his fiancee the afternoon after their engagement was announced.

He hadn't even dared mention his motherless daughter during the courtship but now they were engaged and all the world knew it, he dared bring up the subject which, in his opinion, had been the great obstacle in his thought of remarriage.

"But you're not old enough to be a mother to Mary," he said. "Don't feel old enough to be her father, myself."

"I'm thirty," announced Grace.

"And Mary's only twenty. I'm old enough to be a helpful big sister, anyway."

"But Mary's so contrary, she didn't even want me to become engaged to you at first, though she likes you. I am sure. It wasn't jealousy, either, just plain contrariness."

"You are a perfect dear," Grace told Tom Burton, "but you are a poor psychologist. The only way to manage contrary people is to make them think you don't want them to do what you do want them to do and to make them think you have set your mind on having them do just what you don't want them to do. You have no idea how easy that is."

"Well, you try it," said Tom. "I'm not much of an actor—and speaking of actors, there's that Peter Pelham. He's been mixed up with Mary when she was a kid and he was in college. Had no objections then, but now he's gone on the stage—there's nothing doing."

"Peter's alright," said Grace.

"You wouldn't want to be a step-mother-in-law to an actor, would you?" asked Tom. "Besides, there's Walter Gray. Fine fellow, wants to marry Mary—and by gravy, he's going to marry her."

"Alright, Tom dear," said Grace. "Just trust me—I'm a wonderful psychologist."

Tom and Grace were married a few months later and within a few weeks more life at the Burtons' went on as smoothly as if Grace had been Tom's wife and Mary's stepmother for years.

One day she was talking over the ten things with Mary in a confidential mood.

"Everything alright with you?" asked Grace. "You seem rather down."

"Well, there's father," said Mary. "Father's so contrary. As soon as he thinks you want to do a thing he's dead against it. Take Peter. Father liked Peter at first. But then when he found I really liked Peter and wanted to marry him he turned against him."

"You just don't know how to manage him," said Grace smiling. "You see I am a great psychologist. With people like that you have to do a little acting. Pretend you don't want to do something and they will be keen to have you do it. Pretend you want to do a thing and they will be dead against it. Just you let it appear that you're tired of Peter. Fix it up with Peter of course, so that he'll understand. Have him telephone some time when your father is here and make it seem that he has asked you to go somewhere and you refuse. Tell him you have a date with Waller. Make your father think you like Waller, without actually leading on, oh, no one making poor Waller suffer."

So it was agreed and there were frequent conferences, first between Tom and Grace and Mary over the telephone and then were working out. Then Mary again seemed preoccupied. But Grace asked for no explanation.

One evening the telephone rang and Grace and Tom listened as Mary answered.

"I told you Peter, that I don't want to go. I don't want to. I tell you no. Well, if you want to know why, it is because I am going somewhere with Walter and if you want to know why I am going with Walter, it's because I don't like the way you behave. You know what I mean as well as I do. Good-night."

This was in truth good acting, thought Grace, and felt almost sorry for Tom as he smiled over what he considered an honest change of heart on Mary's part. But he suppressed the smile when Mary, looking very angry, came to take her place beside the fire. Mary looked the proverbial daggers for several minutes but when the doorbell rang ten minutes later she flew with all speed to the hall. Tom and Grace heard a long, low conversation in the front hall. There were long-drawn-out pauses.

"Sounds as if some one is kissing some one," said Tom and then Mary appeared at the door leading to Walter, looking amazingly fine from the brisk air outside and an unwonted gleam in her eye.

"Got to tell you," said Mary, "Walter is too kind. We're engaged."

Grace, feeling much confused, merely sat and looked at them, while Tom, quite prepared, went over to kiss his daughter and welcome Walter.

"I've known it for some time," said Tom. "Mary didn't know I knew but overheard conversations that led me to suspect. I mayn't be much of a psychologist but I'm not blind or deaf."

Grace had regained enough composure to rise and greet her son-in-law to be, and as she did so Tom winked at her and while he paused in her ear, "Some psychologist, dear."

Will Call Conference If Returned to Power

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)—An unemployment insurance program will be part of his election platform, Premier Hepburn announced today. If his administration is returned to power, he said, he will immediately call a conference with other provinces to devise uniform unemployment schemes.

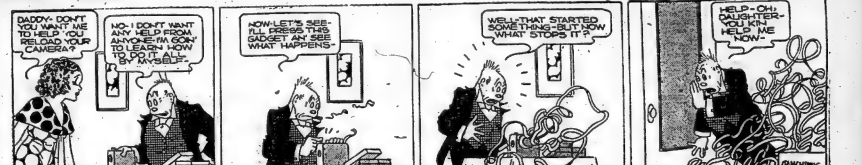
If such a conference fails to produce results Ontario will embark on a scheme of its own, the Premier continued. "We have already made a study of the situation but our action was delayed pending the decision of the privy council with regard to the Schenck legislation.

"Now since the federal legislation has been ruled to be ultra vires it is up to the provinces to act," said Mr. Hepburn.

Cooperation of all provinces would be essential or indigent relief cases would flock to the provinces in which an unemployment insurance was in effect, he said.

REMANDED ON CHARGE

Toronto, Aug. 23—(CP)— Gordon McMichael of Toronto was remanded until Sept. 8 when he appeared in county court here today on a charge of criminal negligence arising from the death of Jack Lee, killed in an automobile accident near Scarborough Bluffs during the week-end in which three others were injured. Bail was set at $2,000.



Genoa, Italy, Aug. 23—(AP)—Two sailors and a trainman were killed and 40 sailors injured today in a head-on collision of an excursion train and a freight train at Vigo Morasso Curve.

Officials, asserting the freight train was running off schedule, began an exhaustive inquiry. Railroad employees expressed fear the accident was the result of Anti-Fascist sabotage.

TARZAN THE MAGNIFICENT (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Presently the party came to a somber, two-storied building. There they were joined by a guard of fierce Zulli Amazons and ushered into a large room, hung with weapons, hideous carvings—and the mummified heads of Woora's enemies, chiefly warriors of Kaji.

Tarzan's eyes took in the horrible decorations with a sweeping glance, then turned toward the far end of the room where a lone figure sat on a huge throne chair—a hideously repulsive figure with eyes that smouldered and burned as twin pits of hell.

The Jungle Lord knew that he was in the presence of Woora. The old man stretched out the bony figure of his right hand and raised them on a mammoth emerald that sparkled on a table before him. Then Woora fixed his blazing eyes confidently on the prisoner.

Calmly Tarzan glared back. Woora frowned in concentration, seeking to bring the stranger under the influence of that terror which the sinister magician always implied in everyone. But when he failed, he was seized with murderous hatred of the captive.

Tweed Conservatives Organize For Forthcoming Election

Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P., Refers to By-election Fight

ISSUES OF TODAY

Tweed, Aug. 24—Tweed Liberal-Conservative Association, held its organization meeting of the auditorium with Mrs. Arthur Vanloughnet of Toronto, as the principal speaker. Mrs. Vanloughnet is the first president of the first ladies' Conservative organization in the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. W. E. Thurston, Kr-M.P.P. acted as chairman of the meeting. He said that "we are undoubtedly faced with a general election within the next sixty days. Contrary to the expressed wish of Premier Hepburn the issue of East Hastings by-election, especially the school tax question are not dead by any means. It is very much alive. True the Separate School tax has been taken off, repealed but you may depend upon it, something else will be substituted for it."

Rev. Mr. Beare of Hastie, expressed the opinion that the O.I.C. business is being made much of by the Premier as a smoke screen to cause the school question to be forgotten.

Member Speaks.

Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P. for East Hastings expressed the hope that he might meet the support of the ladies in the coming election. He said that it was his effort to perfect organization on which success depended. Dr. Welsh criticized the Premier Hepburn for putting the country to the expense of a general election when he can retain office for almost two years and does not need to ask the people for a mandate to carry on.

Dr. Welsh said the primary question in the East Hastings by-election, Dr. Welsh said that the people in the riding will realize the fallacy of their verdict last fall.

"We had on the statute books a piece of vicious legislation which threatened to undermine the public school system of the province. The vote of the people of East Hastings brought about its repeal. Every Liberal member of the House voted for the passing of the Act, and a year later everyone of them voted for its repeal. I would like to ask the Premier, continued Dr. Welsh "what price he paid or will have to pay for the repeal of the Act?" He will have to answer that question before the election is over.

Dr. Welsh touched on the liquor legislation, mental hospitals and other problems where reform he declared, is needed.

Mrs. Vanloughnet's Speech.

Mrs. Vanloughnet spoke of the keen interest which the East Hastings by-election aroused in Toronto. At the door of the Hepburn administration she said the stirring up of religious strife, was in industry and ineffectual and inefficient handling of the affairs of the province. She accused the Premier of being afraid of the elements of dictatorship, and with lowering the public morale of the high office which he holds and with lowering the credit of the province in the eyes of the British Empire by the repudiation of its debts.

Forest fire protective services had been seriously curtailed with resultant severe losses by fire, Farmers' loans had been cut off military training services to farmers had been greatly cut. The Separate School problems had been handled by the Premier in a way that showed woeful lack of vision.

Others who spoke briefly were Mrs. Nayler, President of the Ladies' Association of Belleville, Mr. Harry Rollins, Belleville, president of the Men's Association. Mr. Merritt Filer, Actinolite and Mr. George Stokes, Conservative organizer for West Hastings.

My sister Gladdis came over for lunch today on account of having a engagement to do downtown shopping with ma, and we had the last of yesidday's chockilit layer cake for dissert and finely there was only one slice left, me saying, Who's going to eat the slice of cake, do you want it, Gladdis?

Well I wasn't going to eat it for my figure's sake, but now I'd sure way to the temtation just to teach you not to be so greedy, Gladdis said, You know you've had 2 slices already and nobody eils had more than one, she said.

Meaning her and me, and she took it and I said, Are you sure you glad of my old excuse to eat it.

Benny, is that any way to talk to your sister? ma said, and I said, O well, maybe I'm lucky, maybe that last slice is just the slice that has all the indigestion germs in it, Who's knows they had to go some where and that was the last hunk for them to hide in.

Now mother thats awful, you know how easily my appetite is effected, Gladdis said, and I said, Now Benny I've told you before thak I dont want my nicely sliced cake alluded to as hunks, and besides that you'll apologize to Gladdis right away for giving vent to such an idea.

Well holey smokes, ma, I didn't say it was axually full of indigestion germs, I said maybe it might be, I said, and ma said, I'm waiting for the apology.

So I said, I'm sorry Gladdis said, and I said, O, all rite, I hope it's not full of indigestion germs and I hope the very thought of the idea dont give you a fearse stummick ake.

Mother, I simply cannot eat this slice of cake, Gladdis said.

Sounding like good news till ma took it and nicreased her own figure with it to settle the argument.

SANTANDAR SURRENDERS TO GENERAL FRANCO

Entire Army of 15,000 To Lay Down Arms, Uprising Heralds Fall

Mobs Fight in Streets Against Few Defenders Left

ENTRY INTO CITY

Complete Collapse of Morale of Defenders Was Foreshadowed

With the Insurgent forces outside Santander, Spain, Aug. 25 (CP-Havas)—The garrison and the capital of Santander today surrendered to General Franco's northern forces.

Insurgent commanders said that the entire government army, estimated at 15,000 men, would lay down their arms late today.

Basque authorities of the strategic seaport announced at 1:30 p.m. that the city had yielded to its besiegers.

Fighting While City

Before the city's fall, a revolt of Nightist partisans in the hunger-stricken capital was reported by Fascist forces.

Demanding that Leftist troops surrender the city, mobs fought in the streets against the few remaining defenders, these reports said.

Assault planes bombed civilians in the uprising against the authorities, according to Nightist claims.

Entry Expected

The Fascist command, announcing its vanguard was less than four miles from the capital, added troops might enter the city tonight. Earlier Nightist leaders had expected to enter about mid-day tomorrow.

A complete collapse of the defenders' morale had been foreshadowed in the flight of militiamen and even officers in small boats to the French ports in the last 48 hours.

Besides to the (Franco-Spanish frontier), Aug. 25 (CP-Havas) — A party of sailors from the British destroyer Keith who went ashore this morning at Cabonnayor, at the mouth of the Bidassoa river, to see about the evacuation of British subjects and political refugees, have not been heard from for several hours, according to a wireless report from the ship received here tonight.

Agriculture Course For Farmers' Sons

Toronto, Aug. 25 (CP)—A two-year agriculture course designed for farmers' sons will be inaugurated in the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph Sept. 20. The course has been announced by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, and Dr. G. I. Christie, O.A.C. President.

Mr. Marshall said he was particularly anxious for the course as the number of two-year students at the institution "in order to encourage farm boys who find it difficult to pay their course fees we have this year reduced the board for two-year students from $5.50 to $2.50 a week."

There will be no tuition fees for the new course, Mr. Marshall declared. Only boys who intend to make farming their life work will be accepted.

Why the Weather?

By Major A. E. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Temperature in space! One often hears that the temperature of space between here and the stars is absolute zero, that is, there is no heat there at all. Since heat is a vibration of molecules, it is difficult to speak and to think of the temperature in absolutely empty space. But what is really meant is: "What would be the temperature of a body if located out in space? The temperature of any body is determined by the balance of what heat it receives and what it radiates. It is 80 degrees below zero Fahrenheit about 13 miles above the surface of the earth, as determined by sounding balloons. It has been suggested that a body in space would have about that temperature, but that is only a conjecture.

SIT-DOWN STRIKES COMMUNISTIC IS GREEN'S OPINION

A. F. And L. Head Takes Exception to Martin's Statement

MUCH OPPOSED

Atlantic City, N.J., Aug. 25. — (AP)— Homer Martin's statement that the sit-down strike would remain "an effective weapon" for the United Automobile Workers drew a cry of "communism" today from William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Martin, President of the United Automobile Workers, a Committee for Industrial Organization union, responded in his union's convention today that "the stay-in (sit-down) strike will remain an effective weapon against employers who refuse to recognize moral and legal rights of workers to collective bargaining."

"In my opinion," he added, "it will remain Labor's most effective weapon against the autocracy of industry."

Green's comment:

"This statement made by Mr. Martin upholding the sit-down strike will, in my opinion, make it very difficult for the automobile workers to function as a collective bargaining agency.

Creed and Dishonest

"The leaders of an organization at least owe it to ham the courage and honesty to tell their members the truth. It is both cruel and dishonest to appeal to the passions and sentiments of men.

"I consider Mr. Martin's statement as evidence of the Communist influence in the United Automobile Workers."

The first of a press conference following today's A.F. of L. Executive Council session, also alleged a "Communist invasion" and declared a large number of known Communists were on the C.I.O. pay-roll in both, the automobile and steel industries.

100 Bottles Cross Atlantic In Seven Months to Year

Corked Bottles Dumped Near Newfoundland Show Ocean Currents

CARDS IN BOTTLES

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

New York, Aug. 25 (AP)—Bits, last of ocean currents, in which seventeen bottles ranging from castor oil to champagne were cast adrift in the Atlantic in seven months to one year, was disclosed today at the American Museum of Natural History.

One hundred corked bottles were dumped overboard on July 26, 1936, by a Museum Bird Expedition, 35 miles off the north Newfoundland coast. The idea was to test direction and speed of the ocean currents, E. Thomas Gilliard, staff assistant at the museum, and Samuel Knox Conyne of Baltimore, made the experiment. Results will be published in September Natural History, the museum's magazine.

First Bottle Reaches Ireland.

The first bottle showed up on the west coast of Ireland last Feb. 14. The shrine distance from Newfoundland was about 1,800 miles, but the bottle drifted a longer course.

England and France got bottles in August. July two of them broke into Spain's revolution sufficiently to attract attention of fighting men. Each bottle contained a card to be filled out with position and date of finding. Many of the finders were men of military marine, mailed a card from a bottle picked up near Le Havre.

"Viva Espana. Second year of the triumph," he wrote.

Picked Up in Spain.

The other bottle in Spanish waters was picked up by Frank Lowell, Chief Petty Officer of the British sloop Kingcombe, while sailing in the Bay of Biscay.

Ireland got all told. On July 26 a bottle hit the Scilly Islands "on the nose". These are the first land sighted by liners crossing the the English Channel. Two bottles landed near Cornwall, England.

Course of Bottles.

The course followed by the bottles Gilliard said, was toward Europe at first, but south with the cold current from Labrador, then Labrador. This carried them to the "Eastward Drift", which is the name given the Gulf Stream after it veers from the North American coast toward Europe.

"This drift is fan-shaped by the time it reaches England. Some of it courses northward towards Iceland. Other portions curve southward past France and Portugal.

COOLER WEATHER AIDS PRECAUTIONS AGAINST EPIDEMIC

22 New Cases Reported in Toronto Bringing Total to 156

METHOD QUESTIONED

Hamilton Schools Will Open as Usual on September 1st

(By The Canadian Press)

Aided by cooler weather, health officials throughout Ontario hoped today their stringent precautions against further spread of infantile paralysis would prove effective. At Toronto and Toronto-like centres most affected by the outbreak—children were barred from bathing places and meeting of school had been postponed until after Labor Day.

Despite the precautions 22 new cases were reported in Toronto yesterday, raising the total to 156 since June 16 when the scourge began. Seventeen were admitted overnight report, however was less severe with six of the 17 suspected victims released from hospital. Twenty-six positive cases remained under treatment.

Advisability Questioned

Advisability of the precautions as a method of prevention was questioned by Dr. Herbert Bruce Adams Roberts, Medical Officer of Health. He said children are safer at school than when roaming the streets. Hamilton schools will open as scheduled, Sept. 1.

Theatres, playgrounds and other places, where children congregate would have to be banned as well as schools if this measure were to be effective, Dr. Roberts declared. view has also been debated in Toronto where health officials considered extending the ban to these other places.

A Board of Education committee in Toronto expressed the opinion, however, the ban was not to be acted, that High and Secondary School opening would be delayed the same as that of the Public and Separate Schools. Forest Hill Village and Leaside, in Toronto suburban district, followed Toronto's lead in postponing school opening until Sept. 7.

No Shortage of Serums

Dr. Alexander Elliott, Leaside, M.O.H., is under quarantine, his son having contracted the disease. There are four cases there and one suspect.

Health Minister Dr. J. A. Faulkner said at Toronto there was no shortage of serum supply in the Province. Recovered victims were being encouraged to donate blood for serum purposes, receiving about 250 cc. after convalescing. Municipal requisitions for serum were being filled, promptly, he said.

Western Ontario had 31 cases, Brantford last night joining the list of centres with cases on record. Norfolk County had six cases; Waterloo and Elgin four each; Lambton, Perth and Oxford three apiece; Brant and Huron, one each.

Water is Searched For Two of Victims

Drummondville, Que., Aug. 25.—(CP)—Police searched the waters of the St. Francois River today for the bodies of two of four victims of a drowning accident yesterday and planned an inquest into the tragedy which cost the lives of Miss Willis Grenier, 35, Marie-Paul Savoie, 13, Dolorus Laplerre, 11, and Jeanne Savoie, seven. Bodies of Mrs. Grenier and Jeanne Savoie were recovered last night.

None of the four who were bathing near the River Shore was able to swim. Wading in shallow water, the younger Savoie girl dropped into a hole. Her screams brought Mrs. Grenier and the other two children to her side, but all four disappeared in the water.

Veteran Angler Lands Pair in Same Spot

Marmora, Aug. 25 (Special)—Julian Bedore, one of Marmora's veteran fishermen, who has taken so many fish out of Crows River in the past forty years, has had exceptionally good luck this year in his favorite spot. On Tuesday of last week he caught a fifteen pound muskinonge just below the Crows River dam, made the rounds in the same hour, and at the same spot, he landed a fine specimen, which tipped the scales at twenty pounds, and measured forty-six inches in length, with a girth of nineteen inches. Mr. Bedore was using a Star Buffalo spoon and the fish put up quite a fight before Mr. Bedore had the experience in landing these beauties, he had of trouble in securing his prize.

Chinese Thwart Plan to Land Troops Near Shanghai

NEWSPAPERMEN INJURED IN SHANGHAI

At left is Anthony J. Billingham and at right Hallet Abend, both correspondents in Shanghai for the New York Times. They were badly injured when a shell exploded in Nanking Road, between two department stores which were jammed with shoppers. An estimated 400 persons were killed and 1,000 injured as a result of the shelling.

VETERANS SEEK MINIMUM WAGE

Reasonable Standard of Living Only Thing Asked

Timmins, Ont., Aug. 25 (CP)—Enactment of a minimum wage law "sufficient to provide a reasonable standard of living" was urged in a resolution passed last night by the Canadian Command, Canadian Legion, at its 10th annual convention.

The resolution expressed belief that "in some instances employers exploit employees who are pensioners," and asked that an inquiry be made into wages paid ex-service men.

Government relief allowances to veterans were critized in a discussion of the wage resolution submitted by Timmins District branches. Deduction of the amount of pensions from regular relief payments was protested.

Toronto delegates opposed new housing proposals during the Command as they believed the regulations would mean splitting Toronto posts in districts that took in both city and suburban members. The particular clause was referred to a caucus of Toronto members to be discussed after the session.

SPANISH TROOPS BACKED TO WALL

50,000 Cut Off From All Retreat in Santander

Advance

(By Edward J. Neil)

With Insurgents Attacking Santander, August 25.—(AP) — One hundred thousand Insurgent soldiers held Santander in a pincer-like grip today. The city's defenses—50,000 or more Spanish Government troops—were cut off from all retreat, with their front to the Bay of Biscay.

Advance Patrols of General Franco's conquering Legions were within five miles of the Provincial capital.

A column of Navarre Requetes (Carlists) entered Torrelavega during the night and early morning, and closed Barreda, junction point on the only road from Santander toward the last government refuge in Northern Spain, Oviedo Province. Torrelavega lies eleven miles southwest of Santander, and Barreda eleven miles west.

The Insurgent column that started northward eleven days ago at the extreme left flank of Franco's front thus reached the outskirts of Torrelavega late last night.

The "Navarras" found the important manufacturing and Bay-coast mining city defenseless and moved in behind tanks. The capture of Torrelavega virtually ended the campaign, Franco's commanders said.

Five other columns, welded in a semi-circle by ring defeated toward the tottering city from other directions, ready for a final triumphal push through its gates.

Moratorium Signed By Lieutenant Governor

Edmonton, Aug. 25—(CP)—Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen will sign the Debtors' Relief Ordinance Council passed to prevent corporations from collecting debts in the province.

In announcing the moratorium after a three-hour cabinet session yesterday, Premier Aberhart stiffheld details pending signing of the Ordinance. The Premier said the moratorium was forced by "Ottawa's drastic action on behalf of the Bank of Canada and the chartered banks."

Bankers' licensing legislation passed early this month at a special Alberta Legislative session was also allowed by the Federal Government.

Calculated to prevent collection of money for transfer outside the province, the moratorium will be effective until March 1 and Mr. Aberhart said that all that extracted from that date until financial problems have been "clarified" to make it unnecessary.

FORMER MEMBER DIES

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 25 (CP)—David M. Wright, 63, former member of parliament for North Perth, President of the McLagan Furniture Co. Ltd. died last night at his home here.

Although he had been unwell for more than a year, Mr. Wright had made encouraging progress within the last two or three weeks.

RIGHTS OF WORKER CLEARLY DEFINED BY THE PREMIER

Says Men Can Organize For Collective Bargaining

NO MOLESTATION

Man Who Wants to Work to be Protected by Government

Windsor, Aug. 25 (CP)—The Ontario government does not question the right of men to strike, Premier Hepburn told an outdoor audience here last night.

"I do question the right of men to organize for collective bargaining," he said, "in the face of illegal threats. We don't question the right of men to strike. Similarly no employer is going to close down on a working against their will. And if any man wants to work he is going to go to work and he is not going to be molested."

In the afternoon the premier spoke at Kingsville to the Liberal nomination meeting which saw Charles O. Fletcher, Leamington lawyer, in the South Essex field. Fletcher defeated the present legislature to be selected for renomination.

James H. Clark, Deputy Speaker of the Legislature, was renominated for the Windsor-Sandwich riding at the convention here. He declared himself unalterably committed to the premier's labor policies.

Not One Strike Today.

Mr. Hepburn told his "Windsor audience there would be no strike in Ontario today because of the spirit of conciliation among the workers and employers. Legislation had been put on the statute books by the present government.

The premier restated his hostility to John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization and his organization.

"I don't like any fellow who are for Lewis that I will continue to stand for law and order and if any man want Lewis, don't vote for my candidates because I am going to fight him to the last ditch," said Mr. Hepburn addressing himself to a group of hecklers.

Income taxes and inheritance taxes (succession duties) were the proper subjects for taxation, he said, because of wealth, the premier asserted. That was why his government had increased the provincial income tax and had made a levy for the collection of succession duties. These would probably be prosecutions for evasions of succession duties.

Refers to Croll.

1,019 Seek to Prove Right To Share in $877,500 Estate

Mrs. Ida E. Wood of New York Carried $900,000 in Clothes For Years

BILLS IN PAPER BAG

New York, Aug. 26 (AP) — Five cars ago a lonely, wizened old widow lay in a Brooklyn home and a peppery chant foy carrying fabulous sums in a paper bag died in a hotel here.

Mrs. Ida E. Wood was a symbol for eccentricity to Manhattan's cosmopolitan dining-room habitues.

Today attorneys representing 1,019 men, women and children—most of whom never saw the queer little widow in life—sought in surrogate's courts to establish a right to share in the $877,500 estate,' left when she died March 12, 1932, at the age of 84.

The task of sifting the rival claims moved slowly and tediously. Seventy-five were eliminated yesterday, but claimants remained from almost every state in the Union, 42d Canada, Newfoundland, Ireland, England and Scotland.

Graveyard Records Searched.

Musty records from graveyards, churches and genealogical libraries, brought into court by contesting lawyers, unsealed the strange story of a woman who renounced a life of brilliance to lead a solitary existence.

After the death of her husband in 1900 the middle-aged widow forsook social life to carry on her husband's business interests. With the exception of a Hetty Green, Wall Street's most prominent women financier, she added steadily to her fortune by astute stock speculations.

Distrust of Banks.

Then came the panic of 1907, when banks closed their doors. Mrs. Wood sold her holdings in time to avoid loss, but the experience left her badly frightened and profoundly distrustful of all banks.

In 1911 it was found she had not stirred for two years from her hotel suite and had lived exclusively for forty trunks, crammed with family relics, jewels, clothing and other personal effects.

Then a secret search began for the hundreds of dollars.

A court declared her incompetent in 1921, a nephew, Otis F. Wood, appointed to care for her, disclosed the frail widow—she weighed only 70 pounds—for years had carried hidden in her dress paper bags containing $900,000 in $1,000 bills.

Friends said she told them of making a trip through Africa with $700,000 in a paper bag tied night and day to her wrist.

Japanese Lured in Trap Sacrificing Many Troops To Land Reinforcements

Massed Effort Hopelessly Fails in Face of Defence

Japanese Warships Blockade Coast Line For 800 Miles

By MORRIS J. HARRIS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Shanghai, Aug. 26 (AP) — The lives of hundreds of Japanese soldiers were sacrificed today in a mass effort to land desperately needed reinforcements at Shanghai.

The city's wily defenders took heavy toll of Japanese landing parties, thwarting a Japanese plan to land 15,000 troops in the morning and storm Shanghai's defence from the rear.

An estimated 43,000 Japanese still were on their ships and the ranks of none that reached shore were riddled.

The Chinese allowed the new Japanese troops to rush what seemed to be their objective, then exploded hidden mines and virtually wiped out the invaders with sheets of fire from secret machine gun nests.

Both sides admitted that casualties in the Woosung sector were heavy.

Chinese Withdrawing.

One late report tonight, unconfirmed, said the Chinese finally were withdrawing inland.

Foreign residents of the heart of Shanghai were surrounded by the devastation of thirteen days of fighting — $125,000,000 worth of realty, property and at least 100,000 dead and wounded.

Chinese asserted two Japanese warships were sunk off Tsungming Island today in the Yangtze River, Shanghai's waterway to the sea; that 200 of a Japanese landing party drowned at one point alone.

Inhabitants in Turmoil.

A Japanese army threat to attack Shanghai's Nanjao area, in the Chinese city south of the International Settlement, threw Mantago's 300,000 inhabitants into turmoil.

Thousands struggled past blazing areas, set aflame by Japanese incendiary bombs, and swarmed into the French Concession. The terrified natives found their way barred because the concession already is choked with Chinese refugees.

Japanese warships shelled Chinese resistance in Industrial Pootung, across the Whangpoo River, and fires raged in three sections of Shanghai, North, East and South of the International Settlement. They were believed to have

CHILDISH PRANK PROVES COSTLY

A childish prank on the part of his seven-year-old son proved costly to W. Graham of Parkhurst Lindsay yesterday. After being informed by his son that he had set fire to a straw stack situated near the barn, Graham rushed to extinguish the building a mass of flames. Such headway had been made that the entire stack of about 15 tons of the building was impossible. The barn with a large portion of the season's crop and numerous farm implements was totally destroyed.

HEAVY HAULAGE LOADS OF GRAIN

Thousands of loads of grain are being hauled from the fields to the barns of the district this week, after a general suspension of harvesting operations for the past ten days. With cash beginning to appear in the stocks farmers were forced to exercise extra labor to get their grain in the fields. The warm weather of the past few days however has relieved this condition and farmers are now busy hauling in the heavy grain crop to their barns.

WISPY FOG IN LOW AREAS

That Autumn is in the offing was evidenced last night when motorists driving from Prince Edward County and other surrounding districts report low areas in Mr-Jersey areas. Wispy fog hung over marshes and swamps, forming a blanket of cool dampness. A misty film coated windshields and automobiles which dampened and chilled occupants from the fog to the comparative dryness of the higher places.

COE HILL GARAGE ENTERED, ROBBED

Forcing an entrance through a side window, thieves entered the garage of Charles T. Collins, Coe Hill, on Sunday, removing a slot machine and several other articles. Smashing a screen in the window the intruders dropped into the building from the sill inside and the service station. The broken screen was noticed by Constable Landon, employee, when he reported for work at eight o'clock on Sunday morning.

YOUR DRUGGIST SUBJECT OF TALK
Harold Seldon Gives Interesting Talk to Kiwanis Club

"Your druggist is more than a Merchant" was the subject of an interesting address given by Harold Seldon, member of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, to the club members at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday. It has been the plan of the club to have addresses at intervals on the business in which the members are engaged, and Harold delighted with a comprehensive review of drug store as it is now known and is now incorporated into the business life of any community.

President Bidde Logan was in the chair and congratulated the members in winning the attendance shield for the month of July and hoped that the same attendance would continue. Jack McVeigh was congratulated on obtaining perfect attendance at present competition. The meeting of Tuesday was to be given over to the wives of members but unfortunately some of the candidates were unable to be present and this meeting will be held in September.

Mr. Seldon was introduced by Ross Silver, chairman of the program committee, a pleasing duet also has been excellently filled by this Kiwanian, and the speaker stated that the old fashioned drug store did not have the flashy and gaudy fronts and the soda fountain so prevalent today but still the store was an institution patronized by the olden days and still plays an important part in the life of the district today. He told how the druggist in olden times made all of his own drugs, but today the vast majority of it is purchased from the manufacturer and the believed some "had lost the knack of making prescriptions." He told in his interesting talk how the proprietor and the doctor should work hand in hand and of the standards that had to be obtained to qualify as a druggist. He stated, that Canadian standards for qualifications were higher than any country in the world accepting Canadians.

Picked With Care

"Drug apprentices were picked with great care in the olden days," said Mr. Seldon, "as the proprietor of the store depended on apprentices to give a great deal of help and was to be the druggist of tomorrow. The speaker explained the meaning of the initials after the name on prescriptions and told why all prescriptions were written in Latin.

A great deal of confidence is placed in the druggist the speaker told his audience and the store feels they had to be men of experience of high education and intellect. He thought that doctors should allow druggists to fill prescriptions rather than they being filled in the Doctor's office as was the case in the older days of the drug business. Mr. Seldon told of the relief dispensing and stated it was working out satisfactorily to all concerned.

Concluding, Mr. Seldon paid a fine tribute to his fellow druggists of Belleville. "The unity which prevails among the trade here," said Seldon stated, "is the envy of druggists of nearby towns and cities. Although there is brisk competition there are no hard feelings existing here and the smile and friendship which prevails is a source of wonder and admiration to visitors. There are no petty jealousies while a satisfactory arrangement regarding Sunday openings has been in effect. I am proud to belong to such a splendid group of business men."

MOVE TO OUST S. A. LEADER DENIED

LONDON, Aug. 25.—Writing in the "Free Press" this morning, Major the Salvation Army, John Mac-Millan, Chief of Staff denied published reports that ranking officers of the army threatened to depose their leader, General Evangeline C. Booth, if she declined to retire next year.

Commissioner MacMillan, who came from Canada to assume that post earlier this year, declared that during recent weeks "several newspapers have published statements which suggest dissatisfaction exists among the officers of the Salvation Army."

Sees Father for First Time In More Than Thirty Years

Mrs. J. E. Kerr on Way to Speeding by Train to Visit His Daughter at Belleville Pass One Another at Western Ontario Station—Reunion takes place at Belleville—Remarkable Story of Progress in Agricult ure at Nut Mountain, Sask., is Told.

Everyone at some time or other farmers specializing in the raising has experienced what he or she of oats and barley." terms as the greatest thrill of their life, but any varied have been the versions of personal experiences with these thrilling results but should you ask Mrs. J. E. Kerr, of the Bleecker Avenue district, one of life's greatest thrill she will tell you of the totally unexpected meeting with the father she had not seen for over thirty years.

She will tell you of a sudden decision to visit Relative by motor and on train stopping at a station to wait for an eastbound train so as to see a friend. Not only separated father and daughter who had not seen each other for three decades, with neither of them aware of the fact that they were within speaking distance of each other. She will tell you of the sudden flash of joy which caught her in a breath-taking grip when she received word in Smiths announcing the arrival in Belleville of her father. She will tell of the long journey homeward; of how she counted the miles flashing by so alarmingly slow rate of speed. And finally she will tell of the wonderful moment when she stood face to face with her parent after thirty years of separation.

Greatest Thrill of Life

"It was the greatest thrill of my life," Mrs. Kerr told the Ontario Intelligencer this morning." I stood in front of Dad and felt shaky all over. I can't describe my actual feelings because I don't think I had any. However, I would have known dad anywhere. I haven't seen him since I was eleven years old and although naturally he has aged considerably I would have known him."

But the lads hearty old gentleman, Joshua Atyeo, who has passed his eightieth birthday last October and who never required the services of a doctor but once in his life had a different story to tell.

"Sure," he smiled, "I walked in on them. They had written me several times to come and visit them, but had I let them know when I was coming they would have worried themselves as I thought the surprise way was better. Sure, I don't think I would have known them."

Picture of Health at 80

The fine old octogenarian, looking the picture of health, with twinkling eyes gleaming from behind a heavy growth of silvery hair told how he motored from his home at Nut Mountain, Saskatchewan to Belleville by train. Probably a little excited at the prospect of meeting the daughter whom he had not seen for thirty years, Mrs. Kerr boarded the first train for Belleville. Arriving here he took a taxicab and drove to the home of her sister Mrs. Hare a tender reunion took place. Mrs. Hare is a daughter of Joshua Atyeo, Mrs. Kerr in Sarnia, who promptly left for the plains and left immediately for Sarnia.

"It was away back in '29" reminisced Mr. Atyeo, "that I went to British Columbia. It was the boom years and everything was looking ahead in that part of the country. It was wild of course but a fellow who wanted to work had no difficulty in obtaining it. I went to the Okanagan Valley and worked there on a ranch for a period of seventeen months. Later I emigrated to Vancouver Island where I worked in the coal mines for nine months. This however, did not appeal to me, as I was always a lover of the outdoors. So back to the Okanagan I went and worked there for another season."

In West Kootenay

New fields to conquer were looked for by this ambitious Alexander of the west. So a few months later found him heading for the uncleared regions of the West Kootenay district. Four years he stayed there clearing his land and wresting a living from the verdant virgin soil.

Then the call of the east lured him back to the home of his people. Coming to the Niagara Peninsula he acquired an eight acre farm in the Vineland district where he was doing well with his family until 1927.

Horace Greeley's advice to the young men of his day was Mr. Atyeo again followed his star to the land of the Golden West. Acquiring sections of land in the vicinity of Nut Mountain, Saskatchewan, he devoted his time to the raising of wheat.

Settles at Nut Mountain

Then having occasion to visit the district in the vicinity of Nut Mountain, a small village approximately two hundred miles south of Regina, and liking the general opportunity, with its trees and shrubs a vastly different terrain to that of the rolling prairies of his present home he disposed of his holdings and purchased two farms in a short distance from Nut Mountain. Here he has remained ever since. Some years ago he rented his farm lands, purchased a home in the village and has resided there up to the present time.

"It is a wonderful country." Mr. Atyeo said referring to the district in which he lives. "However there is but little wheat grown there, the

Asked what constituted an average crop per acre, Mr. Atyeo replied, "Some years ago I harvested as high as ninety bushels of oats to the acre, twenty bushels is an average yield. We, in our part of the West are away from the drought area. We have always had fairly good crops and the only thing we have had to contend with insofar as the crops are concerned are the summer frosts. Some years ago we had a severe frost in August, and the harvest was ruined to the extent of fifty per cent."

"However, the Nut Mountain district is by no means the worst in Saskatchewan. The village itself is a very neat little one-horse affair with business of oats and barley are shipped from there every year."

Things Booming

"Things are booming out there. Everyone seems to be working and a general return of good times is being felt by all as the slackness in large numbers from the drought-stricken areas of the south of the district."

After disposing of his property near Vineland, Mr. Atyeo spent three and one-half years in England. Arriving there he surprised relatives when he suddenly appeared at their home. He roamed about the old country for all of the Canadian West became too strong. He terrified his wife with a cablegram to him and took the next boat for Canada and his beloved West. Since his last visit to the old country he has not been out of the province.

But even though he is beginning to worry about getting back to his harvesting Mr. Atyeo is thinking seriously of renting his farms and returning to the old land. "I am leaving in a few days as threshing will start shortly after I reach there for that," he said. "While everything would be alright, I like to be on hand to look after all of the details of the harvesting and threshing taken to the mills. However, after many years, the rigorous winters of the West are becoming a little too arduous for me and I am thinking that I did when I was younger and in a few years I will rent my farms and return East to live. I could go out West every spring and see that everything was running alright."

Will Visit C. N. E.

"Another thing," smiled this one old gentleman, "I haven't seen the Canadian National Exhibition for thirty-five years and I am going to it this year. I am sure that I will call and see my son, Charlie, in Sarnia, and then I will make my way return journey. I have another boy, W. E. Atyeo, who is farming in the West, too."

Mr. Atyeo, who is staying with his daughter, Mrs. Kerr, has shown little of the ravages of time. Hard work, he claims, is a splendid recipe for longevity and he has had plenty of that. "I have only considered a doctor but once in my life," he stated. "Hard work has kept me consistently healthy."

Mr. Atyeo, with a full thick greying hair, and lively, agile movements is the picture of health. He says that he is good for a number of years yet and intends to "begin-ning to grow a little."
